DOCT. PEARSON'S

PULMONIC EXPECTORANT,

FOR the cure of Coughs, Colds, Consumption of the Lungs, Influenza, Bronchitis, Asthma, Pain in the Breast, spitting of Blood, Whooping Cough, Croup or Hives, Hoarseness, Difficulty of Breathing, and every other disease of the Lung and the Breast.

This invaluable medicine should be in the possession of every family. In a country where the continual and sudden changes of the atmosphere, from heat to cold, and from cold to heat, render the inhabitants extremely liable to diseases of the Lungs and Breast, it is of the most vital importance that every one should be in possession of a remedy that shall at once effectually and permanently cut short those diseases, and restore the patient to health. The first symptom of cold or influenza should be immediately attacked and reduced by some remedy that has power over the disease. The medicine which has the most complete control over these diseases, and will most speedily restore the health of the patient is

PEARSON'S PULMONIC EXPECTORANT.

The following Card of three respectable phisicians sets forth the virtues of Dr. Pearson's pulmonic Expectorant. 'Having made use of Dr. Pearson's pulmonic Expectorant, we feel it a duty to recommend it as a safe and effectual cure for the various diseases for which it is intended. We are acquainted with many persons who have been cured of Cough, Bronchitis, pain in the breast and side, spitting blood, palpitation of the heart, and incipient consumption, by its use, and many of them after all other means had failed.'

A. Fearson, M. D. U. S Navy; S. K. Leedem, M. D. Champlain Co., Ohio; W. R. Cadwallader, M. D. U. S. Navy.

Dr. Pearson's Carminative Balsam

Is decidedly the most beneficial remedy for the cure of Dysentary, Cholera Morbus and Summer complaint, that is known to man. Parents will find it the best medicine that can be used for young children and infants. And every person who is travelling in the summer months should not be without a bottle of it in their possession; as it is an infalliable remedy against thr change produced in the system by drinking bad water.

We annex the following certificate of Mrs. A. M. Sanford, of New York, in reference to the Carminative Balsam. We might add a long list, but consider this sufficient.

This is to certify that I have used Dr. Pearson's Carminative Balsam, and confidently believe it to be the best medicine that can be used for the various diseases for which it is recommended, and recommend it to the ladies who are travelling in summer months, and to mothers for the fretting and crying of infants for which it is a certain cure.

MRS. A. M. SANFORD,
No. 160 East Broadway N. Y.

The proprietor of the above valuable medicines, as also of Dr. Pearson's Barber's Embrocation for Horses, being himself a Physician and graduate of one of the best medical schools in the U. S. and having had the advantage of years of experience in an extensive practice, is therefore from the practical knowledge which he has acquired, well qualified to prescribe those remedies, and restore the patient to sound health.

Prepared only by S. A. Pearon M. D., and for sale wholesale and retail, at No. 106 North 4th street Philadelphia. Also, by J. W. Swallow, General Agent, No. 123 Fulton-st. N. Y., by whom all orders for the above medicines will be promptly attended to.

For sale in Plainfield by E. Kirkpatrick, and M. F. Cushing, sold also by Druggists and country storekeepers generally throughout the United States Canadas and West Indies.

To the Editors of The Gazette:

Gentlemen: I perceive from an attentive perusal of the Gazette that you generally advocate the interests of the workingmen, and in a recent number it is stated that you consider your own interests identified with their prosperity; will you insert in your independent and valuable paper the following pieces from the Portland (Me) Pleasure Boat, advocating their interests, entitled "Advice to Young Men," and "A Back Bone Lecture," and oblige a workingman. H.

Advice to Young Men.

Young men, keep out of debt. Never suffer your names to enter a Day Book nor to end a promisory note. The whole system of debt and credit is an evil which has done incalculable mischief. It has ruined hundreds and thousands who, had there been no facilities for getting into debt, might have been industrious, prosperous and happy. It is much easier to purchase articles with a 'promise to pay' than it is to fulfill the promise; hence hundreds of inconsiderate young men purchase things on credit which they might have dispensed with, and which they are not able to pay for when the promise expires, and being compelled to break one promise it becomes easier to break another. They feel themselves degraded, the name and character are tarnished, the moral principles are weakened and after contracting a few debts which they are not unable to pay, they become willing to purchase articles on credit for which they have no intention of paying. Thus thousands naturally honest are ruined.

Again, young men are often tempted by the credit system to purchase articles which they do not really need and for which they would not part with cash if they had it and must pay at the time of purchase.

I have known many honest young men to enter this city as apprentices, who in a little time having formed acquaintances with other young men who had been here long enough to adopt the city fashions in dress, discovered that their country clothing was not quite good enough, —the cloth was not fine enough or their garments were not of the latest cut, and so they must run in debt to the tailors for a new suit. Pay day came round, and though they wanted to be punctual, though they would rather pay five times the amount due than lost credit, the cash could not be obtained and their promise must be broken. They felt degraded, lost confidence in their own integrity and at length became willing to contract debts that they had no prospect nor intention of paying, and became miserable, worth less men.

No, young man, never run into debt, shun the credit system as thou wouldst a viper; be willing to wear an old coat till thou canst pay for a new one. No matter if fools do laugh at thee, thou wilt have the satisfaction of knowing that thy garment are thy own, and will escape the torments of being dunned.

I have known a young man to fall over head and ears into love with some female, or with her ribbons and curls, and run himself over head and ears into debt to procure her new dresses, rings, chains; or other ornaments, and even pay her board and support her in idleness when unable to pay for his own honest debts. Now, this is wrong, and my advice is that you keep your expenses within your income, bound your wishes by your real wants, and never put your name to a note nor suffer it to be entered on any man's Day Book. Go without an article till you can pay for it, and shun the debt and and credit system as you would a viper.

I do not believe in capital punishment, yet I believe if any man ever deserved hanging it was he who invited the credit system.

A Back-Bone Lecture.

Politicians and other loafers who filch their living out of the hands of honest industry, often call farmers, mechanics and laborers the back-bone of the nation.—They do this, probably, by way of flattery. They know that if they can tickle the pride or vanity of the workers, they can use them as they please—make just such tools of them as they need, to support them in idleness. But there is more truth in the expression than workers are aware of. They are indeed the back-bone of the nation, and the back-bone of no poor old donkey ever was loaded heavier or more abused in any way than this same back-bone of the nation ever has been, and ever will be, till it has spirit enough to cast its riders. Yes, workers, you are the back-bone of the nation. The politicians, lawyers, merchants, speculators, priests, and other loafers, will not allow you to be anything but back-bone, to carry them and their idle, spendthrift families and baggage through the world on soft cushions. They wont allow you to be the head, nor eye nor ear of the nation—nothing but back-bone; and the worst of all is, you have been taught from infancy to allow these jockies to bridle, whip and spur you as they please; yea, you have even chosen them for riders and paid them for the privilege of being ridden.

Who clears up the wilderness and changes it to fruitful fields? Why, the workers to be sure. And who reaps the profits of their labors? The drones—land-monopolists, speculators and other idlers. Who cultivates the soil? The workers. And who live on the firstlings of the flock, and the first fruits of all they produce? The drones. Who build the mills, cut, manufacture, and get the lumber to market? The workers. And who reap all or nearly all the the profits on both labor and lumber? Why capitalists, land-monopolists, speculators, and those who never put their hands to labor, nor their heads nor hearts to anything but their own selfish interests. Who build all the houses? The workers. And who occupy the best of them? The drones. In short, who perform all the labor, produce all that is produced earn every farthing that is paid for taxes, and support the whole nation? The workers, the back-bone bears the burden. And who possess and enjoy the most and the best of every thing that the workers produce? Why, the drones.—And how do the drones manage to get the best of every thing without labor? By their craft; by keeping the workers in ignorance; by keeping up a false state in society; by supporting a bad system of government; by-robbing men of their right to the soil and forcing them into slavery to capital.

What remedy is there for the workers? Let them dissolve their connection with the drones, put them all out of office, let them work or starve, or beg honestly.—Let the workers manage their own affairs. make and administer their own laws, give all back their right to the soil, and thus relieve them from slavery to capital. Let them remember that they compose the whole body of the nation, and that the drones are, at most nothing but the tail; let them act on this principle, instead of consenting to be only the back-bone to bear all the burdens, and prosperity will attend them.

How Mr. Blinks was taken in and done for.

BY THE OLD 'UN.

Benjamin Blinks was a blooming batchelor of Boston; well-to do in the world, and, as many batchellors are, of irreproachable morals, as all batchelors are supposed to be, living snugly on his income, and having apartments in a fashionable hotel, fitted up in style, and kept with a neatness and precision that showed how particular a person their occupant must be. He basked in his single blessedness, like a butterfly in the sunshine.

Yet there were times when Blinks thought of bestowing on some fair damsel 'his life, his fortune, and his sacred honor.' But the older he grew, the firmer he planted himself on some positive proposition, come what might, he would not marry an old maid. Old maids were so set in their ways—so fussy—so paiticular! Poor old bachelor! was thy charity beginning at home of that domestic sort that never stirs abroad.

But at length it was wispered in certain elegant circles, reported on Washington-st., and intimated at the opera, that Blinks was in love. At length it came out that Blinks was engaged. The lady was named Miss Emma Bloomington, a charming woman, very beautiful, very fashionable, and very accomplished. But rumor in this case, as in many others, outrun truth. Blinks was in love, but not engaged. Still matters were fast tending to this happy consumation. Four German musicians achieved a serenade one moon-light evening in Mount vernon-st.; and another evening a very interesting tete-a tete was was observed by an opposite lady, who, having no lover of her own, was very inquisitive with regard to the sentimental affairs of her neighbors.

The day after this tete-a-tete, Mr. Blinks was shown up into an elegant drawing-room, and paid his devotions to Miss Bloomington. He was a man of business, and aware that modern marriages are not made in heaven, but on 'Change. He spoke of his stocks, his investments, his income; hinted at a prospective carriage, and sighed as he depicted his forlorn condition.

Miss Emma's smiles encouraged him to proceed. But Blinks was not a man to be beguiled by a pair of rosy lips disclosing pearly teeth, though supported by the flying artilery of a pair of eyes as bright and radient as stars.

'Miss Bloomington,' said he, 'I am a plain, blunt man, like Mark Anthony, in Shakspeare's play of Julius Cœsar—vide the oration of that gentleman over the dead body—and I wish to ask you one question.'

Miss Bloomington blushed.

'I am forty years old. A gentlemen at 40 is no older than a lady at twenty-five, I have told you my age—now pray how old are you! I dare not trust your face, and the answer is of vital importance.'

'Really, Mr. Blinks——'

'I know that woman and music should never be dated, but—'

'You are a strange man, Mr. Blinks, but I'm sure I have no objection to answer your question. I am just thirty to-morrow.'

Mr. Blinks turned pale, deadly pale—and muttered the ominous words, 'Old Maid!' But they were lost in the folds of his cravat. He was silent for a minute or two, and then rose.

'Miss Bloomington,' said he, 'I am compelled to wish you a good morning. I merely called to inquire—whether you caught cold in your promenade last evening. I am happy to find you looking so well. Good morning.'

And the gentleman bowed and retired.—Perfidious Blinks!

For a long time he gave up society, and seemed to be low spirited. But he did not take prussic acid, or walk off the end of a wharf, leaving a full confession in his hat, and so in a few weeks was 'as well as cold be expected.' Miss Bloomington shortly afterwards left Boston to reside in the South.

Years rolled on—ten years. Blinks was now a bachelor of fifty, but in admirable preservation.

The very last summer he was at Newport, and so gay and brilliant, that a certain bella gave him the soubriquent of 'Bachelor Butterfly.' But this bella was not the bella of the Ocean House. By no means. The cynosure of all eyes, the reigning star of the ball-room, the Cytherea of the surf, the Di Vernon of riding parties, was a certain lovely widow, Mrs. Caroline Dashwood, of Balimore. By this dark-eyed, spirited and glorious woman Benjamin Blinks was for a second time facinated. He was permitted to be her partner in the waltz, her cavalier on horseback, her companion in the surf. She renewed his youth, his hopes his epissodal longings after matrimony. He proposed—he was happy. With a bride young, beautiful and rich, Blinks was truly a mortal to be envied.

In the mellow honey-moon, the wedded lovers wandered out one evening on the Battery, for they were passing a few days in New York, during their bridal tour. The moonlight was sparkling on the crisp waves, and gilding the myriad sails of the bright bay, the music of an Italian band was rising from the magic ring of Castle Garden, and the cool breeze came through the 'rocky gateway of the Narrows.'

'Blinks dear,' said the lady, as she hung upon her husband's arm, 'I want to ask you a question.'

'A thousand, if you please, my dear.'

'Well, then, were you ever in love before you saw me?'

Blinks caughed, but after a moment's pause he answered boldly, 'I was indeed once.

'And who was the happy lady?'

'One Miss Emma Bloomington—but that was a long time ago—ten years ago.'

'And could she have rejected your suit?'

'O no. I fancy our attachment was reciprocal, but I never proposed.'

'Why didn't you?'

'Because, my love, I had determined never to marry and old maid. And just the nick of time I found out that the lady was thirty. Poor Emma! she is forty now if she lives—quite an old woman.'

A clear musical laugh was the rejoinder to this speech Why, how old do you think I am, Blinks?'

'Twenty-five or twenty eight, perhaps.'

'Forty by this hand,' replied the lady.—And the hand was a fair one.

'Forty!' exclaimed Blinks.

'Yes, love,' continued the lady; 'and I have another confession to make. I was not a widow when you married me.'

'Not a widow! And pray, madam, who in the name of wonder are you?'

'I am Mrs. B. Blinks, the wife of the only man I could ever love—and I was Emma Bloomington, whom you so cruelly deserted ten years ago.'

Mr. Blinks' first impulse was to drop the arm that clung so lovingly to his; the next to press it closer. A loafer who was smoking a cigar on a bench under a locust tree heard something like the popping of a champaigne cork, but the lady's ear alone caught the words:

'Emma, I have been a very foolish bachelor—and I am a very happy man. I forgive your deception, for it has opened my eyes, and given me something to make my life worth living for. I have made a suitable match, and a much better one than I deserve.'

Mr. B. was satisfied—but the story got about, and the spiteful gossip who had witnessed the tete-a-tete in Mount Vernon st., when the happy pair came back to Boston amused herself for an entire week by relating to the whole town how Mr. Blinks was taken in and done for!

☞ A duel was fought betwen a couple of squirts, at Woodville, La., a few days since. One of the fools received a ball in the leg, supposed to have been from his own pistol. The injury received by the other was promptly remedied by his washerwoman.

Lectures to the Young.

We learn incidentally—as it appears that we are so far behind the age that a newspaper is not thought of as a means of informing the public—that there is to be delivered by the pastors of the several churches in our village a course of lectures to the young.

We do hope that these lectures may prove beneficial by exciting in those who are the objects of it, an interest which shall not end with the thoughts which gave it birth, but shall be the germs that shall create a stable character for good which shall endure unto the end.

That it is all important that the character of the young should be formed upon correct moral principles who can doubt? Yet without moral teachings how is this to be done? with the many sources of immoral tendencies, and the corrupt examples everywhere surrounding them, can it be wondered at that our youth are led astray into the paths of vice and wickedness? Even those who profess to have put away evil things, set an example—perhaps unconsciously, it has become so familiar—which has a three-fold influence on the minds of the young, and which all the precepts ever uttered will fail to counteract, and which must affect for evil the minds of thousands of youth who will reenact upon the stage of life the evil examples thus taught them. But this is not all, the pernicious tendencies of a vast amount of the light literature of the day which compose our circulating libraries and are thrust into the hands of the young to the exclusion of works of a more useful and moral character, needs reform. There are many other evils which we might point out, and many plans of remedy we might suggest, but we will not anticipate, our object being solely to excite an interest in this important subject which forms the groundwork whereon our republican institutions must stand or fall. We trust those especially, to whom these lectures are addressed will not fail to attend.

Although this is not the first day of the year, when such courtesies are wont to be made, we nevertheless hope that all our readers, including the universal brotherhood of man will enjoy the year happily, and that if possible, and most assuredly if our wish could accomplish it—that they may before the year 1850 shall expire, raise one universal shout of liberty, being the result of their freedom from the tyranny and oppression of their fellow man.

Reader, much toward such a result depends on you, on the principles you advocate, and the spirit of their advocacy—will you ponder this subject and act in accordance, conscientiously, as the result of such examination shall dictate, to bring about such a result. Never until all do thus act can the down-trodden hope to breathe the Heaven inspiring inspiration of freedom.

For ourselves, we are determined to advocate that which we conceive to be for the best interests of our fellow man, independent of all cliques or parties, and shall continue to express our convictions honestly, on all subjects which go to make or mar his welfare, whether those convictions are in accordance with the preconceived opinions of men or not, but in a spirit of toleration to the opinions of others; our object being accomplished when we can get men to think, for the man who thinks must ultimately think right—the stronghold of oppression being held through those who do not think.

☞ The Cambria brings two weeks later news from Europe. The following is all that is important to the general reader.

The Emperor of Russia still persists in his demands to have the Hungarians and Poles banished from the Ottoman Empire. These demands the Porte resists, and so the matter stands. Both parties are preparing for war. The Pope is still absent from Rome. There is an advance in the price of Cotton and Provisions. American Stocks have also improved.

For the Plainfield Gazette.

One of the most encouraging signs of the times is the spirit of enquiry which actuates the masses. They are no longer controlled by the opinions of their teachers father than those opinions are entitled to assent. The politician and the divine who now expect to command the attention of the multitude must address its judgment. It will not be satisfied longer with honied words, or idle declamation. The day is gone by when men will consent to listen to teachers who, instead of being qualified to instruct others, have great need of learning many of the most simple truths.

The spirit of enquiry is calculated to produce the happiest result. Truth being sought after for itself alone, will be listened to with attention no matter who may be its minister. The "common people," as the great mass of our fellow men are called by those who affect to be their superiors, earnestly desire to understand their relations to their Creator, and the duties they owe to one another. They begin to learn that their time may be more profitably employed than in listening to Sectarian controversies or political wranglings. No matter, therefore, how humble may be the individual who has something interesting to communicate to his fellows, his message will respect and its reccommendations receive that attention to which they are entitled.

One of the greatest blessings of our age is the press. It is true, like other excellent things, it is susceptible of abuse, but that is no reason we should not rejoice on acount of its capacity for good. In the hands of true men the printing press is destinated to do much to advance the best interests of the human family. The light of the coming day, when truth shall be loved for its own sake by all, has become to strong to be hidden by the mists of error; and every movement of the press will cause this light to become more visible to those who are sitting in the region and shadow of death, until everything which is evil and hateful will hasten from its brightness and seek its own dark caverns.

It is a glorious mission to seek to advance the cause of truth. And if we are only alive to our duties and responsibilities, and our hearts are affected by the ignorance and misery around us, we shall be very successful in our attempts to make truth loved for its beauty. When men shall learn to distinguish truth from error, the evils under which they groan will vanish like the early dew, and the reign of truth in all hearts will cause every one to love his neighbor and seek to promote his welfare.

Those who labor to hasten this "good time a-coming" must not be discouraged if their labors are not immediately crowned with success. We should remember that truth is eternal; and when we scatter our seed by the wayside, by the seashore, or on the mountain's top, if we approach our fellow men in the right spirit, they will ponder our words when their minds are in a thoughtful frame, and as sure as God lives will his truth—for all truth is of God—produce its glorious results.

Let us encourage the most humble in their attempts to distinguish truth from error. From the pulpit, the lecture-room and the printing-press let the light spread until the coming of the perfect day.

THE TRENTONIAN.—The prosperity of this journal is forshadowed in its columns; may it equal its merits. Its Editors will please accept our thanks for their courtesy in enabling us to peruse the spicy columns of their daily sheet.

☞ Gentlemen who contemplate making their wives or daughters a present for the new year, should go with other sensible men to the store of Mr. Lucius Hart No. 6. Burling slip, N. Y., and purchase a set of his beautiful Britania Ware. A more appropriate or pleasingly acceptable present, in our estimation, could not be made to a sensible woman, or one that would oftener remind them of the donor.

CONGRESS.—But liitle, as yet, has been or probably will be done by this body, save the election of Speaker, and the appointment of committees, until after the holidays and their effects are over. Some moves have been made in the Senate and also in the House indicating which way the winds blows respecting the admission of California, Deseret &c.,

There may, and according to these indications there will be some difficulties thrown in the way of their admission into the Union by the Senate, which is ultra anti democratic, not being willing to admit or act on any principle which does not recognize that anti republican principle, the right of property in their fellow man.

The principle of the inalienable rights of man are not bounded by the bounds of party, but is an everliving principle, which inspired our fourfathers to throw of the yoke of Great Britian; and which we trust will ever live in the bosoms of their descendants until the principle is acknowlidged to be universal, having no bounds that does not include every living soul created that is stamped with the immage of the everliving God.

That this is not a principle which either of the too great parties have made the test of true democracy—which alone does not stop short of this fundamental principle—is evident from their history—the result as now seen proves the correctness of our position—the one party which composes the Senate scouting this principle as depriving them of their property, while the head of the opposite party claims as his property three hundred human souls!

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31. 1849.

HOUSE.—The States were called on in order for petitions.

A large number of petitions were presented, asking for a reduction of postage; for the romoval of obstructions at Hurlgate; for indemnity for French spoliations; to abolish spirits and flogging in the Navy; for a Railroad to the Pacific, &c.

Mr. STANTON of Ky presented a memorial from Covington, in that State, protesting against a Government for Deseret, and charging treasonable designs against the United States. Referred to Committee on Territories.

Mr. THOMAS of Tennesee, introduced a bill granting the franking privilege to Sarah Polk, wife of the late Ex-President—passed forthwith.

Mr. STANTON, of Tennessee, and others, presented memorials against the employment of Chaplains in the Army and Navy, and Congress. Referred to the Judiciary Committee.

What 1849 has done in Railroad Building.

At the close of the year 1848, there were 1,614 miles of railroad in operation in New York, and on the 1st of December 1849, there were 2'133, showing an increase, in eleven months, of 510 miles. By the first of January 1850, there will be about 150 miles more in operation, which will make the aggregate length 2,-283 miles, and the total increase 669 miles. In the State of New York there has been an increase of about 400 miles. In the Southern and Wester States, a great many miles of railroad have been opened this year, so far as our reccollection at this moment extends the total number of miles of railroad put in operation in the United States, during the year 1849 will not be less than 2,000. At the close of the year 1848, it was estimated that there were 6,120 miles of railroad in the United States; to which add the 2,000 opened this year and the aggregate at the close of 1849, will be 8,120 miles.

Niagara Falls a Mill Stream.

A flourishing mill has been erected at the suspension bridge over Niagara Falls it is placed upon the bank of the river, at a perpendicular elevation of 250 feet above the water which propels it, and is connected therewith by a cast iron shaft 270 feet in length, running at an angle of 45 degrees.—Sci. American.

☞ The New York Sun will guarantee, upon three days notice, to prepare for any Whig or Democratic Executive, without the aid of Cabinet Reports, a Message more acceptible to the American people, than the one delivered to Congress on the 25th of December, 1849.

A HARD HIT.—The Albany Dutchman perpetrates the following hard hit at tobacco chewers:—

'A chemist in New York has just ininvented a substitute for tobacco which will doubtless soon supercede the weed as it is just as nasty and a good deal cheaper.'

AN INDIAN'S WISH.—A Methodist missionary, bragging how well he had instructed some Indians in religion, asked one of them—

"If he had not found great comfort last Sunday, after receiving the sacrement."

"Aye, master," replied the savage, "but I wished it had been brandy!"

THE PRESIDENTS MESSAGE.

Upon a hasty perusal of this document last week, we expressed the opinion that it was non-committal enough to have been written by Martin Van Buren; upon a more careful reading we are confirmed in that opinion, and can only account for its resemblance, by supposing, that the President must have found an old unpublished message of the ex-president's in some corner of the 'White House, which, suiting the peculiar circumstances of his position, he has remodeled for the occasion. The press generally, hold a similar opinion; even his most ardent admirers among the whigs think it but a so-so affair. The following quaint abstract of the Message from the "Trentonian," conveys the opinion of the press generally; it says:—

We shall now proceed to boil down the whole affair divest it of all "gammmon," and serve it up to our readers in a readable form.

After the customary parade of formal thanks to providence, &c. The message opens with a brief and uninteresting statement of our friendly relations with great Britain. A dozen lines is here devoted to the "Poussin affair" with France, and the peaceful termination of that difficulty. Next comes the subject of the detention of the German War Steamer, fitted out in the port of New York to take part in the Denmark and Holstern war, and the president goes into a tolerable lengthy defence of his conduct in ordering the detention of said vessel. It is of no interest to the general reader. Next comes the Rey abduction case, and he reccommends that Congress pass a more special law to meet such criminal cases in the future. A few lines are next devoted to the Hungarian revolt, and the President states that he had an agent in Europe ready to recognize the independence of that Country, as soon as it could be ascertained that Hungary was certain to triumph in the struggle! Next comes something about "claims on Portugal," of no possible importance to any body, save those directly interested. Dragging after this comes about twenty lives on Roman affairs, which are about as dull as the most sophoric individual could desire. Mexico takes the next paragraph and the importance of "friendly relations" with that Republic is very properly dilated upon. The governments of Central America are then formed into line, and reviewed with the usual formula of Presidential messages The President then goes in strongly for the Rail Road across the Isthmus of Panama.

The Message next enters into domestic matters. About twenty lines are first devoted to the Tariff, and this part of the message is very loose and unsatisfactory. The president feels the "delicacy of his position," and refers the whole matter to the "wisdom" of Congress! Just four lines are devoted to the odious sub-treasury, and these four lines are only used to confide the subject to the wisdom of Congress!" Next comes California, and consequently the subject of slavery. Here the "wisdom of Congress" is again indirectly pressed into service, the Chief Magistrate only committing himself so far as to recommend the non-introduction of "exciting topics of a sectional character" into our discussions!

Here ends every thing of special interest to our readers. The message has one merit, that of brevity. It may have many others but the very hasty manner in which we were compelled to run through it, perhaps precluded the possibility of our detecting them.

A SCRUPLOUS WITNESS.—An eminent lawyer was employed in the action against the proprietors of the Rockingham Coach. On the part of the defendant the coachman was called. His examination in chief being ended, he was subjected to the leader's cross examination. Having held up the forefinger of his right hand to the witness, and warned him to give a 'precise answer' to every question put, he proceeded thus:

'You drive the Rockingman coach?'

'No, sir, I do not.'

'Why, man, did you not tell my learned friend so this moment?'

'No, sir, I did not.'

'Now, sir, I put it to you—I put it to you on your oath—do you not drive the Rockingham Coach?'

'No, sir, I drive the horses!'

CUTTING WIRES.—James Anderson, who had been employed by D. Craig agent of the associated press, has been arrested at St. John's, N. B., and held to bail in $5000 for cutting the wires of the magnetic telegraph between St. John and Halifax.

The dress-makers are the best supporters of newspapers,—they pattern-ize every one which falls into their hands.

There is man in West Troy so lazy that he wont even run for an office.

'Come out here and I'll lick the whole of you, as the boy said to the candies in a window.

Cincinnatti contains 120,000 inhabitants.

Shad are now caught daily in the Savannah river.

☞ Truth is the object of philosophy.

Naturalization of Females.

Many women who come from Europe and intend residing permanently in the United States, think, as they cannot expect to vote, there is no use of their becoming naturalized; but this is a very serious mistake. By the law the property escheats to the State, and it is the duty of the attorney general to see that estates which would descend to the wife, if she was a citizen, are taken by the State. Previous to the year 1845, public informers could draw the one-eighth of property informed of thus seized, but by change of the law this is no longer the case. It is now left in the power of persons who are at enmity with a widow thus to inform and have her all taken away. Of course, cases of this kind are few; the widow is usually allowed to enjoy property unmolested, but she cannot make a title to it, and if she attempts to sell, or when she dies and her heirs dispose of her estate, litigation almost certainly ensues, and on examination the State seizes their property in dispute. Cases of this kind are constantly occurring; thousands of dollars are thus lost annually, and all women not naturalized should become so at once.—Tribune.

It is high time that such a law was abolished,—it is neither a just nor a wise law.

There are thousands of foreign bond holders who are content to drain away the interest of their money and expend it abroad, because they will not buy fixed property with the threat of their children loosing it, because they cannot, from some good cause, renounce allegiance to their native lands. We consider that such a law in other countries would be unjust to many American merchants. If such a law existed in England, we never would have received the Smtihson bequest. To apply the naturalization laws to females, is a touch of despotism fit for the Austrian or Russian governments, but not for Republican America.—Scientific American.

☞ The State debt of Indiana is $11,045,000. Every child is thus mortgaged, in that State, for a certain amount, before he is born

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

A curious dialogue, 'tis said,
Took place among the ladies,
Of DRY GOODS AND GROCERIES,
Where the best place to trade is!

Mrs. A. S. and Mrs B.,
Declared they knew where was good T.
Mrs L. and O. wished to know,
If anywhere on Earth they'd go!
For, good T. was hard to get,
They neither had had good as yet.
B. S. and A, that is the Mrs,
Knew also where to get their dresses,
And sugar, ribbons, and molasses,
Carpets, earthenware, looking-glasses,
Muslin, over-shoes, and gloves,
Blankets, salaratus, nutmegs, cloves,
Umberellas, tin pans, and toys,
Beautiful ones for girls or boys;
In fact, everything that's eat, drank or wore,
You'll find it at D. BULLMAN'S Store!

You'll find this just as 'tis said
If 'tis not, then you need not trade;
My thanks for the past to all are due,
While a happy New Year I wish to you.

DANIEL BULLMAN.

UNDERTAKING.

COFFINS AT REDUCED PRICES.

THE subscriber would call the attention of the public to his complete assortment of Coffins, where all the different sizes are finished and ready for use at a moments warning; they are made of Mahogony, Black Walnut and Cherry, and finished in every style, so that all can be suited, also a superior style of stained ones, which he offers remarkably low; he has hitherto deferred giving his prices, but as he has understood that there is some misrepresentation in regard to his prices, he deems this sufficient excuse to the public for to say that for a large size Black Walnut Coffin including hearse in attendance he has $6, Mahogany $14, Cherry $6, and small ones accordingly, tight case made in coffin style $1.75. By leaving the order with him, the sexton of either of the churches will be seen if required, and all necessary arrangements made without any extra expense.

J. W. S. MARTIN, Principal.

HE has given up the idea of Cuba being annexed this fall, consequently he has made up his mind to stay a little longer at his old stand adjoining Webstor & Marsh's store, where he offers a new and splendid assortment of Cabinet Furniture, unequalled in this or any of the neighboring towns for stability or neatness of finish, patterns being all new, and we advise all who wish to be fitted out with such articles as he offers, to make their purchases of him instead of going out of the place, do not forget the minerel and you will get a bargain as sure as the whale swallowed Jonah. INSURANCE.

2,500 MEMBERS!

THE CLINTON MUTUAL INSURANCE CO. AT NEWARK NEW-JERSEY. This company has now completed the fifth quarter of its active operations with unparalled success, having issued 2500 policies into all parts of New-Jersey, as well as beyond its limits, and have sustained losses to the amount of less than $2000 during that period.

This success, though extraordinary, has not surprised the directors of the company as the peculiar system of insurance adopted by them offers advantages and inducements which need only to be understood to command public confidence and patronage.

The company insures both on the mutual and special principle. Policies on the mutual principle are issued for any period not exceeding five years, and are confined to the best classes of risks, and generally to buildings and property in the country not haxardous, nor in blocks or in exposed parts of cities, towns or villages; a precaution which enables the company to insure at unprecedently low prices.

In such cases a premium note is taken and only 33 1-3 cent. on the amount of the note is required to be paid in cash at the time of insurance; no other payment being required except on assessments to pay losses accruing during the continuance of the policy; and the company confidently anticipating that no such assessment will be necessary, as it has been ascertained by experience that the cash payment at the time of insurance will suffice for all probable losses.

Every person insured on the mutual principle becomes thereby a member of the company, and is entitled to vote at the election of its directors, and, after having been insured for five years successively, is allowed at his option, on renewing his policy, to take scrip for the amount of his premium, thus securing a return of his premium in a dividend paying stock.

Policies on the special principle are issued when preferred, on the most reasonable terms, but generally for periods not exceeding one year, and risks termed hazardous will be taken on the special principle, at corresponding rates.

This company addresses itself most strongly to the farmers of the country, as it is among them that it finds and prefers to select its patrons.

The policies issued by this company are of the most liberal and equitable character, and all deceptive and objectionably provisions, calculated to produce litigation and defeat a recovery, too often found in the policies of the other companies, are scrupulous excluded.

The company invites the closest scrutiny into its character and business. It is responsible for the accuracy of all surveys taken by its agents. All differences may be settled by arbitrators, at the option of either party. Every person insured is at liberty to surrender his insurance at any time and take up his premium note. The business of the company is flourishing and prosperous, and persons insured may rely on having all losses settled with promptness and liberality.

☞ All communications should be directed (postpaid) to the secretary. Newark, N. J.

The company beg leave to refer to the following statement of its business:

Amount of property insured	$2,150,000
Number of policies issued	2,500
Amount of premiums theron	$76,500
Losses during the operations of the company	$1,770

IMPORTANT TO HORSEMEN.

DR. PEARSON'S BARBER'S

EMBROCATION

IS decidedly the best preparation that can be used for the cure of sprains, bruises, cuts, galls, splint, curb, ringbone, spavin, stiffness of the joints, &c. It is an article which should be in the hands of every horseman, and no stable should be without a bottle of it. Price only 25 and 50 cents per bottle.

The following is the testimony of Mr Schenck, proprietor of the "Somerset House," Somerville, N. J., a gentleman well known to horsemen in New Jersey.

DR. S. A. PEARSON: Dear Sir—I feel it a duty which I owe to you and the community at large, or rather that part of the community who possess, or in any way have charge of Horses, to say, that I have used your Embrocation,' for horses. It is decidedly the best preparation that I have ever used, or have any knowledge of for the various diseases which it is recommended.

I also know a great number of my friends who have used it—and they all say, that it is the best medicine for horses that they have ever used. I would confidently recommend every person who has a horse should keep a bottle of this valuable Embrocation in his stable.

Yours respectfully, AB'M. C. SCHENCK.

Prepared only by S. A. PEARSON, M. D. and for sale wholesale and retail at No. 106 North 4th street, Philadelphia; also by J. R. Swallow, General agent 123 Fulton-st. New York.

GREAT AMERICAN REMEDY.

Vegetable Dyspepsia Bitters.

TO THE PUBLIC,

DR HUTCHINGS would call the attention of all afflicted with dyspepsia, and the various disorders arising from a diseased stomach, to his remedy therefor. His DYSPEPSIA BITTERS will be found, on trial, to contain every property requisite to restore the disordered stomach to a healthy action; to reproduce the lost appetite of the patient, and do away with the periodical nervous headache and general debility consequent on this afflicting disease. Thousands have tested its efficacy, and thousands more are now under treatment; and not one solitary case of failure has yet been reported to him. This is consolatory, and urges him on in his efforts to relieve poor suffering humanity. He could fill a volume with certificates of those who have been permanently cured; but he conceives the testimony of a few well-known citizens will answer every purpose. The reader will find, on looking over the following testimonials, they are not "got up" for the occasion; but bona fide letters from gentlemen who can be seen at any time at their places of business.

The following Certificate is from M. B. Brady, the Celebrated Daguerreotypist:

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness, I was advised to take Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me. I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia. M. B. BRADY,

No. 205 Broadway, N. Y.

From Luther B. Wyman, Esq., late President of the New York Musical Society, now of Brooklyn.

The undersigned was afflicted with the Dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half during a greater portion of which time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself, until he was recommended to try Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, he very soon derived benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well.

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of Hutchings' Bitters for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine.

L. B. WYMAN, 38 Burling Slip.

New York, Sept. 3. 1849.

Dear Sir—My wife having been a great sufferer from dyspepsia, low spirits, palpitation of the heart, and having been cured as I believe by your Bitters, I most cheerfully attest their efficacy; her case was a bad one. In the space of four months she lost her strength and thirty-five pounds of flesh; was compelled to abandon her household affairs; there seemed but little probability of a cure until she began to take your bitters; in one week she was greatly relieved, and in three weeks she was perfectly well, and has since gained thirty pounds. You are at liberty to use this if it will at all further your laudable purpose of circulating this valuable remedy.

With respect, NATHAN SAYRE, No 61 Fourth-st

Pain Killer!

A medical preparation by the name of the PAIN KILLER, has been put into the market by the Empire Company in new York, which bids fair to cast all other preparations into the shade. It cannot, perhaps, be better described than by stating that it is in a liquid form, and is adapted to internal and external use, holding instantaneous control over all Nervous Affections, Rheumatism, Croup, Inflammations, Tooth and Ear ache, Burns, Bruises, Sprains, Sores, &c. Empire Company, No. 53 Courtland st.

Deaf Persons

Can be made to hear in almost Every case! by proper treatment, but they should remember that the organization of the Ear is the most delicate structure of the body, (except the eye,) and hence is oftener injured than benefitted by syringes. The ACOUSTIC OIL sold by the Empire Company, 53 Courtland-st. is the surest and most successful article ever known for cures.

Chemical Cleansing Fluid.

Manufactured and sold by the Empire Company, is to every person who washes or has washing done, of very great and essentiul service. It obviates more than half the ordinary labor and also the wear to clothes. It sets the color fast to fading calicoes, and answers as well for cambrics muslins, and woolen goods.

Ornamental and Useful.

CHAIN PUMPS.

THE best machine for raising water, in use.—This Pump has many advantages over any other in use on account of its simplicity of construction, being made wholly of wood and galvanized iron, not liable to get out of order or to get deranged in any way. It can never freeze in winter, and can be put in wells of any depth.

It takes less power to work it than any other machine, to raise the same amount of water.

It is never obstructed by gravel or sand; it keeps the water perfectly sweet and fresh; the action of the chain mixes the gasses with the water always keeping it lively and fresh; on ceasing to work it, the water in the tube descends to the level of the water in the well; on commencing to work the pump, the first water that is drawn is from the bottom of the well.

☞ This pump received the premium at the late Essex county fair.

These Pumps may be had at the Pump Factory of S. B. Miller, 340 Broad-street. Newark, N. J.

DOCT. PEARSON'S

PULMONIC EXPECTORANT,

FOR the cure of Coughs, Colds, Consumption of the Lungs, Influenza, Bronchitis, Asthma, Pain in the Breast, spitting of Blood, Whooping Cough, Croup or Hives, Hoarseness, Difficulty of Breathing, and every other disease of the Lung and the Breast.

This invaluable medicine should be in the possession of every family. In a country where the continual and sudden changes of the atmosphere, from heat to cold, and from cold to heat, render the inhabitants extremely liable to diseases of the Lungs and Breast, it is of the most vital importance that every one should be in possession of a remedy that shall at once effectually and permanently cut short those diseases, and restore the patient to health. The first symptom of cold or influenza should be immediately attacked and reduced by some remedy that has power over the disease. The medicine which has the most complete control over these diseases, and will most speedily restore the health of the patient is

PEARSON'S PULMONIC EXPECTORANT.

The following Card of three respectable phisicians sets forth the virtues of Dr. Pearson's pulmonic Expectorant. 'Having made use of Dr. Pearson's pulmonic Expectorant, we feel it a duty to recommend it as a safe and effectual cure for the various diseases for which it is intended. We are acquainted with many persons who have been cured of Cough, Bronchitis, pain in the breast and side, spitting blood, palpitation of the heart, and incipient consumption, by its use, and many of them after all other means had failed.'

A. Fearson, M. D. U. S Navy; S. K. Leedem, M. D. Champlain Co., Ohio; W. R. Cadwallader, M. D. U. S. Navy.

Dr. Pearson's Carminative Balsam

Is decidedly the most beneficial remedy for the cure of Dysentary, Cholera Morbus and Summer complaint, that is known to man. Parents will find it the best medicine that can be used for young children and infants. And every person who is travelling in the summer months should not be without a bottle of it in their possession; as it is an infalliable remedy against thr change produced in lhe system by drinking bad water.

We annex the following certificate of Mrs. A. M. Sanford, of New York, in reference to the Carminative Balsam. We might add a long list, but consider this sufficient.

This is to certify that I have used Dr. Pearson's Carminative Balsam, and confidently believe it to be the best medicine that can be used for the various diseases for which it is recommended, and recommend it to the ladies who are travelling in summer months, and to mothers for the fretting and crying of infants for which it is a certain cure.

MRS A. M. SANFORD,
No. 160 East Broadway N. Y.

The proprietor of the above valuable medicines, as also of Dr. Pearson's Barber's Embrocation for Horses, being himself a Physician and graduate of one of the best medical schools in the U. S. and having had the advantage of years of experience in an extensive practice, is therefore from the practical knowledge which he has acquired, well qualified to prescribe those remedies, and restore the patient to sound health.

Prepared only by S. A. Pearon M. D., and for sale wholesale and retail; at No 106 North 4th street Philadelphia. Also, by J. R. Swallow, General Agent, No. 123 Fulton-st. N. Y., by whom all orders for the above medicines will be promptly attended to.

For sale in Plainfield by E. Kirkpatrick, and M. F. Cushing, sold also by Druggists and country storekeepers generally throughout the United States Canadas and West Indies.

A Night's Adventure.

CONFESSIONS OF A HYPOCHONDRIAC.

I retired, heaven knows, with no intention but to sleep, but by the intervention of a luckless accident, it proved the sorest night of my life. Retiring in a sea of abstraction, beguiled by the aliment of promise, and about to enter upon a magnificent occasion for a perfect recovery, bewildered by the contention of pleasant anticipations and imaginary ills, which dazzled like sunbeams, without my valet I walked into the wrong room. Still grovelling in the wells of truth, the deeps of error, I went into a lady's bed! What a fatal error for my repose! What a delicato distress! The chamber I had entered to have and occupy, belonged to an aged spinster—a regular watering-place hunter, who had long since consumed her share of the honey of heaven-born charity; who loved only her lap-dog and a winning partner at whist; who disliked the young of her own sex, and who had the wildest hatred to mine! In the room of such an example of mortality, what a disaster—what a catastrophe to my ends and visit! Ah! what prodigious ills from petty causes spring.

I marvel to this day, how I came there. I wonder how I overlooked the feminine bijouterie, the toilette, caps ribbons, combs, curls, artificials, roses and sprigs of myrtle, on the dressing-table, and I answer I cannot imagine! I have rummaged my imagination for excuses in vain; the only one which aids me is this: I must have been in a state of sonambulism when I entered the den of that amiable virtuoso. I remembered nothing in the morning, but that I had gone quietly and soberly to bed, filled with hope from the cheering conversation of the water-doctor. This, and some dreary fragments of the life of easy happiness I languished to attain, alone lingered on the tablet of memory.

I had gone to bed, and after the second, or it may be the third watch, was most uncomforfably disturbed. The upshot of it is this: the room was double-beded, and in the occupancy of a lady and her maid. I had entered upon and occupied the latter's couch! in the morning she was called lustily, to admintster to her mistress the usual morning dose; no answer being given, she had risen from her bed to awake this creature, who, it was discovered, had slipped out, after pretending to retire, to join a dancing party in the hotel. Unluckily, I had taken her place. For nights I had not closed my eyelids, but this night I slept like a rock; and lapped in that delicious slumber which refreshes the weary and prepares the strong man for toil or battle, heeded not the callings and cries of a voice in distress, till my head was griped between two fair hands and shaken most profoundly. I called for silver, and my masculine voice startled my astounded witness. It was a moment of recognition, and as surprising to one as it was unsatisfactory to the other. A scream, shrill and loud, saluted my ears as I caught a glimpse of a face, befrilled in lace, retiring from mine!

'What is the matter?' said I, fancying the house was on fire, by the rudeness of the shocks. I heard her mutter, 'It is a man's voice!—a man's!' Another scream, and yet another! And as I peered forth, she ran towards her bed, like a lapwing, plotting very modestly, that I should not spy her feet, which, heaven knows, I was not covetous enough to look at. A violent pulling at the bell roused me to a crisis of apprehension, and I rose in my sitting.

'Lie down, sir; you horrid willian,' said she, 'lie down!'

I obeyed precipitately. When I spoke or questioned, she screamed. I heard a knocking at the door, and watched to get up to open it. She saw me move—appeared to be convulsed by the idea of one of my gender rising in her presence, and I, sillily, over-delicate, was abashed into inaction when I should have been active. What a perplexity! What was to be done in such a position? She would not rise to open the door, or permit me. 'Stay in bed, sir!' was her cry, continually; and when I protruded a leg, she seemed to be fainting. She called for Fanny! 'She is not here,' said I.

'What! are you alone?'

I felt all over the bed, and protested I was alone. I protested and explained; it was evident I had missed my chamber, and the discovery distracted me. I said I would rise and go out; she insisted with infinite rancor I should lie down; I had nearly killed her already, and if I rose I should be her death! How dreadful it is to be attacked by a woman, with a free and not particular tongue; to pocket those epithets in a sort of chivalry. The door was burst. To my bedside came a young woman, with a candle in her hand, and two or more followed at her heels. I thought I should have been set on an torn to pieces by this ungentle creature, and to my surprise her mistress spoke to my good behavior, Fanny, to excuse her delinquency, made it evident she was bolted out, and she had chosen to remain out, rather than disturb her poor, dear, sick mistress, in her sleep. Rather than disturb! The slut! The truth is, true to my habit, I had cautiously locked the door, but I believe she had never tried to open it.

Seeing how matters stood, tantalized and almost exasperated, and perceiving what an extraordinary mistake had been committed, I was anxious to discuss my position. I was pronounced a—what do you think? a robber! I gaspe for breath! protested—was knocked down with a shower of icy abuse; and trembling, and incensed, and agonized, and ready to give up the ghost, and begging to have leave to explain, in God's name, and finding no excuse would be heard, I resigned myself to my fate without hope of quarter. With chagrin I heard the mistress congratulated on her escape; for they discovered a plot, in spite of my innocence—a grave design.

I began to perspire with fear, and petitioned heaven for an early deliverance. I would have fled from the scene, discovering I was in the wrong room, but in a robe de chamber, surrounded by girls and their elders, could not stir without treading over the line of delicacy; and every time I moved, my Tabitha Bramble, who had put on her garments, threatened my infirmity with her talons. She dared me to stir, and her maid alarmed the house. I offered to apologize to her beautyship, but she grew furious; and the fiery spots on her face became red-hot with caloric of anger, when I moved in my afflictions. Clytemnestria in the tragedy, Siddons in her dark personations, never looked so many unutterable things. Was she an oyster-woman? I discarded the austere supposition for its vulgarity. By-and-by, half the inmates of the hotel having arrived, waiters and watchman, master and maid, I was pronounced to belong to the premises and respectable! But if escaping the indignity of a charge of felonous intentions, I was still jeered, reproved, reproached, and eyed as a curiosity; as if this luckless tresspass into another's nest needs have a design in it; as if accident could not give occasion to it; as if I could have helped it; but motley morality is suspicious, and wickedly perverse in judgment. The unforgiving fury, whom I was supposed to have insulted, withdrew with the crowd of titlers, as I crawled out, shrunken, darkling' and huddled in a blanket, to my room attended by the waiters and the master, who all looked as if laughing heartily in their sleeves.

ENERGY.—Energy is omnipotent. The clouds that surround the houseless boy of to-day are dispersed, and he is invited to a palace. It is the work of energy. The child who is a beggar this moment, in a few years to come may stand forth the admiration of angels! Who has not seen the life-giving power of energy? It makes the wilderness to bloom as the rose! whitens the ocean; navigatives our rivers; levels mountains; paves with iron a highway from State to State; and sends through, with the speed of lightning, messages from one extremity of the land to the other. Without energy, what is man? A fool, a clod.

From the Ladies Wreath.

Recollections of a Lawyer.

BY REV. CLEMENT E. BABB.

'And so you were once a pettifogger, Jones! Well, I don't wonder that a man of your taste and honesty soon abandoned the profession!'

'It is fashionable to abuse lawyers,' answered my friend, 'and they do have to see many of the darker shades of human nature, but they need not grow dark themselves, nor cold an unfeeling; nay, they have many opportunities of doing deeds, which even Howard could have rejoiced in. One scene occurs to me now. I shall never forget it! I had recently gone to the new and beautiful village of H———, in the State of Michigan. My shingle was on the door of a little wooden building, that stood in the midst of a clump of forest trees, and yet it was on the public square, and but a few rods from the court house. There was a natural grove between me and the tavern across the street where I boarded.—Our county had just been agitated by the fierce contest of 1844. The party to which I belonged had triumphed, and a young man, who was a warm personol friend, had been elected treasurer. I call him a young man, for he was so in all his feellings—though five years married—the father of two beautiful boys and an infant daughter. During this contest there came into our village a burly brawling man, named Johnson. He was by trade a tanner, but had a great fondness for politics, professed the right sort of principles, and having a good deal of brass with some wit, he was active and rather efficient in electioneering. He ingratiated himself especially with my friend Williams, the candidate for treasurer.—One day during the canvass, Johnson went to Williams in great distress. He had just heard of the loss of all his stock and tools by a storm on Lake Erie. He was daily expecting them, he said, an anxious to go to work, but now they were gone, and he knew not what to do. Williams sympathized with and encouraged him, and so that interview ended. But a few days after, Johnson called again in high spirits. There was a tinner in an adjoining village, who wanted to sell off his entire stock, and would let his tools go on a credit of six months. 'They amount,' said Johnson,' 'to only one hundred dollars, and I can earn enough in the six months to pay for them.' Williams told him he was glad of the opportunity, and advised him by all means to take the tools. Johnson said he had concluded to do so, and had made a bargain for them, and given his note, but the man wanted an endorser. 'Of course,' he continued, 'it is a mere matter of form, for the tools will be here, and good for the debt if I don't pay the money.'

'Williams placed his name upon the note. Johnson commenced business. He soon manifested a remarkable passion for running in debt. He sold a great deal of ware for cash, and yet, he never had any money, and never paid in any thing but tin. If he wanted a quarter of tea, or a paper of pins, you must trust him, or take tin cups or dippers at cost. This propensity became a standing joke in the village. 'If you deal with Johnson you must take it in tin' A few suspected the game that was being played, and one Saturday afternoon I had a hint from a neighbor, that if Johnson owed me any thing I had better go at once and get my tin! He had been busy nearly all night packing up. I looked over my fee book, and found a small charge for services. I went over to the shop Several had been before me. There was an old watering-pot left, with two or three melancholy looking pans. I took them of course, and stowed them in my closet, dreaming of matrimony, milk houses, and flower beds. My friend Williams was lying at this time dangerously ill. He had the consumption, and died within the year. I knew nothing of his having endorsed Johnson's note. But I had just seated myself to rest from the exertion of bringing home my tin ware, and dreaming what I should do with it, when word came that Williams wished to see me immediately. I went at once to his house. As I turned the corner, I saw Johnson leaving the door. Williams was lying on the bed in a state of high and dangerous excitement. His emotions were intense, but he spake gaspingly and with great effort. His wife told me the story of the endorsement—that the note was nearly due—that her husband hearing of Johnson's intended departure, had sent for him to get him to provide for the payment of the note—but that he had refused, saying that he had nothing to give but his word—that that was good enough—that when he arrived at Auburn he would send back the money, &c. 'Yes,' cried Williams, 'and I told him that I was dying, and was poor. I pointed him to my wife and my babes. I asked him what they would do for bread when I was in the ground—my pittance was sacrifieed to pay other men's debts; and he looked coldly on my pale, and their tearful faces. He said he was a man of honor a man of his word, and that I need not make such a fuss. I begged him to wait until I sent for you, but he would not; he went away rudely from a scene that should have melted a stone! And now tell me,' said the sick man, 'what shall I do? You know how little I have to leave to those I love. You see how dependant they are. Every hundred dollars is important. If I was well and able to work, even with the axe and the spade, I could bear it; but to be cheated and robbed on my dying bed, is too much. Do something for me, if you can. See Johnson, and try once more. It is possible that you may succeed.' I assured my poor friend that no pains should be spared. I tried to soothe and encourage him, though I had little hope myself. A man that could go unmoved from such a spot, was no very promising subject. The note was not due: I could not get an attachment upon either his goods or his person I thought the matter over as I returned down street, and decided on my line of conduct. It was some time before I found Johnson. He evidently did not wish to be seen. I enquired at his shop and his house in vain. Just at dusk a man stole through the grove whose form and walk seemed familiar. I hastented to accost him. It was Johnson. I told him that I wanted to see him very much on some important and confidential business, and asked him to go over to his shop, which was then shut, and talk about it. He pleaded haste, hunger, every thing; but I perserved. At length his curiosity seemed to be excited, and he turned to go with me. He unlocked the door, and while he lighted a candle, I turned the key and put it in my pocket. There we were shut up together; he a powerful man, six feet high, and I but a delicate student of five feet six. I sat down on a box with him before me. I told him of Williams' kindness and nobility of heart, of his sufferings, his poverty and his fears for his family. I talked to him about that young and weeping wife—those two fair haired fatherless boys, and that infant born only in time to see its parent buried. If I ever talked eloquently it was that night, for my heart was full. But Johnson listened without the slightest emotion. I then changed my tack. I told him that I had come there for the tools which he bought with that note. I must take them since he had no other security for Williams. The villain laughed in my face. He told me they were all nailed up in the boxes before me, and marked for shipment; that they were mixed with his other property, and that it would take all night to sort them out. 'No matter,' said I 'I am willing to stay all night if necessary; and besides, I have locked the door, the key is in my pocket, and I don't mean to open it until I have those tools! The fellw looked at me with astonishment. I had locked myself up with him to bully him into giving up a hundred dollars worth of property! The very absurdity of the thing seemed to conquer him. I handed him a mallet and chisel, and he began at once to open the boxes. I never felt so strangely in my life. It seemed as if that man had become a child at my feet; and yet I knew not the spell by which I controlled him. He probably thought it best to seem to submit and watch for some chance of escape, but my plan was better laid than he thought. I selected one of the boxes, and told him to put the articles which the note was given for in that, while I stood and checked them on the bill of sale. I hardly knew the name of a single tool, and he might have cheated me by putting less valuable things than the bill designated; but he was playing a deeper game, or else thought I knew more about the tools than I really did. However that may be, he selected the proper articles without a single exception. It was a long tedious business! Three hours we toiled over those tools, he grumbling and yet obeying all the time! And at nearly eleven o'clock the division was made. My things were in a hugh box by themselves. The crisis approached! I stepped to the door and unlocked it We went out together. I then locked the door. He held out his hand for the key. Said I 'To-morrow is Sunday—you won't need it then; and I will get out this box early on Monday morning!' No,' said Johnson, 'the cars start at six. I must be here before five, or I shall not get my goods on. I must have the key. I will leave this box of course. Do you think I have been sorting out these tools all night for nothing? If I had intended to take them with me, I would have left them packed as they were!' 'Well,' said I, 'that is true; but I may want to remove my box tonight. See, here is a plank loose in the platform,' and I raised it as I spoke I, will lay the key under it, and either of us can get it.' He assented as we both walked away. I caught a gleam of his eyes by the moonlight. I read his soul. As soon as I had gone to hunt for help to remove the box, which must have weighed six hundred pounds, he meant to steal back and get the key. He walked slowly down the grove as if going home. I walked up street, and as I approached the corner, whistled a familiar tune. The moment I did so, the squaking of a wheelbarrow grated hashly on the air and my faithful man George, true as steel, though his face was dark, came out from his long watch of three hours, and trundled his democratic dray down to the tin shop door. I took the key from under the platform, and opended the door. We dragged the box upon the barrow, no easy task! and started for my office. And what did Johnson do? you ask. He started at the creaking of that wheelbarrow as if he heard the arch-angel's trump. He turned about and watched us; but what could he do? To interfere then would have been useless. He saw that he was out-generaled—that the biter was bit, and he went home grinding his teeth and cursing his folly. I never saw him afterward.

'I placed the box under my table, and went up to tell of my success. I need not describe the scene. Next week the man who had sold the tools, hearing of the circumstances, came and took them back and cancelled the note. So the whole responsibility was taken from the shoulders of my friend. He died soon after. His end was peace and to the God of the widow and the fatherless he committed his wife and babes! I received no fee in money for the labors of that Saturday evening; but I had such reward as gold cannot give! All lawyers have such opportunities; I trust many improve them and that they do many deeds which gladden human hearts and make the angels smile.

Indianapolis, Nov. 1849.

The Rat.

I had read a pretty tough rat story in the 'Penny Magazine,' but it is said to be authentic. 'An open box,' says the narrator, 'containing some bottles of Florence oil, was placed in a room which was seldom visited. On going into the room for one of the bottles, it was perceived that the pieces of bladder and the cotton, which were at the mouth of each bottle, had disappeared; and that a considerable quantity of the contents of the bottles had been consumed. This circumstance having excited surprise, some of the bottles were filled with oil, and the mouths of them secured as before. The next morning the coverings of the bottles had again been removed, and part of the oil was gone. On watching the room, through a small window, some rats were seen to get into the box, thrust their tails into the necks of the bottles, and then, withdrawing them lick off the oil which adhered to them.'

The Law.

The more we see of the practice and effects of the law, the more we are satisfied that it and equity bear no relation to each other—they are as distinct, opposite, as the preaching of the various sectarian dogmas of the day are to the genuine spirit of true christianity—they both tend to darken council—they bear no relation whatever to the thing signified, or that they are intended to represent. It is very rarely indeed that justice is obtained by a resort to law; if it is, it is not the fault or the result of the law but generally in defiance of it; this we believe the experience of every man will corroborate.—Why is it that the very end for which they were established—the protection of individuals and society in their just and equal rights—are thus in every case defeated? That it is not the fault of the administrators of it, generally,—as they would often render justice but for the law—every persons experience must also prove. That it is not the fault of the lawyers all know, as they endeavor to elucidate and simplify it; but it is the nature of the humbug, the more it is explained the more obscure it becomes, and they as in duty bound will only submit to and be guided by the law. The fault therefore, as we have before attempted to show is in the laws—they are so ambiguous, of such doublful interpretation, filled with latin quotations, repetitions and inconsistent absurdities, being founded on the arbitrary, tyranical and obsolete laws of Great Britain, are totally unsuited and rediculously absurd and oppressive when applied to a republican people; being the protector of the unjust and dishonest who are able to resort to them, while they oppress and enslave the poor. This is the law; the oppressor of the poor and honest, the protector of rogues, the standing joke and contempt of all! The experience of all we believe will fully corroberate these remarks; doubtless all have witnessed cases similar to the following which transpired recently; so unfrequently is any other result witnessed that it forms the exception not the rule; we give only sufficient to show the result.

A. B. had taken out a writ of attachment against the moneys, credits and effects of C. D. a non-resident debtor. The defendent C. D. or his attorney, calls a jury—a respectable jury of the county as could be found—intelligent, sensible business men—who were called to adjudicate upon the matter; the evidence was gone into, the matter argued and submitted, and the jury returned their verdict, when lo! behold! the verdict when explained to them was the reverse of what they intended it should have been! They, simple souls, like honest men, supposed law had some foundation in justice!—that they should be guided in their judgments by the evidence offered when examined by common sense, and return a verdict in accordance with its dictates! how egregiously mistaken, how little they knew of the law! Their verdict was rendered and when too late to alter it they were informed that the effect of their decision was the reverse of what they in their honest confidence intended it should be! What a beautiful commentary on the law! Would not any sensible man prefer putting coppers in a hat, and agree that the matter in dispute should be determined in his favor who turned the most heads? No wonder that the Savior said, if any man will sue thee at the law, and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloak also!

To remedy this evil it is necessary that the people make this as they would any other evil which they wish to reform, a test principle, upon the supporters of which alone they would bestow their suffrages; this is the only remedy, peaceful conservative remedy, which can be adopted whereby they can affect their object—this, as well as the granting exclusive privileges must be reformed by a combination among those aggrieved, by no othplan can they remedy the evil; let every man consult his fellow sufferer and combine with him to remove the evil—if this is not done they must expect to be oppressed, as it is not the nature of oppression to forego any of its power over the People, the submission to the demands of an inch is always repaid by the demand of an ell.

☞ The New York Day Book we perceive is again revived. This journal certainly deserves an efficient support. We received the first number of the reissue dated Jan. 4. which in our estimation has some well written articles claiming the attention of the people—ono upon Flour inspection which should be read by every person, and especially by those who have a vote that can be made to bear on the question. We have ever considered this as indeed every other inspection a humbug; it is no protection to the purchaser as every man's experience proves, and is an oppressive burden upon the people, and a corrupt sinecure of the worst class; the Day Book justly observes:

"No forced inspection is necessary any more than of cotton, sugar, or molasses. We as much need an inspector of potatoes as of flour. The dealers in the article should be competent to judge of its quality. If they are not they should employ those who are, to buy for them; or else confine their dealings to commodities they understand. Flour should be sold by its actual merit, the same as other merchandise, not by any self-willed or biased Inspector's fiat whose best judgment is as often wrong as right. We buy our flour, tea and coffee of a grocer, and he well knows he must give families an article worth their money or he will lose them for customers. He does not buy his butter or his tea by an official 'Inspection,' but by his own. So should he buy his flour."

The argument will apply equally to all other inspections.

It also contains a communication on the subject of the New Jersey Railroad monopoly, reviewing commodore Stockton's appeal, prefaced by the following authorities:—

"No tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any state. * * * No state shall, without the consent of Congress, lay any duty of tonnage."—[Constitution of the United States.

"The right set up in this case under the laws of New York, is a monopoly. Now I think it very reasonable to say that the constitution never intended to leave with the States the power of granting monopolies, either of trade or of navigation. * * * * I insist that the nature of the case and the power does imperiously domand that such important authority as that of granting monopolies of trade and navigation, should not be considered as still retained by the State. * * * * A road may be a matter of great commercial concern, and when it is so, there can be no doubt of the power of Congress to make it. * * * * If a State grant exclusive privileges to a few, it may grant them to many—that is, it may grant them to its own citizens, to the exclusion of every body else * * * * To confer reward by exclusive grants, is not supposed to be a power properly to be exercised by the States,"—[Daniel Webster.

"Every one is so far presumed to know the law, that in ordinary cases, civil and criminal, he is bound as if he did know it. The Corporation, therefore ought not to have relied on a pledge which they were bound to know the Legislature had not the constitutional power to give. If they have done so, they must abide the consequences,"

[Chief Justice Taney.

"The sober second rhought of the people is always efficient."—[Martin Van Buren.

Therefore as this act authorises a duty of tonage, a tax laid on articles from any state, it is a violation of the Constitution of the United States, and furthermore. as the companies have been the first to violate the contract by overcharges on freight and passengers—whether constitutional or not—the faith of the state cannot be violated by annulling that which the company have already forfeited; we trust the people will not be led astray by any sophistry the company or its bribed subsidiaries may advance, but keep wide awake to the true issue made between the people and the monster monopoly.

MESSRS EDITORS.—In connection with the subject of debate on Tuesday evening last, 'Is the existence of God discoverable by the light of nature.' I would respectfully ask;

Wherefore the use of Revelation if nature teaches the existence of God? It rather surprises me that the affirmative would put such a weapon in the hands of infidelity.

☞ In visiting a city like New-York, on business or pleasure, it is of great importance to know where to find the object sought; much time and money can be saved by knowing where to find the best and cheapest of the various kinks of goods. Reader, if in wan tof any description of Dry Goods from a 3cent calico to the most superb merinoes and cashmeres, we venture to say without the fear of contradiction, that for extensive variety of every description, for low prices, or proper attention to the wants of purchasers, the establishment of Lane & Porter, No. 65 Catherine-st. is not excelled by any other in the city.

☞ The public attention is called to the advertisement of J. H. Schoonmaker & Co. in another column. Their Crackers are A No 1 and no mistake. Call and judge for yourselves, at 219 Fulton-st. N. Y.

☞ Reader, if you do not read the advertisement in another column of Mr. Charles Craske, you will not know what his business is, if you do and should want anything in his line we are assured that his workmanship and prices defy competition.

KEEP YOUR FEET DRY.—We would reccommend to all, to get Mr. John Boylan's Gutta Percha SOLES attached to their boots immediately, not only do they keep the feet dry but they prevent slipping on the ice.

Organization of the Legislature.

TRENTON, Jan. 8 1850.—2 1-2 P.M.

Temperance Meeting.

A meeting for the purpose of devising measures to counteract the evils of Intemperance in this community, was held in the Second Presbyterian Chuch, on Monday evening, the 31st ult. Zachariah Webster was called to the chair, and Elston Marsh acted as as Secretary.—The meeting was addressed by the Rev. Messrs. Hill. Crandall, Beach, Drake, and Whittaker; also by Messrs. R. Anderson, and Z. Webster. The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved—That Temperance Meetings shall occur monthly, to be held in the different churches successively—the exercise to partake of the character of conference meetings.

Resolved—That the next meeting be held in the Second Baptist Church, on the last Monday evening in January.

Resolved—That the proceeding of this meeting be published in our village papers.

Awful Murder.

A horrible murder was perpetrated on Sunday night, in the vicinity of the Jackson Glass Works, in this county.—An old man named Fowler, a German, had his brains beaten out by two of his countrymen

It appears that the old man and two of his comrades, whose names are George Winocker, and John Summers, had been on a New Year's frolic, and, in the course of the evening a row ensued, in which Winocker struck Fowler on the head with a heavy maul, literally smashing it, which caused his death instantly. Winocker and Summers are now in prison in this City, awaiting their trial for the deed.—Camdem Democrat.

STRANGE—A CONVENTION OF THIEVES.—A thieves' convention has been held in London, for the purpese of adopting measures to procure an honest livelihood.—Two hundred and seven avowed thieves attended. The meeting was opened with prayer and a hymn. An address was propesed to Lord Ashley, asking if any hope was presented of their obtaining an honest living in the British Colonies. His lordship expressed his willingness to befriend them, as it was his duty to do. He candidly told them that there was little hope for them, unless they turned their attention to the back settlements of the New World. Suggestive of levity as may be these facts, there is something serious and solemn in them. 'We must steal or die,' was the response of one of the thieves: 'prayer is very good, but it will not fill an empty stomach.' Can anything be more expressive of the depraving influences of the social evils of English society.

☞ The 'personal liability' clause went into operation in New-York on the 1st inst. It provides that the stockholders in every corporation and joint-stock association for banking purposes, issuing bank notes, or any kind of paper credits to circulate as money, after January 1, 1850, shall be individually responsible to the amount of their respective share or shares of stock in any such corporation or association, for all its debts and liabilities contracted after the said first day of January. This applies to all the banks of issue in the state. In case of insolvancy, bill-holders have preference over all other creditors.—This is a most righteous law. If we had one even half as good in New-Jersey it would prevent those wholesale bank swindlers which have so often disgraced our state. Shall it ever be thus?

LEWIS CRAIG, P. M.

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

A curious dialogue, 'tis said,
Took place among the ladies,
Of DRY GOODS AND GROCERIES,
Where the best place to trade is!

Mrs. A. S. and Mrs B.,
Declared they knew where was good T.
Mrs. L. and O. wished to know,
If anywhere on Earth they'd go!
For, good T. was hard to get,
They neither had had good as yet.
B. S. and A, that is the Mrs.,
Knew also where to get their dresses,
And sugar, ribbons, and molasses,
Carpets, earthenware, looking-glasses,
Muslin, over-shoes, and gloves,
Blankets, salaratus, nutmegs, cloves,
Umberellas, tin pans, and toys,
Beautiful ones for girls or boys;
In fact, everything that's eat, drank or wore,
You'l find it at D. BULLMAN'S Store!

You'l find this just as 'tis said
If 'tis not, then you need not trade;
My thanks for the past to all are due,
While a happy New Year I wish to you.

DANIEL BULLMAN.

GUTTA PERCHA

MOLESKIN HATS

FOR Gentlemen's wear, are now ready and for sale at our store and Manufactory

No. 244 Broad street, Newark.

Fur and Moleskin Hats of all descriptions, kept constantly on hand. Persons buying hats of us, may feel perfectly secure against the common difficulty of which is met with in a majority of Moleskin hats, in the liability of the plush blistering, as we are now using a new preparation of Gutta Percha sizing for the body in the manufacture of our Hats. The effect of which is to make them more pliable, and at the same time impervious to water and prespiration. Caps of various styles kept constantly on hand.

INSURANCE.

2,500 MEMBERS!

THE CLINTON MUTUAL INSURANCE CO. AT NEWARK NEW-JERSEY. This company has now completed the fifth quarter of its active operations with unparalled success, having issued 2500 policies into all parts of New-Jersey, as well as beyond its limits, and have sustained losses to the amount of less than $2000 during that period.

This success, though extraordinary, has not surprised the directors of the company as the peculiar system of insurance adopted by them offers advantages and inducements which need only to be understood to command public confidence and patronage.

The company insures both on the mutual and special principle. Policies on the mutual principle are issued for any period not exceeding five years, and are confined to the best classes of risks, and generally to buildings and property in the country not hazardous, nor in blocks or in exposed parts of cities, towns or villages; a precaution which enables the company to insure at unprecedently low prices.

In such cases a premium note is taken and only 33 1-3 cent. on the amount of the note is required to be paid in cash at the time of insurance; no other payment being required except on assessments to pay losses accruing during the continuance of the policy; and the company confidently anticipating that no such assessment will be necessary, as it has been ascertained by experience that the cash payment at the time of insurance will suffice for all probable losses.

Every person insured on the mutual principle becomes thereby a member of the company, and is entitled to vote at the election of its directors, and, after having been insured for five years successively, is allowed at his option, on renewing his policy, to take scrip for the amount of his premium, thus securing a return of his premium in a dividend paying stock.

Policies on the special principle are issued when preferred, on the most reasonable terms, but generally for periods not exceeding one year, and risks termed hazardous will be taken on the special principle, at corresponding rates.

This company addresses itself most strongly to the farmers of the country, as it is among them that it finds and prefers to select its patrons.

The policies issued by this company are of the most liberal and equitable character, and all deceptive and objectionably provisions, calculated to produce litigation and defeat a recovery, too often found in the policies of the other companies, are scrupulous excluded.

The company invites the closest scrutiny into its character and business. It is responsible for the accuracy of all surveys taken by its agents. All differences may be settled by arbitrators, at the option of either party. Every person insured is at liberty to surrender his insurance at any time and take up his premium note. The business of the company is flourishing and prosperous, and persons insured may rely on having all losses settled with promptness and liberality.

IMPORTANT TO HORSEMEN.

DR. PEARSON'S BARBER'S

EMBROCATION

IS decidedly the best preparation that can be used for the cure of sprains, bruises, cuts, galls, splint, curb, ringbone, spavin, stiffness of the joints, &c. It is an article which should be in the hands of every horseman, and no stable should be without a bottle of it. Price only 25 and 50 cents per bottle.

The following is the testimony of Mr Schenck, proprietor of the "Somerset House," Somerville, N. J., a gentleman well known to horsemen in New Jersey.

DR, S. A. PEARSON: Dear Sir—I feel it a duty which I owe to you and the community at large, or rather that part of the community who possess, or in any way have charge of Horses, to say, that I have used your Embrocation,' for horses. It is decidedly the best preparation that I have ever used, or have any knowledge of for the various diseases which it is recommended.

I also know a great number of my friends, who have used it—and they all say, that it is the best medicine for horses that they have ever used. I would confidently recommend every person who has a horse should keep a bottle of this valuable Embrocation in his stable.

Yours respectfully, AB'M. C. SCHENCK.

Prepared only by S. A. PEARSON, M. D. and for sale wholesale and retail at No. 106 North 4th street, Philadelphia; also by J. R. Swallow, General agent 123 Fulton-st. New York.

For sale in Plainfield by E. Kirkpatrick, and M. F. Cushing, also by Druggists and country store keepers generally, throughout the United States, Canadas ane West Indies. [77.

GREAT AMERICAN REMEDY.

Vegetable Dyspepsia Bitters.

TO THE PUBLIC,

DR HUTCHINGS would call the attention of all afflicted with dyspepsia, and the various disorders arising from a diseased stomach, to his remedy therefor. His DYSPEPSIA BITTERS will be found, on trial, to contain every property requisite to restore the disordered stomach to a healthy action; to reproduce the lost appetite of the patient, and do away with the periodical nervous headache and general debility consequent on this afflicting disease. Thousands have tested its efficacy, and thousands more are now under treatment; and not one solitary case of failure has yet been reported to him. This is consolatory, and urges him on in his efforts to relieve poor suffering humanity. He could fill a volume with certificates of those who have been permanently cured; but he conceives the testimony of a few well-known citizens will answer every purpose. The reader will find, on looking over the following testimonials, they are not "got up" for the occasion; but bona fide letters from gentlemen who can be seen at any time at their places of business.

The following Certificate is from M. B. Brady, the Celebrated Daguerreotypist:

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness, I was advised to take Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me. I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia. M. B. BRADY,
No. 205 Broadway, N. Y.

From Luther B. Wyman, Esq., late President of the New York Musical Society, now of Brooklyn.

The undersigned was afflicted with the Dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half during a greater portion of which time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself, until he was recommended to try Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, he very soon derived benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well.

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of Hutchings' Bitters for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine.
L. B. WYMAN, 38 Burling Slip.

New York, Sept. 3. 1849.

Dear Sir—My wife having been a great sufferer from dyspepsia, low spirits, palpitation of the heart, and having been cured as I believe by your Bitters, I most cheerfully attest their efficacy: her case was a bad one. In the space of four months she lost her strength and thirty-five pounds of flesh; was compelled to abandon her household affairs; there seemed but little probability of a cure until she began to take your bitters; in one week she was greatly relieved, and in three weeks she was perfectly well, and has since gained thirty pounds. You are at liberty to use this if it will at all further your laudable purpose of circulating this valuable remedy.

With respect, NATHAN SAYRE, No 61 Fourth-st

CHAIN PUMPS.

THE best machine for raising water, in use — This Pump has many advantages over any other in use on account of its simplicity of construction, being made wholly of wood and galvanized iron, not liable to get out of order or to get deranged in any way. It can never freeze in winter, and can be put in wells of any depth.

It takes less power to work it than any other machine, to raise the same amount of water.

It is never obstructed by gravel or sand; it keeps the water perfectly sweet and fresh; the action of the chain mixes the gasses with the water always keeping it lively and fresh; on ceasing to work it, the water in the tube descends to the level of the water in the well; on commencing to work the pump, the first water that is drawn is from the bottom of the well.

☞ This pump received the premium at the late Essex county fair.

These Pumps may be had at the Pump Factory of S. B. Miller, 340 Broad-street, Newark, N. J.

The Popular Creed.

BY CHARES SHIRAS.

Dimes and dollars! dollars and dimes!
An empty pocket's the worst of crimes!
If a man is down, give him a thrust—
Trample the beggar into the dust!
Presumptuous poverty is quite appalling—
Knock him over! and kick him for falling!
If a man is up, oh! lift him higher!
Your soul's for sale and he's a buyer—
Dimes and dollars! dollars and dimes!
An empty pocket's the worst of crimes!

I know a poor, but a worthy youth,
Whose hopes are built on a maiden's truth,
But the maiden will break her vows with ease,
For a wooer came whose claims are these—
A hollow heart, and an empty head,
A face well tinged with a brandy red,
A soul well trained in villany's school—
And Cash—sweet Cash—he knoweth the rule
Dimes and dollars! dollars and dimes!
An empty pocket's the worst of crimes!

I know a bold and an honest man,
Who strives to live on the Christian plan,
But poor he is, and poor will be,
A scorned and hated wretch is he;
At home he meeteth a starving wife,
Abroad he leadeth the leper's life—
They struggle against a fearful odds
Who will not bow to the people's gods;
Dimes and dollars! dollars and dimes!
An empty pocket's the worst of crimes!

So get ye wealth, no matter how!
"No Questions asked" of the rich I trow—
Steal by night, and steal by day,
(Doing it all in the legal way,)
Join the Church and never forsake her,
Learn to cant and insult your Maker;
Be hypocrite, liar, knave and fool,
But don't be poor; remember the rule;
Dimes and dollars! dollars and dimes!
An empty pocket's the worst of crimes!

Nine Cheers for Old Zim.

OR, BREAKING DOWN THE SYSTEM.

In a remote county of Pensylvania the scene is laid. The time was the year 1842, when party spirit rose to 12° in the spade, in every hamlet the length and breadth of Uncle Sam's glorious domain. The respective political parties met in convention at Bugsburg (the county seat,) and made their nomination for county officers. As there were many aspirants for the few nominations, it follows as a matter of course that there were some bitter disappointments—to no one more so than to 'old Zim,' who was confident of getting a nomination for Sheriff.

Zimmerman, or 'old Zim,' as he was familiar called, was a miserly old codger, who was well to do in the world, yet he had an all-powerful thirst for office and he was up at every convention for a nomination for something, from 'time whereof the memory of a man runneth not to the contrary.' He was reputed wealthy—that is, he owned a farm, and had money, but he never showed the color of it except he unfortunately got on a spree, then he would sow it broadcast—but that was only a biennial occurrence.

A few evenings after the nominations above noted, a knot of the dissatisfied were congregated at the Black-horse Tavern, discussing the merits and demerits of the fortunate nominees.

'Gentle*men*,' said old Zim, 'merit and long service to the party is no recommendation in this county. The wire-workers and schemers have it all their own way.'

'Aye,' responsed one of the barroom loafers, 'they does the pickin' out, and, they expects us to do the wotin.'

'But gentle*men*, continued Zim, 'they will fetch up again a snag or a sawyer one of these days. Yes, gentle*men*, by the eternal, I'll upset their applecart and spill their peaches. I'll see whether it's the people or a set of broken down political hacks as makes the county nominations. By Judas, I'll break down the system—I'll run as a volunteer candidate for Sheriff, and if I don't lay 'em out, then my name aint Zimmerman, that's all.'

This determination was receive with favor by the crowd, and Zim sealed it by a 'half' for red-eye.

Full soon he was in the field, announced through a card in both papers to his fellow citizens, pledged himself to discharge the duties of the office with impartiality in case he was elected.

Right lustily did old Zim go to work, and things appeared to go on swimmingly. He canvassed the county; and the people were profuse in their promises of doing their best for him. In one of his peregrinations he met Wattles, the nominee of Zim's party, who was also on an electioneering tour.

'Ha! Wattles,' said he, 'my fine fellow, I'm sorry to see you allow yourself to be the tool of the unholy and corrupt cabal—I say I am sorry to see you sacrificed, but you'r bound to be beat. I'll show them that the freemen of this county will not bear dictation, so, my friend, if you wish to save yourself from the disgrace of a defeat, you had better resign in my favor."

Wattles expressed his conviction that he should feel very much used up in such an event, but at the same time he had made up his mind to stand the hazard of the die.

Election day at length came and my worthy friend armed with a hat full of tickets, stationed himself on the ground of his own precinct, and commenced dealing out his tickets and urging his claims in the strongest kind of way; miser as he was, he made his friends swim in Monongahela long before the polls were closed.

The election over, evening came on apace and the eager expectants gathered in the bar-rooms to await the counting of the votes, and the returns to come in from the different townships. Old Zim was flourishing about, treating the crowd, expressing his full confidence in the people and the success of his effort to 'break down the sytem.'

Seated in a remote corner were a number of wags, in a low but earnest conversation, and any one who might have chanced to see them would at once have concluded that something was to follow. The consultation soon broke up, and the plot began in about fifteen minutes to develope itself. The clatter of horse's hoofs were heard on the frozen ground—a solitary horseman rode up to the door, and flinging the reins over a post, rushed into the barroom, where he was soon raised on a table, and silence commanded.

'Here,' said he, drawing a strip of paper from his pocket, 'are the returns from Lower Buffalo township—Wattles, 50, Macgregor 40, Zimmerman 190! majority for Zimmerman, 110!'

'Nine cheers for old Zim!'

'Huzza! huzza! huzza!'

'Gentlemen,' said old Zim, taking off his hat—'I'm obliged to you for this expression of your—that is to say, let us take a horn all round!'

Of course the crowd acquiesced in this proposition, and the welkin rang with loud huzzas. But hark!—scarcely had the eager crowd imbibed before another horseman came galloping up to the inn.

'Beegum township one hundred majority for Zimmerman"

Again did old Zim attempt to speak but his feelings overcame him—and he ended by inviting the entire company to just call for whatever they wanted. Again the glasses jingled as the excited multitude wedged themselves towards the bar—and again was heard the clatter of a horse's hoofs.

'Dublin township, 130 majority for Zimmerman?'

'Nine cheers for old Zim!'

'Hip, hip, hurrah!'

The excited candidate was wild with joy and excitement, and he again invited the party up to drink.

Another horseman came!—another, and still another!—each one bringing an overwhelming majority for old Zim from the township he represented. Alas! that it should be the same horse, who performed the feat of a quarter race every hour that night, and that it should be the same mad wag under various disguises that brought old Zim the glorious news. The column, as footed up, gave Zim a cool thousand majority. Didn't he rave and pitch? Well, he did! Didn't he spend a cool thirty!—the landlord's till groaned under the weight of old Zim's deposites.

'Gentle*men*,' said old Zim, 'my heart is full [his head wasn't anything else,] and and I can only say that the glory of this contest belongs to you; but I feel a [brick in your hat, said a wag,] pride that I have been the humble instrument of breaking down the system.' [Nine cheers.]

Thus matters progressed until those who were completely 'sowed up' were laid out, and the remainder found their way home—some charitable friends of Sheriff elect toting him on a shutter to his domicil.

Early in the morning, the village wags with throbbing temples, met at the tavern to take 'a hair from the dog that bit them,' as well as to laugh over the 'saw played on old Zim; but scarcely had they commenced worship before in stalks the old gentleman, still under the delusion that he had carried the day—nay, more, he insisted on spending a V by way of a morning whet. The wags were determined to keep it up as long as possible, and again drank and congratulated him on his success. In the midst of the 'noise and confusion,' inbounded an inky printer's devil, who deposited an extra on the table, containing the returns. Eagerly did old Zim, seize it, and hover over it, but a minute. The conclusion of it is all-sufficient for the reader. It read as fellows:—

'By the above it will be seen that Democracy has again triumphed, as Wattles' (Dem.) majority over Tribbets (Whig) is 150. Zimmeran, volunteer, had 3 votes in Beegum, 2 in Dudlin, one in Lower Buffalo, and one in this borough, (supposed to be cast by himself,) making a total of seven votes.'

The extra dropped from Zim's hands; he moved toward the door, then looking around full at the gaping crowd, he said leisurely—

'Gentle*men*, you may all go to——!' And rushing from the bar-rom, he was never again heard of in Bugsburg.—N. Y. Spirit of the Times.

Wire Fences.

No one who values his shrubs and flowers on a lawn, where alone they ought to be, would rest a week without these effective, but almost invisible fences Our lawn occupies some eight acres; but the most valuable shrubs and evergreens are upon two acres near the house. Now it is well known that cattle will go over or through a fine evergreen, with the same object that swine will rub against a post. To this fact our broken evergreens will bear abundant testimony. To save these, and at the same time to pasture the rest of the lawn, we procured annealed wire of Nos. 9 and 6, placed the post 100 feet apart, using occasionally a tree for a post, and passed through these four strands of wire. At one end of the whole line a strong post was placed firmly in the ground, and the wire fastened to it. At the other end of the line a similar post was placed, the strands of wire pased through holes in it and the end of each strand fastened in a small cylinder piece of iron about an inch in diameter. One end of this iron being square and a wrench applied to it; the wire was without difficulty drawn perfectly tight This cost some two and a half dollars per 100 feet and can scarcely be seen at 50 yards distance. We caused it to be painted red, and the first day three white cows were let in it; they came out with their necks and breasts striped with red, giving clear evidence that they had tested its strength We fully believe that no animal will break through it. We have been amused to see the way in which our cattle after testing its strength, would stand off and gaze at it, as if in utter astonishment and bewilderment that so insignificant looking a barrier should be able to withstand all their efforts to break through it.

For cheapness, no fence—scarcely even the crooked ones of Virginia—can equal it; and for beauty, its superiority is evident. What a beautiful sight would a cleared farm of several hundred acres present, if fenced in this way, and with a fine group of trees to every two or three acres. The passer by would fancy it one large lawn, whose owner was a man of true taste. We think if made entirely of No. 6 wire it would be better, although the cost of it would thus be somewhat increased.—Agriculturist.

ADVANTAGE OF LONG HAIR.—'No one would take you for what you are,' said an old fashioned gentleman, a few days since to a dandy who had more hair than brains.

'Why?'

'Because they cannot see your ears.'

The gentleman with long hair suddenly disappeared.

Economical Mode of Feeding Stock.

Farmers who have but few animals, say two or three cows, a yoke of cattle, or a pair of horses, will find it greatly for their interest to cut their corn-stalks, straw, and even hay when it bears a high price. When is this done, put the cut fodder into casks of suitable dimentions, take hot water, to prolong the heat, and salt it at the rate of two quarts to a barrel. All know that brine can be kept hotter longer than fresh water. Pour this upon the cut fodder as fast as possible, in order to prevent the escape of heat, cover the head of the cask close with a blanket, or any thing convenient which will keep in the steam, and let it stand half a day or longer, when it will be found tolerably well cooked. Now place it in troughs for the stock; and if you have a little meal bran to sprinkle over it, your animals will relish the feed so much the better, and it will do them more good. Cornstalks, straw, and coarse hay, are worth twice as much for food when thus prepared, than if thrown out neither cut nor steamed. We give the above from experience, having been in the habit of following the practice for years.

Farmers labor diligently during spring, summer, and utumn, to raise and harvest fooder, then allow a large portion to be wasted from sheer negligence. Winter is their leisure time, and they should endeavor, at some extra pains, to economise the food they have worked so hard to procnre Machines for cutting stalks, straw, and hay, have been grealy improvod and multiplied within a few years past and can now be had at low prices. It is economical to possess them, and no farmer shold be without at least one on his premises.—Agriculturist.

The two Misers.

A Miser living in Kufa had heard that in Bassora also there dwelt a Miser more miserly than himself, to whom he might go to school, and from whom he might learn much. He forthwith journied thither; and presented himself to the great master as an humble commencer in the arts of Avarice, anxious to learn, and under him to become a student. 'Welcome!' said the Miser of Bassora; 'we will straight go into the market to make some purchase.' They went to the baker.

'Hast thou good bread?'

'Good indeed, my master—and fresh and soft as butter.' 'Mark this, my friend,' said the man of Bassora to the one of Kufa—'butter is compared with bread as being the better of the two; as we can only consume a small quantity of that, it will also be the cheaper—and we shall therefore act more wisely and more savingly too, in being satisfied with butter.'

They then went to the butter-merchant, and asked if he had good butter.

'Good indeed—and flavory and fresh as the finest olive oil,' was the answer.

'Mark this also,'—said the host to his guest; 'oil is compared with the very best butter, and, therefore, by much ought to be preferred to the latter.'

They next went to the oil vender:—

'Have you good oil?'

'The very best quality—white and transparent as water,' was the reply.

'Mark that, too,' said the Miser of Bassora to the one of Kufa; 'by this rule water is the very best. Now, at home I have a pail-full, and most hospitably therewith will I entertain you.' And indeed on their return nothing but water did he place before his guest—because they had learned that water was better than oil, oil better than butter, butter better than bread.

'God be praised,' said the Miser of Kufa—'I have not journied this long distance in vain!'—Fairy Tales from All Nations.

Keep him Down.

Ay, keep him down. What business has a poor man to attempt to rise, without a name—without friends—without honorable blood in his veins? We have known him ever since he was a boy—we knew his father before him, and he was but a mechanic—and what merit can there be in the young stripling? Such is the cry of the world, when a man of sterling character attempts to break away from the cords of poverty and ignorance and rise to a position of truth and honor. The multitude are excited by envy—they cannot endure to be outstripped by those who grew up with them or their children side by side, and hence the opposition a man encounters in his native place. Despite of this feeling many noble minds have risen from obscurity and lived down their opponents; but others have yielded to discouragements—lived in obscurity, and 'died and made no sign.' Let it not be thus with you young man. Persevere—mount up and you will yet startle the world.

PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Thursday, January 17, 1850.

☞ Mr Albert D. Drake is our authorised agent to receive subscriptions and advertisments.

Plainfield Lyceum.

The members of the Plainfield Lyceum will meet in Mr. W. W. Davison's school house on Tuesday evening next at 1-4 of 7 o'clock. The question for discussion will be:

"Is Slave-holding inconsistent with Christianity."

☞ An Essay will be delivered by the Rev. D. T. Hill.

☞ The public are respectfully invited to attend.

E. M. Dunn, Sec'y.

☞ A resolution has been introduced into the U. S. Senate by Mr. Seward, enquiring into 'the propriety of setting apart a portion of the Public Domain, to be granted, free of all charges, to the exiles of Hungary already arrived, and hereafter to arrive in the United States, as well as to the exiles fleeing from oppression in other countries.'

Although we feel a sympathy with the oppressed of all nations, and would to God that the oppressed everywhere might be made free, yet we do not believe this the proper plan to accomplish the object.—Why was it, when the simple acknowledgement by our government of their independence, and a demand that they be treated as one of the family of nations, would have effected this object for them, on their own soil, that it was not made? What a mockery of liberty is this, to provide for a handful when a whole nation, and even nations might be made free.—Neither can we see the justice of this discrimination in favor of aliens, when thousands of our own countrymen are landless and homeless. Let us be just at home, then let us be just to the cause of liberty abroad, while justice to that cause will be of avail, before we are generous to those whom our neglect alone has prevented from accomplishing their freedom.

☞ The Governor's Message, like that of President Taylor, is too non-committal on the great questions of the day, to suit our ideas of what such documents should be, coming as they do from the popular representatives of the people. On the subject of that rediculous and oppressive humbug called law, there is not a word said, nothing about the equalization of taxes, homestead exemption, the exemption of the household property of the poor from execution, land limitation, or anything else that would raise the down-trodden to the enjoyment of their equal rights. We condemn it therefore on precisely the same grounds that we did that of the President. We want messages from these officers that will show that they espouse the cause of the people, the cause of liberty, the cause of the down-trodden, that they may enjoy life, liberty, light. It is merely a compilation of statistics, the only clause worthy of notice is the few words about education and free-schools; but even these are too feeble in such a glorious cause. It is utterly unworthy the governor of a free state. We give only a few of the items.

The total receipts of the State in 1849, including a balance on hand of $10,823, were $136,513, of which $66,298 was from transit duties. The disbursements were $126,552.

The earnings of the State Prison have been greater than in previous years.

The Lunatic Asylum is doing well; it has treated 182 patients during the year of whom 57 were paupers, 70 indigent, and 55 paid; 44 were cured; the State has 1 lunatic to every 800 inhabitants by which it appears that only a small part are sent to the Asylum. The Pilots have done well their duties, having, without serious accident, taken to sea 524 vessels and brought into port 694 vessels, of which 464 were boarded 'of shore.' The whole number of vessels that have been under their charge is 12,605. The number of branch pilots is now 21 and of deputy pilots 3.

The militia is in a bad condition. The railroad companies' affair will be reported on by the Commission, and the Governor accordingly says nothing about it.

☞ The attention of the merchants of this, and contiguous towns, is directed to the advertisement in another column, headed Wholesale Fish Store. Our experience enables us to say that at no place in the city can you purchase a better article, or on better terms than of Nelson Wells & Co. 81 Dey-st. N. Y.

☞ The Legislature has been in session six days or will receive three dollars a day for that time, and three bills have been introduced—two of a private, and one of a general character!—Trentonian.

Franklin's birth-day the 17th of January, is to be celebrated by the New York printers—Horace Greely delivering an address.

EXTRACTS FROM MY NOTE BOOK.

The Return.

. . . . . Let me think a moment; yes, it is fourteen years since, from this very spot, I took a last view of my father's house. It is now too late in the evening to behold it at this distance. I wonder whether. I shall find it the same pleasant place it was when I wickedly and and foolishly left it to wander forth an outcast and an exile.

The home of my childhood was one of the loveliest places on God's footstool. During the long years which have intervened since I passed over this hilltop, I have beheld no place so well calculated to please the eye and gladden the heart. None of the countries which I have visited contain a scene half as lovely as the spot where my only happy days were passed—the home of my youth.

Those who have traversed the top of the first mountain, from Scotch Plains to Boundbrook, will readily yield assent to the opinion that there are few elevations on earth from which a lovelier landscape stretches out at the feet of the spectator. At the present time, it is true, there are no fields of golden grain bowing under the wealth of plump ripe kernels; the meadows no longer wave their green burthens in the morning breeze; the sickle and scythe have long since been employed to gather the rich rewards of the husbandman's labor; and crowded barn's and granaries filled to overflowing, afford abundant evidence that the Creator has not forgotten his promise that "While the earth remaineth, seed-time and harvest . . . . . shall not fail."

But if the lowlands are not clothed with verdurer they are yet beautiful, and contain many objects pleasing to the eye. There are few districts which contain a larger number of handsome villages and convenient and beautiful farm-houses; and the neat, substantial fences, strait as arrows and free from clumps of bushes and briars, present a picture which every lover of his country will heartily admire. But when the spring covers the earth with blossoms, or when summer and autumn come to gladden the heart of man with grain and fruit, then is this section of country beautiful and fertile as a well-tended garden, and he is to be pitied who can gaze unmoved on a scene of such surpassing loveliness. For many miles the eye wanders over a great number of the most valuable farms in the state, and it seems as if the owners vied with each other to make their acres lovely and productive.

. . . . I have great reason to be sad as I approach the scenes of my childhood. Contrary to the wishes of an indulgent father and the entreaties and tears of my mother, at an early age I determined on becoming a sailor. To this desire my parents would not consent; and one dark, stormy night, when it seemed as if the spirit of evil was abroad to uproot and destroy everything in his course, and while my parents were prevented by the violence of the storm from hearing me, I stole softly from their roof to become a wanderer from an earthly paradise. It seems but yesterday since I crawled down stairs like a thief, with a small bundle of clothes under my arm, and when the front door closed behind me, I felt as though heaven's gate had been for ever barrred against my entrance. O, the years of mental and bodily suffering I should have avoided, had I even then abandoned my sinful enterprise, and crawled back to my bed praying for forgiveness for having ever thought of leaving a home where everything was calculated to make me haypy.

. . . . My mother's grave was the first place I visited after learning the changes which had occurred since, on that fearful night, I went forth to become a wanderer from happiness. A plain marble, with a record of her name and the expressive words, "There is no rest this side of heaven,' marked the spot where they had left her to take a long repose. I threw myself beside her grave, and my eyes, for many years unused to weeping, now became a fountain of tears. I could have remained comparatively unaffected under almost any other trial, but to return to implore a mother's forgiveness and find that she had long before gone to her reward—for many good works had she wrought which were recorded in heaven—brought to mind her ten thousand acts of kindness, and I felt humbled that I had not returned to crave her blessing before she died. I bitterly cursed the hour when I first thought of leaving one who had loved me so fondly and it was many hours before I become composed and able to return from the graveyard.

I am not apt to indulge in lamentation nor grieve over irreparrable losses; but the recollection of the pangs I have caused a loved mother's heart will long make me mourn that I was so wicked as to flee from her when I much needed her example and care; and I can only hope to join in her reward by repenting heartily for the act of folly which had grieved her even in her dying hour. 3 o'clock. Mr. Hoxey introduced the following resolutions;

Resolved, Senate concurring, That our Senators from this State in Congress be, and they hereby are instructed and our Representatives requested to vote for the application of the ordinance of 1789, commonly called the Wilmot Proviso, to all Teritorial governments, that may be enacted at the present session of Congress; and also to vote for the admission of States, otherwise properly qualified for admission, that may by their organic law prohibit the institution of slavery in said States.

Resolved, Senate concurring, That Congress possesses the legislative power to abolish slavery in the District of Columbia, and that it is both right and proper that the government of this great Republic should free itself from the sanction of the slave traffic which has too long disgraced the otherwise fair reputation of the government of the United States.

Resolved, (the Senate concurring) That neither the threats of disunion and withdrawal by members of Congress from the slaveholding states—nor the recommendation of the Governor of South Carolina for a re-organization of the militia of said State in contemplation of disunion—nor the solemn acts of different Legislatures of the slave-holding states for the calling of a convention of the slaveholding states in case of the application of the Wilmot Proviso to the Territories of the United States, should for one moment deter the members of Congress from this State from performing their duties on this grave question.

Resolved, The Senate concurring, That the Governor of this State be requested to forward a copy of the foregoing resolutions to each of the Senators and members of Congress from this State.

On motion of Mr Hineline the resolutions were laid on the table.

An effort was made to pass a resolution to adjourn to Monday, which failed.

Mr. Hineline offered the following:

Resolved, That the people of New Jersey view with abborance the barbarities practised by Austria upon the inhabitants of Hungary—that they justly deserve the condemnation of all civilized and christian nations as contrary to the spirit of the age, to the laws of nations and humanity.

Resolved, That our Senators in Congress are hereby instructed and our Represetatives therein requested to vote no appropriation of money to defray the expense of the mission to Austria; and that our Senators are farther instructed not to advise or consent to the appointment of any Diplomatic Agent or Minister to the Court of Vienna for the present.

On motion of Mr. Abrahams the resolutions were laid on the table. Adj.

LATER FROM CALIFORNIA.

The steamer Cherokee, Capt C. Forbes, arrived on Sunday morning last at N. York. She left Chagres at half past 3, Thursday, Jan 3d, with 224 passengers and $320,000 in specie on freight, and about the same amount in the hands of the passengers.

The population of California, on the 1st day of January, 1849; may be set down as follows. viz:—

Californians 13,000, Americrns 6,000, Foreigners 5,000, making in all 24,000.

From the most careful and exact computation that could be made by the editor of the Alta California, the population on the 1st of Dec. 1849, was as follows:

Americans 62,500. Californians 13,500, Foreigners 18,500. making in all 94,300.

Advance in Prices.—All the necessaries of life have advanced within a few days past, and there is little prospect of their falling again before next summer. Flour is now $50 the barrel, and scarce at that: loaves of bread which could be bought for 6 cents in New York, are selling for 75 cents; beef, which was selling last week for 12 1-2 cents is now 50; mutton is held at a dollar a pound; veal 75 cents. During the last week we were somewhat 'hurried up' by the election printing, which gave our compositors an opportunity of making something over a hundred dollars each—a sum which probably was never before handed to a journeyman printer in this or any other country for a week's work.

IMPORTANT FROM EUROPE

Accounts from Vienna and Berlin of the 22d ult. state that a rebellion of a most formidable scale had broken out in Servia and Selavonia, and the military boundaries are up in arms against the Austrian Government. The Selavonian, and Servian boundary regiments have revolted and raised the cordon of the Turkish frontier, so that their rear is fully secured from the brethren of these men in Turkey, they are assured before hand of all support, a circumstance which will complicate the relations already sufficiently 'opinuses' between Austria and the Porte.

The boundary regiments which have revolted are among the bravest and hardiest soldier in the Austrian service. The grounds of their rising is resistance to the decree of November 18, organizing the 'Woiwodeschaft' The chief movement is in Syrmian, Peterwordein, and Zepaikist military districts, which are exasperated at being excluded from the 'woiwodeschaft.'

The military, force alone of the rebels is estimated at 120,000 men with one hundred and ten capnon, and if they are joined by the Croates, which appear highly probable, they wil have 200,000 men, with 300 cannon. The numbers of the insurgents are daily swelled by deserters from the Austrian regiments in Peterwordein, Esseg. &c.

It is said that Russia has been intriguing to get up this insurrection, in order to have both Austria and Turkey entirely dependant upon her; in proof of which the latest accounts from Servia mention that the Russian agaitator is daily growing more open and daring, and that the incredible actively of the agents of that power leads to the conclusion that a sanguinary entanglement will speedily break out between Russia and turkey. The prince of Servia has already refused to pay the tribute due to the Porte of 34,000 ducats, and the arming of all male adults is being carried on with the greatest activity, without any one knowing where the arms come from.

The Hamburg 'Borsenhalle' announces the discovery of a new and very extensive conspiracy in Russia.

The conspirators, who have been hitherto discovered, all belong to the high nobility and to the Russian National party—not a single Pole is compromised in this affair. The 'Gazette' of Breslau says it is the intention of Russia to concentrate all her forces on the Turkish frontier, in order to be able at any time to take advantage of events which may arise—and that Austria will garrison Poland

A mutiny broke out in one of the Austrian regiments stationed in Comorn on the 19th ult. through which several superior officers were killed by the exasperated men

The Tariff.—We have more than once expressed our opinion, and now again repeat it, that the present tariff is on the whole the best which the country ever had. Avoiding extremes in either direction, it imposes sufficient duties for revenue, and in a way not oppressively burdensome to the community.

A large majority of the nation are willing that a good share of the revenue necessary for the support of government, should be raised by duties upon articles coming in competition with our own industry. They are not willing that extravagant expedientures should be created in order to render necessary an immense revenue, nor that so high duties should be impased upon the foreign articles as to prevent its importation, and consequently to prevent any revenue from being derived from it. The tariff of 1846 hits the happy medium, with as much exactness as could possibly be expected, where so many jarring interests are concerned. That Tariff therefore, should by no means be disturbed in its general features, nor should it be submitted to a general revision. It is best to let 'very well' alone. This Tariff has now been in operation three years. All the sinister predictions concerning it have proved fallacious. One was, that it would produce an insufficient revenue; whereas official returns show that it has produced about $7,000,000, more revenue per annum than the Tariff of 1842. Another was, that it would cause excessive importations; whereas official returns show that during the three years of its existence, our exports have exceeded our imports $9,000,000. A third was, that it would drain the country of specie: whereas official returns show, that since it went into operation, many millions more of specie have been imported than exported. A fourth was, that it would cause a suspension of specie payments by all the Banks in the country; whereas the Banks never had so much specie on hand as at present, and the country generally was never more prosperous.

We hear nothing now, of the dismal forebodings to which we have alluded, (the least said, the soonest mended,) but, instead of this, a new cry is raised, of fraud! fraud!! fraud!!! on the revenue, resulting from the ad valorem system of duties. Have the Protectionists forgotten that under their favorite Tariff of 1842, more than three-fifths of the dutiable goods were assessed in precisely the same manner? For instance, in the year ending 30th June, 1846, the value of goods paying duties ad valorem, was $60,660,453, while those paying specific duties were only $36,263,605. In the previous year, ending 30th June, 1845, the value of goods paying duties ad valorem, was $60,191,362, while those paying specfiic duties were only $34,914,862. Now is it not strange that a feature so entirely harmless and even so commendale in the Tariff of 1842, should have become so pregnant with fraud and every evil work in that of 1846,—under the administration, too, of protectionist revenue officers?

The simplicity, uniformity, and equity of the present system, are high commendations in its favor. The complexity of the old system, consisting partly of ad valorem and partly of specific duties, the latter levied upon 28 different classifications of one article, (wine,) and 23 of another, (iron,) &c., &c., ought forever to prevent its being revived unless demanded by the most imperious necessity, which as we have shown, does not exist. Its injustice and oppression of the poor, ought also to condemn it.—Journal of Commerce.

Excellent.—The stereotyped tariff resolutions, introduced into the Legislature, yesterday, were hurrid through without a word of discussion! Thanks to the enlightened spirit of the age.—Trentonian.

Murder.

The murder last night of two persons living at the Goffle, within two or three miles of this place, has thrown our community into a state of intense excitement. The victims are John S. Van Winkle and his wife, an aged couple, and long residents of the county. The attrocious deed was accomplished, as there appears no doubt by one John Johnson, a laboring farmer, who two or three years since worked for his victim as a farmer, and who at the time was employed by some of his neighbors in the same capacity. So far as we have been able to gather the particulars, it would seem that Johnson effected an entrance into the house through an upper window, by means of a ladder, and descending to the bed room of his victims below, accomplished his murderous purpose.

The Coroner's Jury in both instances returned a verdict of wilful murder against John Johnson, who is now in our jail.—Paterson Guardian. Extra.

The Extent on our Country.—It has been computed that the United States have a frontier line of 10,780 miles, a sea-coast of 5,480 miles, a lake coast of 1,160 miles. One of its rivers is twice as long as the Danube, the largest river in Europe. The Ohio is 600 miles longer than the Rhine, and the noble Hudson has a navigation in the 'Empire State' one hundred and twenty miles longer than the Thames. Within Louisiana are bayous and creeks, almost unknown, that would shame, by comparison the Tiber or Seine.—The State of Virginia alone is one-third larger than England. The State of Ohio contains three thousand square miles more than Scotland. The harbor of New York receives the vessels that navigate rivers, canals and lakes to the extent of three thousand miles, equal to the distance from America to Europe.—From the capital of Maine to the 'Cresent City' is two hundred miles further than from London to Constantinople, a rout that would cross England, Belgium, a part of Prussia, Germany, Austria and Turkey.

The English Language.

The English language is yet destined to be the universal language. It is now spoken by more people than any other language, and its increase in range and extent two-fold faster than any other. It is now spoken by fifty-five million, and the next to it is the Russian—forty-three millions, thirteen million less. In eighty years more it will be spoken by three hundred millions, and our Republic will be the greatest empire on the face of the globe.

Mrs Partington Outdone.—'The acts of the administration have been confined so far entirely to foreign relations.' 'Dear me,' said an old lady the other day, on read the above sentence, 'I should think the government might attend to its own family at home without running after its foreign relations.—N. O. Pic.

LEWIS CRAIG, P. M.

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

A curious dialogue, 'tis said,
Took place among the ladies,
Of DRY GOODS AND GROCERIES,
Where the best place to trade is!

Mrs. A. S. and Mrs B.,
Declared they knew where was good T.
Mrs. L. and O. wished to know,
If anywhere on Earth they'd go!
For, good T. was hard to get,
They neither had had good as yet.
B. S. and A., that is the Mrs.,
Knew also where to get their dresses,
And sugar, ribbons, and molasses,
Carpets, earthenware, looking-glasses,
Muslin, over-shoes, and gloves,
Blankets, salaratus, nutmegs, cloves,
Umberellas, tin pans, and toys,
Beautiful ones for girls or boys;
In fact, everything that's eat, drank or wore,
You'll find it at D. BULLMAN'S Store!

You'll find this just as 'tis said
If 'tis not, then you need not trade;
My thanks for the past to all are due,
While a happy New Year I wish to you.
DANIEL BULLMAN.

At the opening of this establishment we beg leave to state to our friends in Plainfield and vicinity, that we have spared no pains or expense in making our vast Hall one of splendor and magnificence. The indudements, though too numerous to mention, cannot fail to attract all lovers of variety of whatever grade in society. But as COLD WEATHER IS COMING,
and the Printer wants a job, I'll not leave you in wonder, but will give a request to all ladies and gentlemen, young and old, to call at 85 Broad st.
AND SEE THE FUN!
For such rattling of Stoves and clatter of Tin,
Never, in Newark before has been.
Stoves, yes, we've the Fashion, the Empire, U. S. and the Bride,
A host of gay parlors, with office beside.
But of all the fine patterns named in our invoice,
The one that ranks highest is the famed Pople's choice. W. B. LUDLOW,

IMPORTANT TO HORSEMEN.
DR. PEARSON'S BARBER'S
EMBROCATION

IS decidedly the best preparation that can be used for the cure of sprains, bruises, cuts, galls, splint, curb, ringbone, spavin, stiffness of the joints, &c. It is an article which should be in the hands of every horseman, and no stable should be without a bottle of it. Price only 25 and 50 cents per bottle.

The following is the testimony of Mr Schenck, proprietor of the "Somerset House," Somerville, N. J., a gentleman well known to horsemen in New Jersey.

DR, S. A. PEARSON: Dear Sir—I feel it a duty which I owe to you and the community at large, or rather that part of the community who possess, or in any way have charge of Horses, to say, that I have used your Embrocation,' for horses. It is decidedly the best preparation that I have ever used, or have any knowledge of for the various diseases which it is recommended.

I also know a great number of my friends who have used it—and they all say, that it is the best medicine for horses that they have ever used. I would confidently recommend every person who has a horse should keep a bottle of this valuable Embrocation in his stable.

Yours respectfully, AB'M. C. SCHENCK.

Prepared only by S. A. PEARSON, M. D. and for sale wholesale and retail at No. 106 North 4th street, Philadelphia; also by J. R. Swallow, General agent 123 Fulton-st. New York.

For sale in Plainfield by E. Kirkpatrick, and M. F. Cushing, also by Druggists and country store keepers generally, throughout the United States, Canadas ane West Indies. [77.

DOCT. PEARSON'S
PULMONIC EXPECTORANT,

FOR the cure of Coughs, Colds, Consumption of the Lungs, Influenza, Bronchitis, Asthma, Pain in the Breast, spitting of Blood, Whooping Cough, Croup or Hives, Hoarseness, Difficulty of Breathing, and every other disease of the Lung and the Breast.

This invaluable medicine should be in the possession of every family. In a country where the continual and sudden changes of the atmosphere, from heat to cold, and from cold to heat, render the inhabitants extremely liable to diseases of the Lungs and Breast, it is of the most vital importance that every one should be in possession of a remedy that shall at once effectually and permanently cut short those diseases, and restore the patient to health. The first symptom of cold or influenza should be immediately attacked and reduced by some remedy that has power over the disease. The medicine which has the most complete control over these diseases, and will most speedily restore the health of the patient is PEARSON'S PULMONIC EXPECTORANT.

The following Card of three respectable phisicians sets forth the virtues of Dr. Pearson's pulmonic Expectorant. 'Having made use of Dr. Pearson's pulmonic Expectorant, we feel it a duty to recommend it as a safe and effectual cure for the various diseases for which it is intended. We are acquainted with many persons who have been cured of Cough, Bronchitis, pain in the breast and side, spitting blood, palpitation of the heart, and incipient consumption, by its use, and many of them after all other means had failed.'

A. Fearson, M. D. U. S Navy; S. K. Leedem, M. D. Champlain Co., Ohio; W. R. Cadwallader, M. D. U. S. Navy.

Dr. Pearson's Carminative Balsam

Is decidedly the most beneficial remedy for the cure of Dysentary, Cholera Morbus and Summer complaint, that is known to man. Parents will find it the best medicine that can be used for young children and infants. And every person who is travelling in the summer months should not be without a bottle of it in their possession; as it is an infalliable remedy against thr change produced in the system by drinking bad water.

We annex the following certificate of Mrs. A. M. Sanford, of New York, in reference to the Carminative Balsam. We might add a long list, but consider this sufficient.

This is to certify that I have used Dr. Pearson's Carminative Balsam, and confidently believe it to be the best medicine that can be used for the various diseases for which it is recommended, and recommend it to the ladies who are travelling in summer months, and to mothers for the fretting and crying of infants for which it is a certain cure.

MRS. A. M. SANFORD,
No. 160 East Broadway N. Y.

The proprietor of the above valuable medicines, as also of Dr. Pearson's Barber's Embrocation for Horses, being himself a Physician and graduate of one of the best medical schools in the U. S. and having had the advantage of years of experience in an extensive practice, is therefore from the practical knowledge which he has acquired, well qualified to prescribe those remedies, and restore the patient to sound health.

Prepared only by S. A. Pearon M. D., and for sale wholesale and retail, at No. 106 North 4th street Philadelphia. Also, by J. R. Swallow, General Agent, No. 123 Fulton-st. N. Y., by whom all orders for the above medicines will be promptly attended to.

For sale in Plainfield by E. Kirkpatrick, and M. F. Cushing, sold also by Druggists and country storekeepers generally throughout the United States Canadas and West Indies.

GREAT AMERICAN REMEDY.

Vegetable Dyspepsia Bitters.

TO THE PUBLIC,

DR HUTCHINGS would call the attention of all afflicted with dyspepsia, and the various disorders arising from a diseased stomach, to his remedy therefor. His DYSPEPSIA BITTERS will be found, on trial, to contain every property requisite to restore the disordered stomach to a healthy action; to reproduce the lost appetite of the patient, and do away with the periodical nervous headache and general debility consequent on this afflicting disease. Thousands have tested its efficacy, and thousands more are now under treatment; and not one solitary case of failure has yet been reported to him. This is consolatory, and urges him on in his efforts to relieve poor suffering humanity. He could fill a volume with certificates of those who have been permanently cured; but he conceives the testimony of a few well-known citizens will answer every purpose. The reader will find, on looking over the following testimonials, they are not "got up" for the occasion; but bona fide letters from gentlemen who can be seen at any time at their places of business.

The following Certificate is from M. B. Brady, the Celebrated Daguerreotypist:

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness, I was advised to take Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me. I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia. M. B. BRADY,
No. 205 Broadway, N. Y.

From Luther B. Wyman, Esq., late President of the New York Musical Society, now of Brooklyn.

The undersigned was afflicted with the Dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half during a greater portion of which time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself, until he was recommended to try Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, he very soon derived benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well.

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of Hutchings' Bitters for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine.

L. B WYMAN, 38 Burling Slip.

New York, Sept 3 1849.

Dear Sir—My wife having been a great sufferer from dyspepsia, low spirits, palpitation of the heart, and having been cured as I believe by your Bitters, I most cheerfully attest their efficacy: her case was a bad one. In the space of four months she lost her strength and thirty-five pounds of flesh; was compelled to abandon her household affairs: there seemed but little probability of a cure until she began to take your bitters: in one week she was greatly relieved, and in three weeks she was perfectly well, and has since gained thirty pounds. You are at liberty to use this if it will at all further your laudable purpose of circulating this valuable remedy.

With respect, NATHAN SAYRE, No 61 Fourth-st

CHAIN PUMPS.

THE best machine for raising water, in use.—This Pump has many advantages over any other in use on account of its simplicity of construction, being made wholly of wood and galvanized iron, not liable to get out of order or to get deranged in any way. It can never freeze in winter, and can be put in wells of any depth.

It takes less power to work it than any other machine, to raise the same amount of water.

It is never obstructed by gravel or sand; it keeps the water perfectly sweet and fresh; the action of the chain mixes the gasses with the water always keeping it lively and fresh; on ceasing to work it, the water in the tube descends to the level of the water in the well; on commencing to work the pump, the first water that is drawn is from the bottom of the well.

☞ This pump received the premium at the late Essex county fair.

These Pumps may be had at the Pump Factory of S. B. Miller, 340 Broad-street, Newark, N. J.

A SERMON

CONCERNING THE HEAVEN OF ANGELS.

BY SOLYMAN BROWN, A. M.

"The letter killeth; but the spirit giveth life."—[2Cor. iii. 6.

TEXT.—"REJOICE, AND BE EXCEEDING GLAD: FOR GREAT IS YOUR REWARD IN HEAVEN." Matt. v. 12.

The term heaven, with its plural heavens, and all those words in the ancient languages to which it corresponds, are names originally applied by men to the starry firmament—to distinguish the rest of material nature from the earth on which we live. In the book of inspiration, the material universe was not the subject-matter of discourse; but the languages of men were used to express its truths, on a principle of reciprocal correspondence subsisting in every part between the world of matter and the world of mind. This mutual analogy is briefly expressed in the following terms: 'There is nothing in the natural world, which does not exist also in the spiritual world, after a spiritual manner; and there is nothing in the spiritual world, which does not exist in the natural world, after a natural manner.' This universal truth results from the fact that the world, of matter and the world of spirit co-exist as cause and effect: not that the natural universe as well as the spiritual, is not the workmanship of Jehovah; but that the one is created through the medium of the other, just as the body of man is created by the instrumentality of his soul, and would not subsist as an organized human form, but for the presence an active agency of that soul.

That the moral precepts contained in the books of inspiration, are thus conveyed in the languages of men, by correspondencies containing spiritual and not natural truth will be clearly evident, by a reference to the first two verses of the earliest book of the Jewish scriptures. 'In the beginning, God created the heavens and the earth. And the earth was without form and void.' That the term heavens, in this passage, does not denote the heavenly bodies embraced in the science of astronomy is sufficiently clear, when we read onward through the orderly arrangement of the six days of creation, and observe at the close this remark, 'And he made the stars also.'

The term heavens is in the plural, denoting many; and the term earth is in the singular, denoting one: notwithstanding, we are assured that the earths in nature are innumerable.

But of the earth it is said, 'And the earth was without form, and void'—matter, even in chaotic state, could neither exist without form, nor without occupying space. Indeed, the entire chapter is totally a riddle, in any possible application to material things, and yet not more so than any writings of Moses, or the prophets.

In Gen. xix 24, we have an instance of the use of the term heaven in the singular number: 'And the Lord rained upon Sodom and upon Gomorrah brimstone and fire from the Lord out of heaven.' In this passage neither Sodom nor Gomorrah denotes a city of wood, brick, or stone; nor do brimstone and fire denote sulphur and caloric. Neither does heaven imply a point in natural space. vertical to a part of Asiatic Turkey in the zenith of the Dead Sea, in the depths of which many sagacious commentators tell us the very site of these cities was submerged.

But as I address myself to reasen, I will not suppose that reason is so blind as to look without astonishment upon such interpretations.

Concerning this scripture, the epistle of Jude has the following remarkable passage: (7th verse.) 'Even as Sodom and Gomorrah, and the cities about them in like manner, giving themselves over to fornication, and going after strange flesh, are set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire.' To conceive of earthly cities burnt wrth eternal fire, is sufficiently perplexing.

We shall hardly hesitate to believe that the Jews had totally departed from the true method of expounding their scriptures, when we learn from Christ and his Apostles that they had made them of no effect by their traditions; that a numerous sect, the Saducees, denied a ressurrection; and that all conceptions of a future state were so thoroughly extinguished that 'life and immortality were brought to light by the gospel.'

In treating of the social condition of the good and virtuous in a better life, I shall deem it necessary to determine, first.

What heaven is not: and

Where it is not.

The importance of establishing in our minds these negative positions, results from the circumstance that men on earth are always inclining to forget that any thing can be substance except matter; that 'there are spiritual bodies, and that there are natural bodies—bodies celestial and bodies terrestrial; and that the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another.'

In another life, where men are angels, they consider nothing as truly substantial but spirit.

A hasty and superficial philosophy is sometimes ready to object to the admission of spiritual substance as a proper subject of our knowledge, because not the proper object of sensation. This is totally to forget that sensation itself is a property of spirit, and not a quality of matter. The properties of matter are extension, occupying space; weight, obeying gravity; divisibility, submitting to division; vis inertiæ, declining motion without an external force; and attraction, or tendency to unite with other matter. It can be defined and known only by its properties. And the properties of spirit are surely not less definable, nor less remarkable. The properties of spirit are voluntary motion, thought, judgment, reason, memory, love, joy—many passions, many appetites, many activities, to which matter is utterly a stranger. Or is it said, all these are properties, in possession of which, spirit is still concealed from sensation? So also is matter in a thousand forms. Which of our senses appreciates the presence of latent heat, combined light, or insulated electricity?

What philosopher has discovered a property in magnetism, excepting its polarity; and what philosopher can discover that this is a property more palpable or obvious to any of his senses than the tendency of the human soul to life and happiness? Spirit, then, is that which the soul of man may perceive without the intervention of the body, and matter that only, which the soul of man perceives by the intervention of the body.

When I speak, therefore, of heaven in contradistinction to the earth, of spirit in relation to matter, I shall not be informed that I treat of subjects above our knowledge. We know of nothing but from its effects, and of the effects of spirit, we have the example of a teeming universe.

We are first to enquire what heaven is not And in the first place, it is not the material creation. Hence man does not relinquish his relationship to heaven, by leaving the natural world and the natural body.

Again, heaven is not a visible extension in measurable space, for space has reference to matter, and therefore, it is not by any position in space that we attain to heaven. He who would adopt the popular idea of a limited place crowded with men or angels, would lose sight of heaven entirely. The truly intellectual, mind the man of active benevolence, the heart devoted to social and virtuous pleasures, is never less at home than in the midst of thronging multitudes.

In the second place, we are to inquire where heaven is not. It is not in the zenith of any point of this habitable sphere Neither in the north nor in the south, in the east nor in the west.

If the mind looks upwards to the object of its love, and the home of its hopes it is only because height in space, corresponds to that which is elevated in goodness, or interior in affection. It is because Deity is greater than man, and his habitation holier than the world.

We shall proceed to inquire concerning heaven positively.

First, what it is;

And, secondly, where it is.

In relation to the Deity, who is omnipresent, the entire universe as well spiritual as material, that which is in space and that which is out of space, is heaven. Where God is, there truth is, there goodness is and both in active operation, resulting in the perfect blessedness of his nature.

The heaven of Deity is so far the heaven of angels as they become recipients of their proper life from him. But as the heaven of created conciousness, is constantly increasing as well in the quantity as quality of its joys, it will be at once perceived that it stands related to the heaven of Jehovah, as the finite to the infinite, as that which admits progression, to that which is above progression.

Inasmuch then as the heaven inhabited by the Deity, is divine love in its essence; divine wisdom in its form; and divine opetion in its blessedeess; so the heaven of men made perfect, is love, wisdom, and use, existing in themselves by influx from the Lord, in exact proportion to their reception. In other language, the only heaven accessible to created spirits, is a state and condition in which nothing is known but truth, nothing loved but goodness, and nothing done but duty. 'The chief properties of spirits, (says Dr. Watts,) are knowledge and activity; and they are said to be present where they have immediate perception, and use their immediate activity or influence. God, the infinite Spirit, has an immediate and universal presence.'

From this it will be natural to anticipate that we shall find it a state of being, in which there is much to exercise the intelligence—the affections—the multiplied activities of man.

1. There is much to be known. To the knowledge which man retains in memory at his death, will be added all that he has ever known of truth, though long forgotten. Besides this, there is much to be known concerning the world which he has left; for all the works of Deity are the proper study of man in heaven Things relating to the earth on which he lived, and those the most abstruse, to which the period and facilities of mortal life, gave him but partial access, will be successively revealed. The mysteries of providence in all its nicest harmonies, the condition of every world in all the universe of matter, the state of each society in all the universe of spirits, become the objects of perception. How wide—how wonderful the field of intellectual discovery, in the spreading landscape of illimitable creation! 'May they not, (says Watts,) in that upper region, look down, and survey the various contrivances of Divine Wisdom which created all things in these lower worlds, though they dwell in the region where night and shadows are never known, and above the need or use of sunbeams.'

Again, There will be much to be loved On earth, the current of affection is indeed recognized as the charm of our existence. The memory of home records it in the flowers and verdure which it cherished in the scenes of childhood. The fruits of maturer friendship, ripening at every hour in the social intercourse of life, are life's best luxuries. But here on earth these vernal flowers are bruised by the tread of time, these summer fruits are crushed in the grasp of death! Not so in heaven—both Time and Death are expelled for ever from its happy regions. Friendships will be contracted, and loves will be cherished, upon which the morning of Eternity will smile—and smile forever!

The desires of man on earth are seldom gratified, either in fact or fulness But the desires of the spirits of the just, in all their varieties of possible formation, are for ever gratified. In this the mercy of the Lord, and the happiness of heaven, essentially consist. Object after object, and friendship after freindship, perpetually multiply upon the opening faculties of the soul, in the same proportion as knowledge increases in variety, and goodness advances in perfection. 'It is such a perfection, (says Watts,) as admits of great variety of enjoyments and pleasures, according to the various turn and genius of each particular spirit. For perfection does not imply a state of universal and constant uniformity.'

The affinities of man on earth are perpetually sundered both by time and space They who would love most fondly, are often farthest removed from the possibility of fruition. How many hearts are shattered by the conflicting elements of human society? Every thing but affinity is a principle of its artificial union. Pride, and power, and passion, have done every thing to earth but to convert it into hell There must be a portion of truth and goodness, or its character would be lost, as a state of moral liberty.

Unembodied spirits associate by similitude; and hearts will be united that lived on earth in distant solitude, and breathed their loves in painful seperation. Thus the home of virtue shall assemble, in its 'many mansions,' the multiplied affinities of kindred minds.

But, thirdly, if in heaven there is much to be known and much to be loved, so also is there much to be done.

Employment is the life of happiness; the rest of heaven is but a rest from sorrow—from the weariness of mortal passion and mortal indolence. The mind of man can know of no fatigue but that of doing nothing, and acting in opposition to its nature; like the mountain-stream, descending unruffled to the ocean, till it dashes upon rocks, or sleeps in the stagnant pool 'The spirits of the just in heaven, says Dr. Watts, enjoy such a perfection as is consistent with perpetual changes of business and delights. Our active powers shall doubtless have their proper entertainments. It would diminish the happiness of the saints, to be unemployed.'

I adduce these sentiments from the writings of the celebrated Watts, to illustrate the fact, that the doctrine of an active and social heaven, is familiar to a good man's consciousness.

But the employments of men in heaven, are not to be considered as similar to those on earth, except by correspondence. The spiritual activities of the soul can only be conceived of by man on earth when he considers the interior operations of his will and understanding, abstracted from bodily sensation In like manner the occupations and duties of the angels relate to their social character as creations of bright intelligence and elevated affections. resulting in exuberence of joys, from which envy, pride, and selfishness, and all those passions are excluded, which multiply the sorrows of the world.

In saying that duties in heaven are not like the drudgeries in mortal life, but of higher and nobler rank, it follows of necessity, that man, in his better life, will exercise his powers in chosen and favorite pursuits.

Food and raiment, habitations and possessions, proper to his nature as a spirit, are furnished by the Lord, as is denoted by that scripture, 'In my father's house are many mansions.'

As a subject of increasing knowledge, and disinterested love, his energies of noblest action are unimpared and unobstructed by thoughts or efforts for its own aggrandisement.

Whatever be his office—for there are stations, and dignities, and services of charity adapted to each and all, in heaven—its duties are performed in love, in all the relationships of civil and religous, public and domestic life, with all that luxury of joy which exhilerates the heart in brightning the circle of its friendships. With features, tones, and gestures, in which the heart is read, the social circles of angelic society are the very home of love, translucent to all the knowledge within the circuit of creation, and sensitive to all the joys within the consciousnes of virtue.

And is this heaven! Where then can it be found? for my soul would seek it, as the sum of all it can hope—the fulness of all it can enjoy.

Where shall we seek it? The book of nature, the scroll of reason, the volume of experience, the word of God has taught us. Let us listen to the intelligece. 'And he answered them, and said, The kingdom of God cometh not with observation. Neither shall they say, Lo! here, or lo! there; for, behold! the kingdom of God is within you!' Luke xvii 20, 21.

Where shall we seek heaven! In our hearts; in the immage and likeness of God imparted from his love and wisdom He who is like God, is in God, and God in him. The good and honest man is a part of heaven. To know the truth, to love it, to practise it, is to know God, and to love him, and to co-operate with him in the merciful employment of imparting happiness.

Where shall we seek heaven! In our lives; in an active and distinguished benevolence to men, our brethren, regarding the will of Him, who constantly declares, Inasmuch as ye do it unto these my brethren, ye do it unto me.'

In a life of virtuous philanthropy, and filial reverence for God, who has ever failed of anticipating the joys of the upper paradise? Who, with such a life, and such a heart, has failed to mitigate the poignancy of mortal sorrow, and to look on death as a vanquished enemy?

He who worships God as the source of good, and loves his fellow-beings because they are his children, many fall into the grave as calamity as into the arms of the fondest friendship. For no sooner has the stroke of death unsettled the connexión between the spirit and its body, consigning the latter to the earth that gave it, than the senses and perceptions of the godlike man are opened to a new relationship. Another sun burst from another firmament kindred natures gather around the rising spirit, and cheerful voices communicate the joyful tidings of a new-born angel. Nature seems. to him, to celebrate her jubilee—sorrow has fled away! and all he hears, and all he sees, and all he feels, is life, and love, and happiness.

He looks around him, and there is no limitation to his prospect; he looks before him, and there is no termination to his life; he looks within him, and there is no imperfection in his joys!

What can I say, then, to the friends of virtue, to the worshippers of God. and the benefactors of his children? 'Rejoice, and be exceeded glad; for great is your reward in heaven.'

A PITIFUL SIGHT.—It is reported that there is a man residing in a respectable neighborhood (for the credit of the district we withhold the name) who has never taken a newspaper!

RISING IN THE WORLD.—An exchange paper, after announcing that John H. Prentiss, for many years the editor of the Cooperstown (N. Y.) Journal, has retired from that responsible station, adds:

'He was formerly a member of Congress but rapidly rose until he attained a respectable position as an editor—a noble example of perseverance under depressing circumstances.

PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Thursday, January 24, 1850.

☞ Mr Albert D. Drake is our authorised agent to receive subscriptions and advertisments.

Plainfield Lyceum.

The members of the Plainfield Lyceum will meet in Mr. W. W. Davison's school house on Tuesday evening next at 1-4 of 7 o'clock. The question for discussion will be:

"Should the States generally, pass a law prohibiting the travel of public conveyances on Sunday."

☞ The public are respectfully invited to attend.

E. M. DUNN, Sec'y.

☞ Never, until men discard their narrow, party and sectarian creeds, will they enjoy those equal rights, or the pure religion of Christ, upon which they are based. How is it possible for men to enjoy true liberty—equal rights and equal privileges to all, political, religious, and secular—when they are content to quarrel as to who possesses them; thus taking the shadow for the substance; when they substitute names for principles, by calling themselves democrats, whigs, or republicans, while the substance which they intend these names to represent—"whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so unto them: for this is the law and the prophets."—also true democracy—is entirely overlooked?

Men call themselves whigs, democrats, or free-soil, while the principles which they intend to represent by these names are not possessed by either of them.—While men are suffered and suffer themselves to be sold into slavery, even within sight of the Capitol of our country, while the offices of the government are made the stepping-stone to place and power, which is alone used by its possessors for their own aggrandisement; while they continue to charge for journeys never performed and for services never rendered; while speculators are suffered to monoplize the public lands and thus to deprive the poor of a home; while banking incorporations are suffered to purchase their own notes at a discount; while railroad, canal, banking, turnpike, ferry and bridge monopolies or any other exclusive privileges are suffered to exist; they are as far from true democracy or republicanism as liberty is from slavery, as opsosite as fire and water. So also with religious sects, each represent themselves the only true expositors of religion, while their practices, like those of polltical partisans, are as far from its true principles as light from darkness,—as he who said to his father, who commanded him to do his will, I go, but went not—as he who passed the suffering stranger by on the other side—as he who made long prayers, thinking by a multiplicity of words to gain the kingdom of heaven.

While men continue to deceive themselves by worshipping the god of party or sect, they must expect to enjoy liberty or religion only in name. It is very justly observed by Dr. Hebbe the learned historian.

"It was not the brilliant exploits of the conqueror which made him a despot; but rather the maddening shouts of those with whose blood he bought his triumphs! It was not the deception of priests that erected altars to numberless deities, and sunk the nations in dust, at the pretended wrath of impotent gods; but rather the simplicity and folly of the people themselves! Not noble actions, nor accumulated riches, have created the myriads of drones that have fed on the sweat of the industrious classes, in almost every country; but rather, the exaggerated rewards which the people themselves have heaped upon the one, and the contemptible reverence which they have paid to the other! It was not the talents of demagogues, nor their hypocritical adultations of liberty which brought anarchy or tyranny over so many free nations; but rather the vanity of the people themselves who lost sight of their true interests in the sweetness of flattery! It was not the disturbers and transgressors of social regulations which caused the greatest evils to human societies, and made men repent the loss of their natural freedom; but rather, those very regulations, their framers, and those who were the instruments of subjecting their fellow-man to them!"

It is thus that men have ever lost their liberty, their equal rights, the worship of the true God, by worshiping the god of party, the golden calf of sect. When will men be governed by reason in the selection of their rulers and law makers, and when will they enact laws founded upon their only true basis, equal rights to all? Never, until men discard their party and sectarian creeds, and do unto others as they would have them do unto them.

☞ Mr. Calhoun is seriously indisposed, and many fear fatal consequences.

☞ We learn by our exchange papers, that Plowman, who murdered his wife some nine months ago, in Maine, is sentenced to be hung. It is stated that he is over sixty years of age, and has been in prison nearly nine months awaiting his trial; we also learn from the same source that not one minister of the Gospel, although there are nearly a score in the city, (Portland) has visited him in that time! How different is such conduct from the conduct of him whom they profess to serve, who went about doing good; who came to save those who are lost, to call sinners to repentence—"the whole need not a physician but they that are sick"—who healed the sick, restored sight to the blind; who reproved and pardoned the guilty with such gentle mildness, yet with such convincing reproof that they went and sinned no more. What a contrast with the conduct of those alluded to above, by and from whom the teachings of the sectarian creeds of our day have shut out nearly all kindness and humanity from the human heart.

Christ said, when questioned by the scribes and pharisees, who had brought unto him a woman taken in adultery—"taken in the very act"—who said unto him, "Moses in the law commanded us, that such should be stoned: but what sayest thou?—he said, "He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her."—and they, "being convicted by their own conscience, went out one by one,—and Jesus was left alone, and the woman standing in the midst."—and he said unto her, "Woman, where are thine accusers? hath no man condemned thee?—"she said, No man, Lord.—Neither will I condemn thee, go and sin no more."

It will be perceived by a reference to the advertisement of Mr. John Terhune & Son., in another column, that they are prepared to furnish Merchants, Teachers, and the public generally, with Books, Stationery, &c. on as favorable terms as can be had in Now York or elsewhere. They have a large stock which they are determined to sell at prices which shall induce purchasers to become permanent customers. Call and see.

☞ At no place, with which we are acquainted, can the ladies purchase dry goods so cheap as at Lane & Porter's, 65 Catherine-st. N. Y. It is really astonishing the amount of goods these gentlemen sell. When a person has once become their customer, their bargains always induce them to call again, as they are convinced that they are fairly dealt by; they have but one price, which defies competition from any other store in the city. These facts should induce others when visiting the city to purchase any description of dry goods, to give them a call.

☞ Reader, are you aware of the cause of your being laughed at by the boys the other day? Undoubtedly not, or you would not have given them occasion. The young lady in your company, and whom you undoubtedly anticipate making your wife, had on a most beautiful bonnet, and the contrast between it and your old hat was indeed too much for the gravity of any youth; an empty barrel of charcoal could not have resisted it! If your name is ————, the person laughed at—take our advice; the first time you visit New Brunswick, call at Mr. R. A. Vanarsdale's, in Peace-st (see advertisement) and purchase one of his superior—being of his own manufacture, are warranted,—fashionable hats.—They are irresistable; you will then stand some chance of securing the coveted prize, the owner of the beautiful bonnet. If you are not the person reader, beware, you may have cause to fear being placed in a similar predicament, in that case take the advice given above, and if not the person, you may be enabled thereby to 'cut him out,' and thus secure for yourself the belle with the beautiful bonnet.

Common Schools.

The Superintendent of Puplic Schools made a very interesting report to the Legislature, on Thursday morning, which was ordered to be printed. The following is a synopsis:

The 19 counties of this State are divided into 180 townships, in which are about 1665 school districts. Reports have been received from 165 townships, leaving only 15 unreported. The number of children attending school is 70,553 being an increase of 3,646 over last year. The amount of money raised in the several counties for educational purposes is $119,351,39, being $17,381,06, over the amount raised last year. It is recommended that permission be granted to the township to raise by tax a sum equal to four times that given by the State. It is recommended that some general provision be made by which the township desiring it may establish Free Schools without the necessity of Special Legislation. It is recommended that some provision be made in the law by which the inhabitants of School Districts may be enabled to purchase sites and build School Houses and repair the same. The establishment of a Moral Reform Shool for rhe reception and reformation of Juvenile Delinquents is recommended.

The report speaks highly of the officers and teachers, and the increased interest on the subject of Common Schools generally throughout the State.—

BOSTON, Jan. 18.

The grand jury to-day, after hearing all the evidence, found a true bill against Professor Webster for the murder of Dr. Parkman. The examination before the grand jury was not wholly ex parte; several witnesses were examined who said they saw Dr Parkman after his disappearance.

XXXIst. CONGRESS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.

SENATE.—Mr. Seward presented a memorial for some National arbitration to avoid the evils of war.

Mr Pearce, a memorial praying for the establishment of a bureau of Agriculture.

Mr. Hunter gave notice of a bill to abolish the Home Department.

Mr. Cass proceeded to address the Senate on the question of the Wilmot Proviso.

Mr. Cass arose and said—

There are two principal questions involved in the controversy respecting the Wilmot Proviso, as indeed there are in all the Legislation of Congress: first, whether that measures is constitutional, and next, if constitutional, whether it is expedient. The observations I propose to offer will be directed chiefly to the constitutional queston, though before I close, I shall submit some brief remarks upon the expediency of excluding this power, if we possess it!

Extracts from the Presidents Message on California:

It is understood that the people of the western part of Californis have formed a plan of a State Constitution and will soon submit the same to the Judgment of Congress and apply for admission as a State This course on their part, though in accordance with, was not adopted exclusively in consequence of any expression of my wishes, inasmuch as measures tending to this end had been promoted by the officers sent there by my predecessor, and were already in active progress of execution before any communication reached me from California. If the proposed Constitution shall, when submitted to Congress, be found to be in compliance with the requisitions of the Constition of the United States, I earnestly recommend that it may receive the sanction of Congress.

The part of California not included in the proposed State of that name, is believed to be uninhabited, except in a settlement of our countrymen in the vicinity of Salt Lake.

A claim has been advanced by the State of Texas to a very large portion of the most populous district of the Territory commonly designated by the name of New Mexico. If the people of New Mexico had formed a plan of State Government for that Territory, as ceded by the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, and had been admitted by Congress as a State, our Constitution would have afforded the means of obtaining an adjustment of the question of boundary with Texas by a Judicial decision.

At present, however, no judicial tribunal has the power of deciding that question, and it remains for Congress to devise some mode for its adjustment—Meanwhile I submit to Congress the question whether it would be expedient, before such adjustment, to establish a Territorial Government which, by including the District so claimed, would practically decide the question adversely to the State of Texas—excluding it would decide it in her favor. In my opinion such a course would not be expedient, especially as the people of this Territory still enjoy the benefit and protection of their municipal laws originally derived from Mexico, and have a military force stationed there to protect them against the Indians.

It is undoubtedly true that the property, lives, liberty and religion of the people of New-Mexico are better protected than they ever were before the treaty of cession. Should Congress, when California shall present herself for an incorporation into the Union, annex a condition to her admission as a State affecting her domestic institutions contrary to the wishes of her people, and even compel her temporarily to comply with it, yet the State could change her Constitution at any time after admission, when to her it should seem expedient.

As is to be expected any attempt to deny to the people of the State the rights of self-government in a matter which peculiarly affects themselves will infallibly be regarded by them as an invasion of their right, and upon the principle laid down in our own Declaration of Independence, they will certainly be sustained in their resistance against it by the great mass of the American people. To assert that they are a conquered people and must submit to the will of their conquerors in this regard will meet with no cordial response among American freemen. Great numbers of them are our own countrymen not inferior to the rest in intelligence and patriotism; and no language of menance to restrain them in the exercise of an undoubted right substantially guaranteed to them by the treaty of session itself, shall ever be uttered by me or encouraged and sustained by persons acting under my authority.

Supernatural Knocking.

A "Knocking at the the Door," at nights which has alarmed the good people of Rochester, who attributed it to spiritual agency, is explained in the Americal Journal of Science by Professor Loomis, as the effect of the vibration of a dam over which water falls. Professor Loomis describes this vibrating as producing sounds like a loud knocking on the doors and walls of buildings, and gives a particular account of the phenomena, as observod at the dams of Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio; East Windsor Conn.; Springfield Mass.; Northampton, Mass.; Gardiner, Maine, and Hartford, Conn. He attributes the vibration to the friction of the running water which falls over the dam, and shows how these souds are transmitted to a distance by the earth, and produce that sudden and alarming knocking sound in dwellings. Professor Loomis has pointed out very simple and easy methods of checking this vibratory action in the dams, and the people of Rochester who have been trouble by an invisible spirit will find it easily exorcised by mechanical means.—*Sci. A WORK OF BENEVOLENCE.—John M. Spear, known by some as the "prisoner's friend," sums up his work of love for the past year, as follows: He has travelled 4,656 miles, for the purpose of assisting the unfortunate; has lectured 83 times, and made 70 prison visits; he has been bail to the amount of $1,380; has assisted 409 persons in various ways; he has distributed 4,824 copies of various publications among prisoners and others.

In accomplishing the above work he has paid out $1,397 95; and received during that time, from various benevolent sources, $1,316 80, which shows a draft on Mr. Spear's own pocket, of a small balance."

Perpetual Motion Again.

The Maine Farmer and Gazette states that Mr. S. B Walton, of Livermore Falls in that State, has at last invented perpetual motion, that it can move a clock, and "has been in operation, unless stopped by some foreign agent, for a year or more."

There are three perpetual motions at present in the field, one in Georgia, one in Pennsylvania and one in Maine. When will men be wise:—no machine can give out more power than it receives.—Sci. American.

LEGISLATURE.

Trenton, Jan'y. 21. 1850.

The Legislature resumed its session this afternoon after a recess since Friday night, with a tolerably full Senate and a little over a majority of members in the House. Nothing of importance has occurred in either branch. In the Senate, a petition was presented in favor of a Bank at Paterson with $200,000 capital to be secured by Government and State stocks. In the Houee, several petitions were presented to suppress travelling on the Sabbath, and a bill was introduced to charter the Somerville and New Brunswick Railroad. The bill to change the name of the 3d Baptist church in Keyport, (the church having been taken out of Middletown by a division of the township,) was passed, and the supplement to the act authorizing the President and Directors of the Mechananics' Bank of New Brunswick to settle its affairs—the object now being to wind up the corncern—was orderod to a final reading.

A Message was received from the Governor. enclosing the first annual report of Allexander Vattemare the agent of N. J. for the international literary and scientific exchanges, with a catalogue of valuable books presented to the State through him.

The proceedings of the Legislature already begin to be more than usually interesting. Two bills providing for a General Banding Law have been introduced, one in the Senate by Mr. Cassedy of Hudson County, and the other in the House by Mr. Hoxey of Passaic. We have not seen either of those bills, but understand they differ materially in their provisions, chiefly in the kind of security the Corporations shall give and for the purposes of uniting the strength of the advocates of the two and to secure the passage of a General Law, a resolution has been reported to refer the matter to a joint committee of both Houses with instructions to report a bill. The committee consists of Messrs Cassedy, Olden, Hoxey, Hopper and Brown. In the mean time all actions upon the pending bank and railroad applications has very properly been postponed until the 10th of February next, when it is to be hoped the Legislature will be able to mature and unite upon a General Law doing away the necessity of legislating with reverence to all special applications.

The bill introduced into the House we understand to be a copy of the General Banking Law now sufficiently in force in the State of New York, requiring a deposite of State and Governmont Stocks as security, and the bill introduced to the Senate differs from it, in that it allows the deposite of bonds, mortgages county and township securities, instead of the State and Government stockholders personally liable &c. The stock securities only succeeded well in New York: bonds and mortgages were not so so readily negotiable. Either would furnish a better system than the present.—Sussex Herald.

Social Equation.

It took The Mirror to perpetrate the following combination of philosophy and profundity;

"FASHIONABLE EXTRAVIGANCE.—At a private party recently given in one of the up-town palaces, the refreshment bill is said to have amounted to over $2,000, and the Japonica bill to $1,000. Well, what of it? Let the millionaire scatter his money profusely. It all goes to restore the equilibrium of property; and the only possible evil that can arise from it, is the temptation to those who can't afford to exhaust the Japonica market, whenever they give a party, to go beyond their means. The golden stream flowing from one man's exchequer, falls into another man's cup; and while one man is sliding down the ladder of wealth another is climbing up, and this eternal sesaw of fortune keeps all the world in ballance."

We are dubious about this "see-saw" keeping "all the world in ballance." The nabob who knew no better use for his money than to spend $3,000 and more of it on a single party is in one of the scales; the Editor of The Mirror, with a $2,000 office and some other nice fixings, in ditto; we also have nothing personally to complain of; but when we look into the other scale, and see there ten thousands of poor women, day after day driven to infamy because they cannot acquire by any sort of honest industry the $2 per week which is the lowest sum with which they can keep soul and body together—when we read the Police Chief's report, showing how thousands of poor children are daily driven forth from the cellars and wretched rookeries of this Christian emporium to gain by theiving or the most horrid pollutions the means of their own and their parents' subsistence—when we know and reflect that not less than Fifty Thousand inhabitants of this City are today destitute and out of work, living from hand to mouth on public or private charity, and falling daily from want into crime, we find it utterly impossible to "ballance" the world's good and ill fortune, as our neighbor so readily does—or thinks he does. The Old Book says (Prov. xi. 1,) that "a false ballance is an abomination to the lord." and our neighbor should be careful and not be caught using that sort.—N. Y. Tribune

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

A curious dialogue, 'tis said,
Took place among the ladies,
Of DRY GOODS AND GROCERIES,
Where the best place to trade is!

Mrs. A. S. and Mrs B,
Declared they knew where was good T.
Mrs L and O. wished to know,
If anywhere on Earth they'd go!
For, good T. was hard to get,
They neither had had good as yet.
B. S. and A., that is the Mrs.,
Knew also where to get their dresses,
And sugar, ribbons, and molasses,
Carpets, earthenware, looking-glasses,
Muslin, over-shoes, and gloves,
Blankets, salaratus, nutmegs, cloves,
Umberellas, tin pans, and toys,
Beautiful ones for girls or boys;
In fact, everything that's eat, drank or wore,
You'l find it at D. BULLMAN'S Store!

You'l find this just as 'tis said
If 'tis not, then you need not trade;
My thanks for the past to all are due,
While a happy New Year I wish to you.

IMPORTANT TO HORSEMEN.

DR. PEARSON'S BARBER'S

EMBROCATION

IS decidedly the best preparation that can be used for the cure of sprains, bruises, cuts, galls, splint, curb, ringbone, spavin, stiffness of the joints, &c. It is an article which should be in the hands of every horseman, and no stable should be without a bottle of it Price only 25 and 50 cents per bottle.

The following is the testimony of Mr Schenck, proprietor of the "Somerset House," Somerville, N J., a gentleman well known to horsemen in New Jersey.

DR. S. A. PEARSON: Dear Sir—I feel it a duty which I owe to you and the community at large, or rather that part of the community who possess, or in any way have charge of Horses, to say, that I have used your Embrocation,' for horses. It is decidedly the best preparation that I have ever used, or have any knowledge of for the various diseases which it is recommended.

I also know a great number of my friends who have used it—and they all say, that it is the best medicine for horses that they have ever used. I would confidently recommend every person who has a horse should keep a bottle of this valuable Embrocation in his stable.

Yours respectfully, AB'M. C. SCHENCK.

Pain Killer!

A medical preparation by the name of the PAIN KILLER, has been put into the market by the Empire Company in new York, which bids fair to cast all other preparations into the shade It cannot, perhaps, be better described than by stating that it is in a liquid form, and is adapted to internal and external use, holding instantaneous control over all Nervous Affections, Rheumatism, Croup, Inflammations, Tooth and Ear ache, Burns, Bruises, Sprains, Sores, &c. Empire Company, No. 53 Courtland st.

Deaf Persons

Can be made to hear in almost Every case! by proper treatment, but they should remember that the organization of the Ear is the most delicate structure of the body, (except the eye,) and hence is oftener injured than benefitted by syringes The ACOUSTIC OIL sold by the Empire Company, 53 Courtland-st is the surest and most successful article ever known for cures.

Chemical Cleansing Fluid.

Manufactured and sold by the Empire Company, is to every person who washes or has washing done, of very great and essential service. It obviates more than half the ordinary labor and also the wear to clothes. It sets the color fast to fading calicoes, and answers as well for cambrics muslins, and woolen goods.

Ornamental and Useful.

The Laundry Starch Polish is used to give that peculiar polish to collars, bosoms and linens, that nothing else can give; besides, it greatly facilitates the ironing. The genuie has the stamp of the Empire Company, No 53 Courtland-st.

Be sure about Vermifuges!

Some kill the CHILDREN! as well as the WORMS, and the only safe article that kills, the WORMS, and not the CHILDREN, is the one made and sold by the Empire Company, at 53 courtland-st.

The Empire Company.

Is the only one of the kind incorporated by the Legislature of this state as a Stock Company, and under such legislative enactments as to make the stock always at par, and the Company clear of liabilities. CHAIN PUMPS.

THE best machine for raising water, in use — This Pump has many advantages over any other in use on account of its simplicity of construction, being made wholly of wood and galvanized iron, not liable to get out of order or to get deranged in any way. It can never freeze in winter, and can be put in wells of any depth

It takes less power to work it than any other machine, to raise the same amount of water

It is never obstructed by gravel or sand; it keeps the water perfectly sweet and fresh: the action of the chain mixes the gasses with the water always keeping it lively and fresh: on ceasing to work it, the water in the tube descends to the level of the water in the well: on commencing to work the pump, the first water that is drawn is from the bottom of the well.

☞ This pump received the premium at the late Essex county fair

These Pumps may be had at the Pump Factory of S. B. Miller, 340 Broad-street, Newark, N. J.

GREAT AMERICAN REMEDY.

Vegetable Dyspepsia Bitters.

TO THE PUBLIC,

DR HUTCHINGS would call the attention of all afflicted with dyspepsia, and the various disorders arising from a diseased stomach, to his remedy therefor. His DYSPEPSIA BITTERS will be found, on trial, to contain every property requisite to restore the disordered stomach to a healthy action; to reproduce the lost appetite of the patient, and do away with the periodical nervous headache and general debility consequent on this afflicting disease. Thousands have tested its efficacy, and thousands more are now under treatment; and not one solitary case of failure has yet been reported to him. This is consolatory, and urges him on in his efforts to relieve poor suffering humanity. He could fill a volume with certificates of those who have been permanently cured; but he conceives the testimony of a few well-known citizens will answer every purpose. The reader will find, on looking over the following testimonials, they are not "got up" for the occasion; but bona fide letters from gentlemen who can be seen at any time at their places of business.

The following Certificate is from M. B. Brady, the Celebrated Daguerreotypist:

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness, I was advised to take Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me. I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia M B BRADY.

No. 205 Broadway, N Y.

From Luther B Wyman, Esq, late President of the New York Musical Society, now of Brooklyn.

The undersigned was afflicted with the Dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half during a greater portion of which time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself, until he was recommended to try Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, he very soon derived benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well.

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of Hutchings' Bitters for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine.

L. B WYMAN, 38 Burling Slip.

New York, Sept 3 1849

Dear Sir—My wife having been a great sufferer from dyspepsia, low spirits, palpitation of the heart, and having been cured as I believe by your Bitters, I most cheerfully attest their efficacy: her case was a bad one In the space of four months she lost her strength and thirty-five pounds of flesh; was compelled to abandon her household affairs: there seemed but little probability of a cure until she began to take your bitters: in one week she was greatly relieved, and in three weeks she was perfectly well, and has since gained thirty pounds. You are at liberty to use this if it will at all further your laudable purpose of circulating this valuable remedy

DOCT. PEARSON'S

PULMONIC EXPECTORANT,

FOR the cure of Coughs, Colds, Consumption of the Lungs, Influenza, Bronchitis, Asthma, Pain in the Breast, spitting of Blood, Whooping Cough, Croup or Hives, Hoarseness, Difficulty of Breathing, and every other disease of the Lung and the Breast.

This invaluable medicine should be in the possession of every family. In a country where the continual and sudden changes of the atmosphere, from heat to cold, and from cold to heat, render the inhabitants extremely liable to diseases of the Lungs and Breast, it is of the most vital importance that every one should be in possession of a remedy that shall at once effectually and permanently cut short those diseases, and restore the patient to health. The first symptom of cold or influenza should be immediately attacked and reduced by some remedy that has power over the disease. The medicine which has the most complete control over these diseases, and will most speedily restore the health of the patient is

PEARSON'S PULMONIC EXPECTORANT.

The following Card of three respectable phisicians sets forth the virtues of Dr Pearson's pulmonic Expectorant. 'Having made use of Dr. Pearson's pulmonic Expectorant, we feel it a duty to recommend it as a safe and effectual cure for the various diseases for which it is intended We are acquainted with many persons who have been cured of Cough, Bronchitis, pain in the breast and side, spitting blood, palpitation of the heart, and incipient consumption, by its use, and many of them after all other means had failed'

A Pearson, M. D. U. S Navy; S. K. Leedem, M. D. Champlain Co, Ohio; W. R. Cadwallader, M. D. U. S. Navy.

Dr. Pearson's Carminative Balsam

Is decidedly the most beneficial remedy for the cure of Dysentary, Cholera Morbus and Summer complaint, that is known to man. Parents will find it the best medicine that can be used for young children and infants And every person who is travelling in the summer months should not be without a bottle of it in their possession: as it is an infalliable remedy against the change produced in the system by drinking bad water

We annex the following certificate of Mrs. A M. Sanford, of New York, in reference to the Carminative Balsam We might add a long list, but consider this sufficient.

This is to certify that I have used Dr Pearson's Carminative Balsam, and confidently believe it to be the best medicine that can be used for the various diseases for which it is recommended, and recommend it to the ladies who are travelling in summer months, and to mothers for the fretting and crying of infants for which it is a certain cure

MRS A M SANFORD.

No. 160 East Broadway N. Y.

The proprietor of the above valuable medicines, as also of Dr. Pearson's Barber's Embrocation for Horses, being himself a Physician and graduate of one of the best medical schools in the U S. and having had the advantage of years of experience in an extensive practice, is therefore from the practical knowledge which he has acquired, well qualified to prescribe those remedies, and restore the patient to sound health

Prepared only by S. A. Pearon M D, and for sale wholesale and retail, at No 106 North 4th street Philadelphia Also, by J. R. Swallow, General Agent, No. 123 Fulton-st N. Y., by whom all orders for the above medicines will be promptly attended to.

For sale in Plainfield by E Kirkpatrick, and M. F Cushing, sold also by Druggists and country storekeepers generally throughout the United States Canadas and West Indies

Life.

Well may it be asked what is life? In the whole mass of created intelligences that have peopled the wide world from the fall of man to the present, this has remained an unsolved problem. Notwithstanding the similarity that pervades mind; notwithstanding the passions of the human heart are so alike in their aspirations, still from the various influences which are afloat upon the turbulent waves of life's tumultuous sea, guiding the destinies of men; to each from the sportive infant to the aged pilgrim about to exchange his clayey tenements for an immortal garb, life appears different.

Look at the innocent child rejoicing in the sunlight of his happiness, his heart attuned with the sweet harmony of nature while his infantile countenance bears testimony of the joys which swell his bosom, unconscious of the world of cares and anxieties to which old time is rapidly bearing him onward, and dreaming away his hours in pleasantness, he feasts on the happiness of the past and anticipates bright prospects in the future; to him life has naught but happiness; then again comes the aspirant youth with disposition active and ardent, just ready to unfold to the world the productions of a cultivated intellect; worldly ambition is the ruling power which swerves his actions and governs his destiny, and to the mighty monarch all his energies are subservient; much contentment reigns not in his bosom for his spirit is restless, desiring to wing its flight to the happy land which is pictured on the imagination; for this he toils while the dense clouds of trouble and care which seem to envelop him disperse, leaving the destined prize almost within his grasp; but no sooner does he attempt to seize it than a whirlwind of misfortune obstructs his passage, leaving him to sink into the water of despair, or to nerve himself with increased power to surmount the mighty impediments and endeavor to reach that point where his ambition would feign carry him; thus he labours until he has finally reached the summit of that giant mount, at whose pedestal his outstripped comrades gaze with envied admiration; but though he has experienced his most ardent anticipations, yet he has just arrived in the realms of discontent; his frail bark will yet be tossed on the billowy deep whose surface is ruffled by the fierce winds which Public Opinion and Worldly Fame have produced, until his mortal frame shall have discharged its office and moulder into dust; thus unrestrained ambition which aspires alone for worldly greatness brings not happiness in its train; it is always devoid of that which can content the mind and give peace and comfort to the soul; this is no less true with the aspirant youth, who anticipates ere long to dwell on the lofty fabric erected by his own intellectual endeavors, than with the more feeble minded who perchance may be induced to participate in the vanities and follies of a deceitful world, thinking to satiate the burnings of his discontented soul by drinking freely at the fount of earthly joys; but human nature is widely diversified; there are those engraven with the image of humanity incapable of contending in the intellectual world; they breathe in their souls an atmosphere impregnated with the taints of corruption and vice, which have poisoned the gentle buds of innocence and have nourished and sustained by their infectious vapours the seeds of malice and discontent; they live indeed, but are dead to the true pleasures which the precious boon of life is designed to impart, while their minds are quickened to deeds of wickedness and murder until they have sunk deep in the vortex of misery. Then, what is life? Heaven's most precious gift which we know not how to appreciate, until its lamp is fast fading and about to be extinguished; though the degredation into which man has fallen has turned the blessings of God into a curse, yet beauty and true happiness crown the existence of the soul with the body; then how shall we preserve this precious gift pure and uncontaminated? How will we render life pleasant and productive of unceasing happiness? The soul replies, piety and religion alone can restrain the firey ardour of man's ambition, uproot the mighty monster vice from the human heart and implant therein all the lovely attributes which crown the angelic host. Had our blood stained warriors, whose names will ever be engraven on the memory of succeeding generations, imbibed the true spirit of religion and combined those mighty energies which have made them illustrious among combattants, in ameliorating the condition of mankind and in endeavoring to place the world on a truly moral and intellectual basis, their regenerating influence would have been exhaled into the vitals of their posterity and choked the huge serpent vice, whose poisonous fang is felt throughout the civilized world. Such an one was the renowned Alexander, and though endowed with a gigantic intellect, though all nations lay bleeding at his feet, yet devoid of the true principal of Christianity, he fell a sin-cursed slave to his vicious propensities. On the other hand behold those ancient patriarchs whose hearts abounded with the love of the beautiful and the good, whose affections were not centered in the god of this world, who desired not to immortalize their names on the pages of military renown, but faithful to their creator they rejoiced in the pleasures which life affords, and in the anticipation of their continuance throughout the circling rounds of eternity. Thus it is even now and thus it ever will be as long as immutable power presides over the actions of men.

That person, who has deep implanted in his bosom the holy seeds of integrity and virtue, who has established for his rule of action a high Christian standard, has already commenced an eternity upon Earth, his hopes brightens as he approaches his great and final doom and he is now chanting those anthems of adoration which will reecho throughout the boundless ages of Eternity. *

KATE.

A THRILLING LOVE STORY.

'Faster, faster! your horses creep like snails, drive for your life!' cried the impatient Morley, as tha noble animals he so slandered clashed along the pebbly turnpike road, while the sparkles flew from their iron hoofs like a flight of fire flies. The postillion, with voice and whip put them to the top of their speed: and the chaise, in its rapid course, left behind it a trail of light, as though the wheels had been ignited

A high and steep hill in front, at length, enforced a more morderate gait, whem Morley, as if struck by a sudden reccollection, turned his head toward his companion, a lovely young female, who pale, silent and motionless, reclined on his shoulders.

'Kate, my love,' said Morley, tenderly, 'I fear this will prove too much for your delicate frame.'

There was no reply. Morley leaned his face towards hers, and by the moonbeams saw that her features were fixed, her open eyes gazing on vacancy, while the tears, which had recently streamed from them, seemed congenial upon her bloodless cheeks. 'God of heaven!' exclaimed Morley, 'what means this! Kate, beloved, adored! do you not hear me? will you not speak to me--to Morley, your Morley.'

The name he utterred like a charm, dissolved the spell that bound her. A long drawn sigh, as if struggling from a breaking heart, escaped her cold quivering lips, a fresh fountain of tears burst forth; and with an hysteric sob, she fell upon the bosom of her lover. The alarmed, but enraptured Morley folded her in his arms' and bent to kiss away her tears—when with a sudden start, she disengaged herself from his embrace, and, drawn back, she looked wildly and eagerly in his face.

'Morley,' said she, in a voice of thrilling tone, 'do you love me!'

'Dearest, best Kate,' he replied, 'do you, can you doubt it?'

'Do you love me Morley,' she repepeated with increased earnestness.

'Truly—devoted—madly!' cried Morley, on his knees. 'By the heavens that is shining over us——'

'No more oaths—enough of protestations. Are you willing, by an action, at this moment, to prove that I am truly dear to you, Morley?'

'I am, though it carry with it my destruction!'

'I ask not your destruction—I implore you to prevent mine! Return, Morley, return!' Morely gazed at her as if doubting his sense of hearing.

'Return Kate?'

'Return instantly!'

'Kate are you serious—are you,' he might have added, 'in your senses,' but she interrupted him.

'I am serious—I am not mad, Morley; no nor inconsistent, nor fickle,' she subjoined, reading the impression that was rising on Morley's countenance. 'That I love, and in that love am incapable to change, do not Morley, insult me by doubting even by a look. But, O! if you love me as you ought, as you have sworn you do, as a man of honor, I implore you to take me back to my father——'

'To your father!' exclaimed Morley, almost unconscious of what he uttered, so astonished was he.

'Ay, to my father, my grey-headed, my doting, my confiding father; take me to him before his heart is broken by the child he loves! I have been with him,' she cried in a wild agony, even now, as I lay in your arms, spell-bound in my trance, whilst the carriage rolled on to my perdition! I could not move—I could not speak, but I knew where I was, and whither I was hurrying; yet even then was I with my father,' she cried with a loud voice and look of supernatural solemnity; 'he lay on his death-bed, his eye turned upon me—his fixed and glaring eye, it rested upon me, as I lay in your arms—he cursed me, and died! His malediction yet rings in my ears—his eye is now upon me! Morley, for the love of heaven, ere it be too late—'

'Compose yourself, my beloved—my own Kate!'

'Do you still hesitate!' she cried, 'would you still soothe my frantic soul with words? What shall bind her to a husband who could abandon her father!——what power may transform the renegade daughter into the faithful wife! Morley as you hope for mercy, do not, do not destroy the being who loves you—who asks you to preserve her life!' Morley caught her as she sank at his feet; and she remained in his arms in a state of insensibility! He was confounded—subdued!

The fatigued horses had labored about midway up the acclivity, when, when Morley called to the postillion.

'Turn your horses heads;' he cried, 'we shall return! The steeds seemed to acquire renewed vigor from the alteration in their course and were proceeding at a brisk pace on their return, when Kate revived.

'Where am I?—whither am I carried?' she exclaimed.

'To your father, my beloved,' whispered Morley.

'To my father, Morley, to my father!—can it be!—but no I will not doubt; you never deceived me—you cannot! God bless you, Morley. God bless you, my dear, dear Morley!' And with her pure arms around his neck, she imprinted a sweet kiss upon his lips, and, dissolved in delicious tears, sank with confidence of conscious innocence upon his bosom. The etherial influence of virtue fell like a balm upon the tumultuous feelings of the lovers; and never, in the wildest moment of passion—not even when he first heard the avowal of love from his heart's selected—had Morley felt so triumphantly happy!

* * * *

'Where is he? is he alive—let me see him—is he well shriekad Kate, as she rushed in the house of her father.

'For whom do you enquire, madam,' coldly asked the female she addressed, the maiden sister of Kate's father.

'For whom do you enquire, madam,' coldly asked the female she addressed, the maiden sister of Kate's father.

'Aunt, dear aunt, do not speak to me thus! I am not what you think me. But my father—my father! is he alive? Is he well? O, dear aunt, have pity on me? I am repentant—I am innocent?'

'In one word Kate, are you married?'

'I am not!'

'Heaven be praised! Follow me—your father is not well!'

'Quick! Quick! before it is too late!' And the distracted girl rushed into the room, and knelt at her father's side.

'Father do not avert your face! Father I am your own Kate; I am restored to you as I left you! By the years of love that have passed between us, forgive the folly—the offence--the crime of a moment! By the memory of my mother—'

'Cease, girl! cease! said the old man, endeavoring, through the weakness of age and infirmity, and the workings of organized feelings, to be firm, forbear, and answer me truly; is this gentleman your husband?'

Kate was about to reply, but Morley stepped forward. 'I am not,' said Morley 'blessed with that lady's hand; she has refused it, until it is given with your sanction; and without that sanction, dearly as I love her, and hopeless as I may be of your consent, I will never hereafter ask it.'

'Do you pledge your word to this young man?'

'My sacred word, as a man of honor. I may have inherited your hate, but I'll not deserve it!'.

'Children, you have subdued me! exclaimed the father. 'Morley, my daughter is yours!' Morley seized the old man's hand, scarcely believing the scene before him to be real

'My father! said the weeping Kate, on her knees, her arm around his neck, her innocent cheek pressed to his. The good aunt partook of the general joy, and even Kate's favorite dog seemed to thank her father for his kindness to his dear mistress. The happy father sat with an arm around his daughter's waist, and, as he pressd her lover's hand, he said—

'Behold in all this the goodness of God! Behold the blessings that follow the performance of our duties. Your father, young gentleman, before you saw the light of heaven, had entailed my hate upon all his offspring. I had nourished the bitter feeling even against you, who had never offended me, and whom every one else loves. This very day the cherished hostility of years had given way before my desire to secure my daughter's happiness. I felt that age was creeping on me, and but the morning of this blessed day, I had resolved over this holy book to prove my contrition for my sinful harboring of hatred towards my fellow creatures by uniting you, my children, in marriage. The tidings of my daughter's elopement scattered to the winds all my better thoughts, and revived my worst in tenfold strength. I felt, at least thought so, the approach of my malady to a region where it would soon prove fatal. No time was to be lost; my will was hastily drawn out, I bequeathed my beggared daughter, but the father's curse. It would have been signed this night, for over this book I had taken an oath never to forgive her who could abandon her father.'

'Oh my father!' interrupted Kate, to whom the horrible images of her trance returned; 'in pity cease, my dear father.'

'Bless you, forever bless you, my ever excellent Kate, your filial obedience has prolonged your father's existence.'

MAN has the power of imitating every motion but that of flight. To effect these, he has, in maturity and health, sixty bones in his head, sixty in his thighs and legs, sixty-three in his arms and hands, and sixty-seven in his trunk. He has four hundred and thirty-four muscles. His heart makes sixty-four pulsations in a minute; and therefore three thousand eight hundred and forty in an hour, ninety-two thousand one hundred and sixty in a day. There are also three complete circulations of his blood in the short space of an hour; An elk can run a mile and a half in seven minutes; an antelope a mile in a minute. The wildmule of Tartary has a greater speed than that; an eagle can fly fifty-four miles an hour, and a Canary falcon can even reach a greater distance in that space of time. A violent wind travels sixty miles an hour, sound one thousand one hundred and forty-two feet in a second.

PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Thursday, January 30, 1850.

☞ Mr Albert D. Drake is our authorised agent to receive subscriptions and advertisments.

Plainfield Lyceum.

The members of the Plainfield Lyceum will meet in Mr. W. W. Davison's school house on Tuesday evening next at 1-4 of 7 o'clock. The question for discussion will be:

"Should discussions on all subjects be encouraged."

☞ The public are respectfully invited to attend.

E. M. Dunn, Sec'y.

Lectures to the Young.

The Rev. S. J. Drake will deliver a lecture to the Young at the M. E. Church in this village on Sunday evening next. These lectures—this being the second of a series proposed to be delivered by the Pastors of our several Churches for the benefit of the young—if received in the spirit in which they are profered are calculated to do much good. We trust the young generally, of both sexes, will not fail to attend.

Evening Free School.

We would respectfully suggest to the trustees and the people generally who are interested, (and who is not) the propriety and justice of having for the benefit of those who cannot attend in the day time an evening session of our Free School. There are many who are necessarily employed during the day in providing for their physical wants and are therefore unable to attend; the minds therefore of those thus employed and who are or should be a part of the especial object for which such schools were established are from necessity entirely neglected, and suffered to grow up without that cultivation so essentially necessary to an enlightened understanding of the privileges which every man and more especially every freeman is justly entitled by their birthright—such an education for every person so situated we hold it is the bounden duty of society to provide. There are doubtless many thus situated who would gladly embrace the opportunity to improve their stock of knowledge. Shall we have a favorable responce to this suggestion? Will the trustees give it that attention the importance of the subject demands? Will those whose position in society give them influence take it into their serious consideration and lend it their aid? The result could not be otherwise than beneficial. If those who know its value and who also have the power hold back who then will lend it aid?

The importance of securing to the rising generation who will soon be called upon to take our places in the business and cares of life, and also upon whom will devolve the support and administration of our government, an education proportionate to an enlightened understanding of the republican principles upon which our political and social institutions are founded, cannot be too strongly urged upon the attention of all. It must be evident to all reflecting minds that upon the general diffusion of knowledge among the masses, alone can a truly representative or republican government exist; as all will acknowledge that the perpetuity of our institutions depend upon their exercising intelligently the privileges of freemen. These facts are so evident that the most casual as well as the more careful observer of men and measures, of cause and effect, who will cast a glance over the members of this confederacy and compare their prosperity and intelligence cannot fail to perceive.—Where the greatest efforts have been made in the cause of education and where it is most widely diffused there does liberty—as will be acknowledged by all who make such comparison—most truly abound.

We will not insult our readers understanding by attempting to point out the vast benefits thus resulting to a people every one of whom are a portion of its sovereignty, as upon its universality do we conceive our existence as a nation to depend. Its importance acknowledged, all must see and should feel the necessity of enabling all to participate in its blessings; thus doing our duty to our fellow man, to ourselves, our country and our God.

Payment of the Mexican Indemnity

A payment of $1,400,000 has been made through Messrs. Howland & Aspinwall of New York as Agents under the Treaty with Mexico.

Independence.

To be truly independent a man must live within his income. This is the most certain method to secure a friend in time of need—this will enable him to assist the poor, the sick, the aged—a cause sufficient to deny ourselves some foolish gratification; it will not make use of the labors of others without a just remuneration. How many thousands there are who heedlessly disregard this important maxim—perhaps to make some useless display—to gratify some silly pride, some depraved appetite alike injurious to both body and mind. The wealth of the Indies will scarce suffice unless a man graduates his desires to his income—the end however remote must be bankruptcy and ruin, not only of the purse, but that which is of far more value, of character and of health. There is no man so truly rich as he who graduates his desires, which govern his expenses, within his income. We would therefore recommend to all, but more especially to the young who have no necessity, therefore no excuse to run in debt, the injunction of St. Paul; "Owe no man any thing but to love one another." To be out of debt is to be out of danger of many temptations which allure us to destruction. We would add to this the importance of punctuality in all your engagements— never deceive—by this you will be able in time of need to command another man's purse, and "help in need is help indeed." There are but few who practice these precepts however many may know them. We trust therefore that many will soon begin, knowing that all those who are influenced by these remaks to do so will become our subscribers; and then at least two will be benefitted thereby.

Important Decision.

Trenton, Jan 25

The case of Briggs against the Camden and Amboy Railroad was decided this morning in the Court of Errors and Appeals, which affirmed the decision of the Courts below—against the Companies.

The suits—which were to recover the penalties for several alledged excessive charges made by the Company for freight brough for the plaintiff from New-York, the penalty being $100 on each case—were originally commenced in a Justice's Court, which decided against the Company. The decision was afterwards affirmed by the Supreme Court and from that taken to the Court of Appeals, which has just decided as above. It is a case of great importance, involving a large amount of money, as some seven hundred similar suits are depending upon the decision of this.

It will be perceived from the above that the Company have violated their Charter as has been repeatedly charged against them; we trust therefore that we shall hear no more about the violation of the faith of the State in annulling—what was unconstitutionally granted in the first place—that clause of their charter givirg them exclusive right of way across the State, especially as they were the first to violate it. We trust therefore that it will be immediately repealed, that free competition may have an opportunity—as equal rights would ever give it—to correct this enormous abuse.

☞ The rumors in circulation in regard to the Parkman case, seem to us entirely gratuitous and unworthy a moments consideration, calculated to defeat the ends of justice, they are alike disgraceful to the Press which circulate them as well as to the writers, who shield themselves under anoymous signatures. How dastardly and contemptible are those who would speculate on the crimes and misfortunes of their fellow men.

The Scalpel.—We have received No 6. of this excellent journal. The ability displayed in its pages (60 neatly printed) are acknowledged per force by all, its propositions are always clear, its deductions—to us—irresistable. It is published quarterly, at $1 per annum in advance, or 25 cents per number; address Edward H. Dixon, Box 3121, New York.

☞ How contemptible does the sympathies of our people appear, and especially in those efforts made in Congress to give a little land to the Hungarian exiles in this country, while the spirit of liberty which is embodied in the person of Kossuth, is suffered to be trampled under foot by a despot, against the law of nations, without a word of protest from our government.

☞ We are indebted to the politeness of the Hon. J. W. Miller for Dr. David Dale Owen's interesting Geological Report of the Chippewa Land District of Wisconsin, &c.

☞ The following remarks from the "Daily Trentonian"—which certainly are very justly applied—condemning the abuses which have been practised by the members of the Legislature upon the people of New Jersey, meets our hearty approbation, as they must that of every honest man. We are glad to perceive that there is yet some independence left in the Press of New Jersey, that they are not all under the control of party, or the Monopoly, but dare to speak freely of the acts of the people's servants, condemning those which are against and approving those only which are for their benefit. If the people of New-Jersey wish to reform these abuses and prevent others of a like nature, whether committed by members of the state or national legislature, they will mark those who uphold them until an opportunity offers to correct them through the ballot-box. But if satisfied with these abuses they will continue to uphold their own partisans right or wrong as the best plan to have them continued

"We resume the task of exposing the spurious whiggery which now controls the political policy of New Jersey. Our blows, be it distinctly understood, are not aimed at the principles of the whig party but at the practices of the scheming politicians who have taken advantage of the confidence of an honest an unsuspecting constituancy to perpetrate outrages heretofore unknown in the history of the State. Let us particularize a few of the practices that have crept into the Legislative doings of the Gaddis whigs for the past few years.

They have been in the habit of appropriating large sums of money yearly for the purchase of books for the members of the Legislature. To such a system has this species of robbery been reduced that the first thing moved for at the commencement of each session is the appropriation of hundreds of dollars to this purpose. By what right of either honesty, policy, or expediency is the money of the people thus squandered? The Legislature have as good a right to vote its members coats and boots as it has to vote books. We defy any man, from the State printer down to the official fire maker at the State House, to urge one valid reason for such expenditure of the money of the taxpayers of New Jersey. It is a wanton, reckless unwarrented ROBBERY OF THE TREASURY! It is setting a precedent that naturally leads to the grossest peculation and corruption. Destroy the sanctity of honesty in regard to the public funds, and you open the door to every imaginable scheme for bleeding the treasury. This sanctity has been trodden under foot by the party in power, and the consequences are seen in the yearly increased expenditures of the government. We have not the means at hand to refer to the direct items embraced in the scheme of plunder to which we have referred, but we shall obtain them in time for our purposes. What we write now is a mere prelude to the grand thunder in reserve.

We now turn to an example of perjury and robbery on a grand scale of impudent atrocity. Let things be called by their right names. A member of the legislature has no more right to violate his oath of office than has the witness before the court to violate his oath of evidence. A member of the Legislature has no more right to vote himself the money of the people, contrary to law, than has the burglar to break into the same treasury and steal therefrom by force of arms. And yet what did the whig Legislature of '48 do, and suffer to be done with the money of the people entrusted to their care? They violated, and suffered to be violated the constitution they had sworn to support, and stole the money of the people at the same time! This is strong, and not very polite or refined language but the truth warrants its application in the case which we now proceed to cite.

By the constitution of New Jersey it is provided that if a Legislative session extends beyond forty days, the pay shall be one dollar and fifty cents per diem for every day beyond the prescribed period. The whig Legislature of '48 extended the session beyond the full-pay limits of the constitution, and then voted themselves $20 each as indemnity money, and this was done in clear and palpable violation of the meaning and intent of the oath of obedience to that instrument! The sum of which the treasury was thus robbed at one effort amounted to FIFTEEN HUNDRED AND FORTY DOLLARS! A universal feeling of indignation was excited at the time, among all those conversant with the facts of this shameful robbery, and yet the State Printer never wrote a line to inform his honest whig readers of the outrage perpetrated in their name. In his private conversation he denounced the act in no stinted terms, but he had no word of public condemnation. He was in the same boat with the clique of "Gaddis Whiggery"—in a cruise for the "spoils," and hower his moral nature revolted at the act of his party, his "pecuniary" principles proved too strong for its promptings, and nothing was published in regard to the matter!

We shall give still further expositions of the "Gaddis Whiggery" of New Jersey in a day or two. We intend to smoke the varments from their dens, if there is any virtue in brimstone."

Congress.—This body have managed as usual to consume time and recieve pay therefor without accomplishing anything for the benefit of the country—when too late, they would sympathise with the oppressed of other countries, until it will perhaps be too late to sympathize with the oppressed of our own Such is the consistency of human nature when guided by party and sectarian creeds.

The Legislature.—The importance of the acts of this body thus far consist mostly in doing that which should be left undone—passing special acts for various purposes—while those which the people have demanded giving to all EQUAL RIGHTS under GENERAL LAWS are entirely neglected.

Free School Meeting.

We fully concur with the following resolutions, and believe they express the sentiments of a large majority of the people of New Jersey.

Bordentown, Jan. 24th. 1850.

At a large and respectable meeting of citizens of the Borough and vicinity of Bordentown held pursuant to notice for the purpose of expressing the views and sentiments of the citizens upon the subject of Free Schools, and to oppose the squandering of the public monies upon Normal Schools, and a State Superintendant.

Resolved—That we consider it the duty of our state government to provide the means for establishing Free Schools throughout this state, whereby every child therein may have an opportunity of obtaining a good English Education.

Resolved—That in order to accomplish this desirable object we are of the opinion that the revenue derived from all the chartered institutions and companies of this state should be taken and used for this purpose, thereby enabling the great mass of the people to partake equally of their resources.

Resolved—That we are opposed to the employment or payment of a state superintendent, believing as we do, that he can do little or nothing towards the cause of education in this state so long as the means to promote this object are withheld by our Legislature.

Resolved—That we are opposed to the establishment of Normal Schools at the expense of the state, for the purpose of educating young men and women to become teachers; because we believe that there would be no difficulty in procuring the necessary number of persons well qualified to teach, provided the compensation would be adequate to their talents and services.

Resolved—That the conduct of the Trustees of the School Fund, in refusing to distribute the ten thousand dollars which was authorized by our last Legislature to be added to the usual appropriation meets with our decided disapprobation, and we do not consider their reason for withholding the same at all legal or sufficient.

The resolutions, after an able discussion, passed unanimously.

On motion, Resolved—that the proceeding be signed by the Officerss, and published in the Trenton papers. Adj.

John Miles, President.

P. L. Suydam, Secretary.

The following letter to the London Times contains information which will be of great interests to captains of vessels and to others

To the Editors of The Times.

Sir,—The owners of the Caleb Grimshaw demand a means for extinguishing fire in the hold of a ship The material required are nothing more than a cask of common chalk in the bottom of the hold connected with the deck by a small pipe, and a two gallon bottle of sulphuric acid, which, on the alarm of fire, being poured down the pipe will generate a sufficient quantity of dense smoke (gas in which flame cannot exist) to extinguish any fire however large I enclose my card, in accordance with your rule, but any chemist knows flame cannot exist carbonic acid gas, which is generated by the action of the sulphuric acid on the chalk. I beg to subscribe myself your obedient servant, P.

London, January. 4.

On a proposition to amend the bill (under consideration in the House of Assembly, yesterday) for exempting a certain portion of debtor's property from execution, the following amendment was offered by Mr. Philips; To exempt the goods of a debtor from execution or levy under a landlord's warrant, or for distress for rent The whigs voted down this amendment in solid phalanx. We shall comment on this result to-morrow.—Trentonian Jan. 25.

Toleration at Rome.

The correspondent of the Daily News writes from Rome on the 20th Dec.:

'An American Protestant minister had twelve of his countrymen joining him in worship at his own house last Sunday, in the Via S. Bastianello. The police were acquainted with the circumstance before night, and the American Charge d' Affaires, Mr. Cass, was apprized that if the offense were repeated the minister would be sent away from Rome immediately.

☞ There is a strong disposition, on the part of the administration, to avoid the resolutions of Mr Bradbury; but the Senate, in turn, will put on the screws If the administration treat the resolutions with contempt, rejections will take place en masse, the Senate being determined to to cast the same wholesale reprobation on Gen. Taylor's appointees which General Taylor has cast on the appointees of Mr. Polk.—Ledger.

Let those who stickle for the "good old times," and insist that the world goes backwards as it grows old, read the following, written by a gentleman now living in London, to a friend at Washington. If it does not indicate something of progress, we cannot understand what progress means:—

[N. Y Sun.

"I am old enough to have witnessed the burning of the Bastile. I have also witnessed occurrences in my own country, in the year 1779, and (what I may not have told you when last I saw you, for fear you might have thought me one of a nation of barbarians) I recollect the time when people used to be burnt in London by judicial sentence! True as I am now writing to you, on the 18th of March, 1789, my fifteenth birth-day, I saw a person walk up to the stake alive, faggots put round him, and, burnt; and for what? For coining, or, as it was called in the law phrase of the day, petty treason.' No wonder you Yankees disclaim us for your progenitors. But let me add, as a salvo for my country, that in the following session of Parliament 1690, this punishment was abolished, so that I probably saw the last victim of our then humane code. Hardly any body of the present day will believe me when I tell them this. Our own Lord Chief Justice Denman, when told of it some three or four months ago, would not believe it till he had satisfied himself of the fact from the official record. And lest you, too, should be pricking up your ears, let me assure you it is a plain, unvarnished, veritable tale."

Chemistry of the Stars.

This singular head forms the subject of an article in the British Quarterly The design of it is to show that the forms of life existing in this world are not repeated in the other planets and heavenly bodies. The article is destined to be read with unusual interest. The data from which it reasons, are the variety in weight superficial phenomena, forms and color of the heavenly bodies. It is shown to be impossible that a system of animal and vegetable, resembling that of our globe can exist on many of them. The dry and rugged surface of the moon, volcanic, yet without sea and without atmosphere, the varying quality of sideral light, and the chemical property of meteorites or air stones, so far as their component substances have been discovered by an analysis, are among the data on which it is argued that the stars are not telluric, that they do not resemble the earth in their composition, and, therefore, that life must be otherwise associated and sustained on the surface of those orbs, if it exist at all, than on ours.

Give now.—Defer not thy deeds till the mantle of death has covered thy form. Ten dollars given to day, are better than fifty left in thy will. It is not benevolence to give away what thou hast no further need of; and no legacies will purchase future felicity for the mean and avaricious heart.

☞ There are 5800 taverns in the state of New-York; 253,000 farmers; 51,000 merchants; 13,000 manufacturers; 125,000 mechanics; 3500 lawyers; 4000 doctors; and 5300 preachers

☞ In Turkey, whenever a storekeeper is convicted of telling a lie, his house is painted black to remain so for one month. If there was such a law in force in this country what a sombre and gloomy appearance some of our cities would present!

☞ The Catholics in England now have 674 chaples, 880 priests, 13 monastries, 41 convents, 11 colleges, and 250 schools.

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

A curious dialogue, 'tis said,
Took place among the ladies,
Of DRY GOODS AND GROCERIES,
Where the best place to trade is!

Mrs. A. S. and Mrs B,
Declared they knew where was good T.
Mrs L. and O wished to know,
If anywhere on Earth they'd go!
For, good T was hard to get,
They neither had had good as yet.
B. S. and A, that is the Mrs,
Knew also where to get their dresses,
And sugar, ribbons, and molasses,
Carpets, earthenware, looking-glasses,
Muslin, over-shoes, and gloves,
Blankets, salaratus, nutmegs, cloves,
Umberellas, tin pans, and toys,
Beautiful ones for girls or boys:
In fact, everything that's eat, drank or wore,
You'l find it at D. BULLMAN'S Store!

You'l find this just as 'tis said
If 'tis not, then you need not trade;
My thanks for the past to all are due,
While a happy New Year I wish to you.

UNPRECEDENTED ATTRACTION!—Over 60,000 NATURAL CURIOSITIES!!—Being a combination of Nature and Art, from the unrivalled Mammoth of the Nile to the most minute Dwarf in Christendom!!!

At the opening of this establishment we beg leave to state to our friends in Plainfield and vicinity, that we have spared no pains or expense in making our vast Hall one of splendor and magnificence. The indudements, though too numerous to mention, cannot fail to attract all lovers of variety of whatever grade in society. But as

COLD WEATHER IS COMING,

and the Printer wants a job, I'll not leave you in wonder, but will give a request to all ladies and gentlemen, young and old, to call at 85 Broad-st.

AND SEE THE FUN!

For such rattling of Stoves and clatter of Tin,
Never, in Newark before has been.
Stoves, yes, we've the Fashion, the Empire, U. S. and the Bride,
A host of gay parlors, with office beside.
But of all the fine patterns named in our invoice,
The one that ranks highest is the famed Pople's choice.

COFFINS AT REDUCED PRICES.

THE subscriber would call the attention of the public to his complete assortment of Coffins, where all the different sizes are finished and ready for use at a moments warning; they are made of Mahogony, Black Walnut and Cherry, and finished in every style, so that all can be suited, also a superior style of stained ones, which he offers remarkably low; he has hitherto defered giving his prices, but as he has understood that there is some misrepresentation in regard to his prices, he deems this sufficient excuse to the public for to say that for a large size Black Walnut Coffin including hearse in attendance he has $6, Mahogany $14, Cherry $6, and small ones accordingly, tight case made in coffin style $1,75. By leaving the order with him, the sexton of either of the churches will be seen if required, and all necessary arrangements made without any extra expense.

IMPORTANT TO HORSEMEN.

DR. PEARSON'S BARBER'S

EMBROCATION

IS decidedly the best preparation that can be used for the cure of sprains, bruises, cuts, galls, splint, curb, ringbone. spavin, stiffness of the joints, &c. It is an article which should be in the hands of every horseman, and no stable should be without a bottle of it Price only 25 and 50 cents per bottle.

The following is the testimony of Mr Schench, proprietor of the "Somerset House," Somerville, N. J., a gentleman well known to horsemen in New Jersey.

DR. S. A. PEARSON: Dear Sir—I feel it a duty which I owe to you and the community at large, or rather that part of the community who possess, or in any way have charge of Horses, to say, that I have used your Embrocation,' for horses. It is decidedly the best preparation that I have ever used, or have any knowledge of for the various diseases which it is recommended.

I also know a great number of my friends who have used it—and they all say, that it is the best medicine for horses that they have ever used. I would confidently recommend every person who has a horse should keep a bottle of this valuable Embrocation in his stable.

Yours respectfully, AB'M C. SCHENCK.

Prepared only by S. A. PEARSON, M. D. and for sale wholesale and retail at No. 106 North 4th street, Philadelphia; also by J. R. Swallow, General agent 123 Fulton-st New York.

CHAIN PUMPS.

THE best machine for raising water, in use — This Pump has many advantages over any other in use on account of its simplicity of construction, being made wholly of wood and galvanized iron, not liable to get out of order or to get deranged in any way. It can never freeze in winter, and can be put in wells of any depth.

It takes less power to work it than any other machine, to raise the same amount of water.

It is never obstructed by gravel or sand; it keeps the water perfectly sweet and fresh: the action of the chain mixes the gasses with the water always keeping it lively and fresh: on ceasing to work it, the water in the tube descends to the level of the water in the well; on commencing to work the pump, the first water that is drawn is from the bottom of the well.

☞ This pump received the premium at the late Essex county fair.

These Pumps may be had at the Pump Factory of S. B. Miller, 340 Broad-street. Newark, N. J.

GREAT AMERICAN REMEDY.

Vegetable Dyspepsia Bitters.

TO THE PUBLIC,

DR HUTCHINGS would call the attention of all afflicted with dyspepsia, and the various disorders arising from a diseased stomach, to his remedy therefor. His DYSPEPSIA BITTERS will be found, on trial, to contain every property requisite to restore the disordered stomach to a healthy action: to reproduce the lost appetite of the patient, and do away with the periodical nervous headache and general debility consequent on this afflicting disease. Thousands have tested its efficacy, and thousands more are now under treatment; and not one solitary case of failure has yet been reported to him. This is consolatory, and urges him on in his efforts to relieve poor suffering humanity. He could fill a volume with certificates of those who have been permanently cured; but he conceives the testimony of a few well-known citizens will answer every purpose. The reader will find, on looking over the following testimonials, they are not "got up" for the occasion; but bona fide letters from gentlemen who can be seen at any time at their places of business.

The following Certificate is from M. B. Brady, the Celebrated Daguerreotypist:

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness, I was advised to take Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me. I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia. M. B. BRADY,

No. 205 Broadway, N. Y.

From Luther B Wyman, Esq, late President of the New York Musical Society, now of Brooklyn.

The undersigned was afflicted with the Dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half during a greater portion of which time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself, until he was recommended to try Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, he very soon derived benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well.

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of Hutchings' Bitters for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine.

L. B WYMAN, 38 Burling Slip.

New York, Sept 3 1849.

Dear Sir—My wife having been a great sufferer from dyspepsia, low spirits, palpitation of the heart, and having been cured as I believe by your Bitters, I most cheerfully attest their efficacy: her case was a bad one. In the space of four months she lost her strength and thirty-five pounds of flesh; was compelled to abandon her household affairs: there seemed but little probability of a cure until she began to take your bitters: in one week she was greatly relieved, and in three weeks she was perfectly well, and has since gained thirty pounds. You are at liberty to use this if it will at all further your laudable purpose of circulating this valuable remedy.

With respect, NATHAN SAYRE, No 61 Fourth-st

DOCT. PEARSON'S

PULMONIC EXPECTORANT,

FOR the cure of Coughs, Colds, Consumption of the Lungs, Influenza, Bronchitis, Asthma, Pain in the Breast, spitting of Blood, Whooping Cough, Croup or Hives. Hoarseness, Difficulty of Breathing, and every other disease of the Lung and the Breast.

This invaluable medicine should be in the possession of every family. In a country where the continual and sudden changes of the atmosphere, from heat to cold, and from cold to heat, render the inhabitants extremely liable to diseases of the Lungs and Breast, it is of the most vital importance that every one should be in possession of a remedy that shall at once effectually and permanently cut short those diseases, and restore the patient to health. The first symptom of cold or influenza should be immediately attacked and reduced by some remedy that has power over the disease. The medicine which has the most complete control over these diseases, and will most speedily restore the health of the patient is

PEARSON'S PULMONIC EXPECTORANT.

The following Card of three respectable phisicians sets forth the virtues of Dr Pearson's pulmonic Expectorant. 'Having made use of Dr. Pearson's pulmonic Expectorant, we feel it a duty to recommend it as a safe and effectual cure for the various diseases for which it is intended We are acquainted with many persons who have been cured of Cough, Bronchitis, pain in the breast and side, spitting blood, palpitation of the heart, and incipient consumption, by its use, and many of them after all other means had failed'

A Fearson, M. D. U. S Navy; S. K. Leedem, M. D. Champlain Co, Ohio; W. R. Cadwallader, M. D. U. S. Navy.

Dr. Pearson's Carminative Balsam

Is decidedly the most beneficial remedy for the cure of Dysentary, Cholera Morbus and Summer complaint, that is known to man. Parents will find it the best medicine that can be used for young children and infants And every person who is travelling in the summer months should not be without a bottle of it in their possession; as it is an infalliable remedy against the change produced in the system by drinking bad water.

We annex the following certificate of Mrs. A. M. Sanford, of New York, in reference to the Carminative Balsam We might add a long list, but consider this sufficient.

This is to certify that I have used Dr Pearson's Carminative Balsam, and confidently believe it to be the best medicine that can be used for the various diseases for which it is recommended, and recommend it to the ladies who are travelling in summer months, and to mothers for the fretting and crying of infants for which it is a certain cure.

MRS A M SANFORD,

No. 160 East Broadway N. Y.

The proprietor of the above valuable medicines, as also of Dr. Pearson's Barber's Embrocation for Horses, being himself a Physician and graduate of one of the best medical schools in the U. S. and having had the advantage of years of experience in an extensive practice, is therefore from the practical knowledge which he has acquired, well qualified to prescribe those remedies, and restore the patient to sound health.

From the Day Book.

Courtship over the Grave of a Husband.

OR AN INCIDENT AT QUARANTINE.

It was a beautiful afternoon in July, 1848, when a small boat cast off from a ship lying at anchor at Quarantine. Not a ripple was upon the glassy surface of the water; the whole bay was as calm as a lake in the woods, except a slight agitation produced by the rowing of the boat. As the boat neared the shore, I discovered that it contained a long white box. Soon it arrived at the dock; and that box proved to be a coffin. One of the men in the boat says, 'Here is the body of Wm. Bradbury, a sailor, who died at sea yesterday; and the captain ordered him kept, that he might be buried on shore. Will you have him buried, sir?' I answered in the affirmative. The men repaired to the boat and were quickly away. The coffin was deposited in the dead-house; and in the morning was taken, with some 6 or 8 others that had died since the burial of the day previous, and put in the trench that contained hundreds of others.

Some three or four days after this occurrence, a good-looking woman of about 25 years of age, attended by a stout, hardy, looking jack-tar, came to the Health Office The former appeared in the extreme agony of grief, crying as though her very heart would break, and accosted me with, 'Have you buried my husband?' I replied, 'My friend I do not know exactly what you mean—I do not know that I ever had any knowledge of your husband' You said that was the man, Edward'—turning to the sailor. 'And so it is,' he replied. 'Do you not, sir, remember that we brought a coffin on shore, from the Vicksburg, three days since; and that I told you that it was Wm. Bradbury?' 'Yes, sir, I do remember now,' I replied; and then told the woman that the corpse was buried the next morning after it was broght on shore. 'O!' said she, 'was it not cruel? In two hours after the ship arrived, they might have sent word to me, at 50 Monroe street, and I could have buried my husband myself. O, how cruel!-to deny me the poor satisfaction of seeing him, though he was dead!' And she fainted away on the steps of the Health Office.

As soon as her recovery, which was effected in a short time, by the aid of cold water, and the soothing words of Edward, she addressed me thus: 'Can not you, sir, show me where my husband is buried?' Knowing that that was next to impossible, and fearing that to deny, what would appear so reasonable a request, would lacerate wounds already too fresh, the question placed me in a dilemma, from which I would gladdly have been relieved I however, replied that a great many deaths occurred among the six or eight hundred patients in the hospitals; and it was very difficult to distinguish, after three or four days, one person's grave from another

This did not satisfy her; and she caught hold of me, and cried out, 'I will see William's grave!'

I saw that to make farther objections would greatly aggravate her distress, and told her to go with me; so the woman, Edward and myself, walked toward the burying ground. But what I should say to her when we arrived, I could not tell. I knew well enough it would not do to tell the truth; for to have taken her to that trench, and told her that her husband was stowed away somewhere with the dead multitude there, might have produced consequences of a most serious character.

As we entered the burying ground, on the opposite side from the trench, I happened to discover some new-made single graves, where some soldiers had been interred. I took her to them; and after counting and calculating very soberly, or leading her to suppose I was doing so, I said, pointing to a grave, 'this is the place.'

She fell her length on the ground, moistened the new clay with her tears, and offered a most fervent hearty prayer for her William. Edward was not an unmoved spectator; he wept, and so did I

After a short interval, Edward approached, and, lifting her up said to her, soothingly, 'Mary, don't weep so. You can not get William alive by crying; and I am afraid you will make yourself sick Can not I love you, and do as well for you as William did?' 'Yes,' she replied; 'but you have a wife in Liverpool.' 'So had William,' he replied. 'A sailor needs a wife in one port, as much as in another.

Come, Mary,' he continued 'take this half-dollar; it will buy the youngster a frock. Come, Mary, wipe your face, and hear what I have to say to you'

Mary gave her attention; and Edward said to her, 'I shall be paid off to morrow three months, at fifteen dollars a month—how much will that be?', 'Forty-five dollars,' I replied 'Forty-five dollars!' said he; 'there Mary, that is as much as Willam would have brought you; and you will get his, beside. 'Two forty-fives!—how much does that make?' said Edward. 'Ninety dollars,' I told him.

By this time, Mary had got her face and eyes wiped dry; her features appeared as undisturbed as the waters of the Bay did, when the corpse of her husband was brought to the shore, although a beatiful smile was playing upon her lips. She inquired of me, how long before the boat would leave for New York? 'Twenty minutes,' I replied. She then turned to Edward; and, in a smooth clear voice, said, 'Will we be married to-night, Edward?' 'I don't see why we may not, as well as to be 'buggerlugging' about it for three or four days. We'll go to Mr Chase's, before we go home; he will do the job and trust me till I get paid off'

And way they went, leaving me to the reflection, that 'Truth is strange—stranger than fiction.' R.

They Can't Fool Me.

Billy Keene's peculiar boast was the utter impossibility of being hoaxed, or in his mor expressive phraseology, fooled. 'They can't fool me!' was ever at his tongue's end and so evident were his attempts to impress this fact upon all with whom he had any thing to do, that he not unfrequently made a fool of himself:

Billy always made a point of expressing his disbelief of every thing, however plausible, that reached his ears, which, by the way, were exceedingly easy of access, being not more than five feet two inches from the ground, when their owner stood upon his feet.

Suspicion was always the "one idea" in his mind; he suspected everybody of some abortive design to gull him—from the most respectable friend, downto poor old Isaac, who had no more idea of practical jokes, than a polar bear might be expected to have of a baby-jumper.

Bill was not naturally hard-hearted, but he was so suspicious that he turned twenty beggars from his door where he relieved the necessities of one. In vain was the imploring eye raised, and the wasted hand extended to him for alms.—The more piteous the story, the more evident was it to him a hoax. 'It all sounds very pitiful, 'he would exclaim,' but I've seen too much of the world -I've heard too much of such stuff—its no use—you can't fool me!' and the wretched mendicant was compelled to senk in other puarters for that charity which believeth all things, which thinketh no evil.

Billy was once married, but it was a long time ere he was fooled into the state of 'double blessedness,' (yet as he himself has acknowledged) he often met with hairbreadth escapes, before he was finally hooked. We recollect his boasting once, during his bachelorship, that Emma B. the only daughter of a neighboring merchant, was endeavoring to snare him into the matrimonial noose. He was making the boast to his particular friend 'other people don't notice it' said he, but it is as plain as day to me. She thinks I don't see her plan! ha! ha! ha! she can't fool me!—Folks say her father will give her a cool ten thousand; humbug! If she's got the spoons why should she be so anxious to get into my good graces? that's the question! She's rather pretty to be sure, but I wonder if she thinks that I believe her complexion and teeth natural?'—Guess she'll find I ain't quite so verdant as she thinks I am. No sir, she can't fool me!'

Billy accompanied these words with a sly wink of peculiar expression, and gave no little cause of astonishment to his friend who for reason best known to himself, was aware that the young lady was innocent of any such intention as Billy imputed to her. Billy was no less astonished the next day, at hearin of the marriage of his friend, early thar morning with the identical Emma B., whose ten proved to be fifteen thousand and whose personal charms were all natural, malgre Bill's suspicions. His friend found in Emma a lovely, devoted wife, while he, still wrapped in his 'heavy armor,' remained a bachelor.

But at length, as we have already told you, our hero was married. How any mortal of Eve managed to fool him into an union, is now, and ever must remain to us a profound mystery. We are certain however, that he was married, for we find him at fifty, a widower, with an only daughter, a beautiful girl of eighteen.

Our worthy friend was proud of his daughter Mary; and well indeed he might be; for she had a sweet, lovely face, and a faultless form, and there was a world of mirthfullness and mischief in her sparkling black eyes. Nor was it strange that others should love her besides her suspicious old father, who couldn't be fooled. There was a village rumour, (and we cannot deny that Madame Rumor, for once, told the truth,) of a warm attachment between Mary, and Edward Seymour, a young merchant of the neighborhood, of whom every body spoke in the highest terms of praise. All commended his good nature, frankness and ability; but as Billy always stemmed the current of public opinion, he had the penetration to perceive that these landed virtues were all moonshine; that in their estimation of Seymour, the world were all wrong and so he absolutely opposed the contemplated union. He was inexorable, and finally Mary out of respect for him, yielded an apparent compliance to his wishes, and Seymour's visits and communications with her, were discontinued; and though she tried to appear as mirthful and happy as ever, yet her heart was ill at ease, and her imprisoned love would betray itself in her every look and action.

At length Edward, whose 'hope never died,' laid a plan for possessing himself of Mary's hand—in fact the desperate and almost hopeless project of FOOLING old Billy Keene! Did he succeed? Have patience reader, and you shall hear all.

One sultry July afternoon, a pale-faced young gentleman, whom Billy remembered to have seen in the street, but with whom he had no acquaintance, called at his house and requested to see him immediately 'on important business.' He was shown by Mary into the parlor, and our hero soon entered.

The pale-faced young gentleman first introduced himself and then the object of his visit. 'I have an unpleasant disclosure to make, Mr. Keene, which is of the greatest importance to you, and to the happiness of your daughter. You are of course aware that Edward Seymour has succeeded in making his friends believe that he has given up all hopes of marrying your daughter; this is merely to fool your suspicions, but I am confident that you have too much acuteness to believe it.'

'Certainly,' said Billy, highly gratified, 'go on, he can't fool me!'

'Well, as I was going on to remark my room at the Eagle is next to Seymour's and this morning I overheard him relating in high glee, to some one in his room, a plan for over reaching you! I detest eaves-dropping, but he was talking in a loud tone and his door was a little way open—so it was forced upon me.'

'Ha! ha! roared Billy, 'thinks he can fool me! the poor idiot! I should just like to have him to try it; how is he going to do it?'

'His plan,' said the pale-face, 'is deeply laid, but he is a fool to imagine that he can deceive you by any contrivance of his brain He has employed a little black boy, who brushes boots and does odd jobs at the Eagle, to call at your house, just after dark this evening, with directions to tell you that your sister Jemima has been taken with a dangerous attack of her old complaint, and wishes you to come to Pineville to see her immediately; and while you are gone, he intends to take your daughter in a carriage, to Jones' tavern, on the river road; Squire Curtiss is to go with them to perform the ceremony, which will make them man and wife.'

'A dutiful daughter, Mary is, indeed: the jade! to consent to such a deception on her poor old father; I'll lock the huzzy up 'till she comes to her senses, and I'll horsewhip the nigger, and pull Seymour's nose—I'll teach 'em to try to fool me.'

"Calm yourself, I entreat you, my dear sir said the pale-faced young man; 'reflect that such a course of proceeding would not only make the affair public but it might seriously affect your daughter's reputation and happiness; to be sure she has been guilty of disrespect to you, but then she has undoubtedly been drawn into it by that vagabond Seymour. I know sir, that you could not have been duped by two such green ones, even if I had not discovered their plan to you, but at the same time, [if I may presume to offer you my poor advice] I think that you had better pretend to believe the yarn about your sister's illness, and under covering of going to Pineville, proceed straight to 'Jones' Tavern, wait for the runaways, break up their plan, cover them with confusion, and bring your daughter home. This would convince them forever, of what they ought to know already, that they might as well give in—that they can fool you.'

'Capital idea!' said Billy, much indebted to you, sir. You're right, they can't fool me! Good day.'

'Good day, sir.'

Billy indulged in an immoderate fit of laughter, when his pale-faced visitor was gone. 'So Edward Seymour was going to fool me, was he?—ha! ha! I guess he'll find a tough one, though; guess he can't be fooled so easy neither; and so deuced kind in him too, to put me on my guard. He's a gentleman, and no mistake.'

The afternoon, dark and cloudy, soon passed away, and after it came a black night; and a black boy. Billy heard the message of the latter with well counterfeted concern for Jemima's illness, and bidding old Isaac saddle his mare, was soon on the road to Jones.'

The night was black and a drizzling rain chilled his bones, but still he muttered to himself, as he slapped his arms together, to accelerate the tardy circulation, 'Cracky, how they'll look when they find me waiting for them at Jones'!—S'pose they think I'm half way to Pineville by this time. Ha! ha! guess Jemima ain't very bad. They can't fool me!'

'Why bless my soul, Mr. Kenee, what brought you here in this storm,' said the burly Jones, as our worthy friend, drench-to the skin, reined the old mare up to the door His only answer was, 'you'll see something presently, Mr. Jones, that'll tickle you some, I calculate; they can't fool me!'

The old mare was soon in the comfortable stable, while her owner, pacing the bar room floor only uttered at intervals, 'you'll see some sport presently, Mr. Jones, they cant fool me.'

An hour passed away—another—eleven o'clock and no carriage!

'That pale faced Jackass couldn't have been fooling me, could he?' thought the spicious Billy 'No, by Jingo! here they come. Now, Now, Mr. Jones; if you want to see some rare fun, just step to the door; they can't fool me.'

The carriage rattled up to the door in furious haste; the driver reined in the reeking horses, and sprang from his seat; the steps were thrown down; Edward Seymour leaped out—assisted Mary to a light and Squire Curtiss followed. Billy concealed himself behind the door, until the happy trio were in the siting room; then with an air of triumph, he very cooly walked in, exclaiming 'smart set, you be! thought you could fool me, did you? ha! ha! come, Miss Jack-a-naps, you'd better put your bonnet on again, sister Jemima ain't dangerous and it's pretty late, so we'd better be getting towards home; ha! ha! fool me, will you?'

Mr. Keene looked round to see what effect his unexpected appearance had made no one seemed at all surprised; Mary did not as might have been expected, faint away on the occasion, but stepping forward, half weeping—half smiling, she broke the awful pause with—I'm ready to go this minute, Pa,; but first let me introduce you to my husband, Edward Seymour; we were married quietly at home, about an hour after you started. It was so kind of you to go away and leave us to make our own arrangements, that we thought it would be too bad to make you ride home on horseback in this storm so we came to fetch you back, and offer you a seat in our carriage. Now you'll forgive us, won't you, Pa?'

'I'm sold, give me your hand,' said crest-fallen Billy. 'Give me your hand Seymour. This is the first time I was ever fooled; and you are the first person that could ever fool me. God bless you my son,' said the old man, affected to tears, 'you've done what no other living man could ever do—you've won her, and you're worthy of her.'

The remainder of the scene, our pen, though made of the stoutest steel, is too feeble to describe. Old Jones, who had been a wondering spectator of this singular meeting, shook hands with Billy, and assured him that he had seen more fun than he anticipated; and when the wedding party started for home, Mr. Keene recognized by the coach light, the pale faced young man, transformed into a driver.

Our hero is still living, surrounded by a lovely group of grandchildren, and he still is firm in his own belief that he can't be fooled.

The last time we saw him, he was listening to an account given by Seymour, on his return from the city, of that wonderful invention—the magnetic telegraph 'I wonder,' said the man, 'if Ed. thinks I suck all that yarn about writing and talking by lightning, or about sending a letter from New York to Buffalo in a second; No! nor in twenty-four hours either! It's no use Ed., you may tell that to the women folks and children, but you can't pull the wool over my eyes again; I'm too old—I've seen too much of the world: you can't fool me!' [Geneva Gazette.

The members of the Plainfield Lyceum will meet in Mr. W. W. Davison's school house on Tuesday evening next at 1-4 of 7 o'clock. The question for discussion will be:

"Can a man obtain as high honor by literary acquirements, as by military achievements"

☞ The public are respectfully invited to attend.

E. M. DUNN, Sec'y.

☞ The People of New Jersey have long been ruled by a selfish and corrupt clique who have tyranized over and oppressed them by unjust laws until forbearance ceased to be a virtue. The people aroused to indignation through the repeated wrongs they have thus suffered were determined at the last election to rid themselves of the hydra-headed monster, SPECIAL LEGISLATION, granting monopoly privileges to a monied aristocracy to the great detriment of the interest of the State and unjust and oppressive to a large majority of the people. This was the issue; but few, and they only at first, dare oppose the just indignation of the people, and all threw up their caps and shouted reform. Thus were the people deceived into a false security, relying on the loud protestations of Whig and Democrat, they looked forward with confidence to a relief from their oppressive burthens, placed upon their shoulders by and through the acts granting exclusive privileges to the few at the expense of the interests of the great body of the people of the state.—What is the result of all these protestations of the candidates who were so loudly anti-monopoly before election? Have they redeemed the pledges given to the people? Look at the proceedings thus far in the Legislature and see how many of those who promised reform in these matters have made any move towards securing equality of rights to the people.—The Whigs, though the last in the field as a party in favor of reform, yet they were loudest in their protestations of abhorance to monopolies, casting reproach on their opponents, the democrats, as being its authors. But what is the result, what have they done towards reforming these abuses? With a clear and decided majority in both Houses, and according to their own unsolicited declartions the only true antimonopoly party, what have they yet done, and what appearance of probability is there that they will reform a single abuse? Who will the people hold responsible for a non-compliance with their wishes?—Certainly the Whigs, if they having the power refuse or neglect to carry out the loudly expressed will of the people, what is the inference? Will they not be justly chargeable as deceivers of the people and the upholders of Monopoly?

☞ The following are the names of those Legislators who vote it necessary that a citizen of New Jersey should own a Jack-Ass--which need not be paid for—or his equivilent value in mud, to entitle him to exercise and enjoy the rights of a freeman of New Jersey! ☞ Any man voting a property qualification necessary to enable a citizen to enjoy his equal and inalienable rights deserves the contempt—they have ours most unreservedly—of every intelligent citizen, and especially of those thus disfranchised.

TERRIBLE EXPLOSION

in New-York--Fearful Loss of Life.

Monday morning about 7 1-2 o'clock the neighborhood of Hague, Pearl and Frankfort streets was alarmed by a terrible explosion, the violence of which shook the buildings, and caused the ground to tremble for several blocks around: while in the immediate vicinity the glass was shattered from windows, and the concussion was so violent and seemingly lasted so long as to bear every resemblance to an earthquake.

This was succeeded by a cry of fire, and in a few moments thousands were pouring in from every direction—firemen with their engines—laborers on their way to their day's work, and business men, market people, and strangers

The explosion was at the establishment of A. B Taylor, Esq., a well known Printing Press Manufacturer, No. 3 Hague st Mr. Taylor employed about sixty or seventy hands, nearly every one of whom had assembled and commenced work for the day at the time of the accident. Besides the establishment of Mr. Taylor, there was in the same building that of St. John, Burr & Co., hat body manufacturers, who gave employment to about sixty-five men and boys. All, or nearly all, of these had assembled for the day, and some were just coming in at the door.

So tremendous was the effect of the explosion that, as the head of the boiler was carried up through the different floors tearing off and taking with it the whole of the roof; the entire building, six stories high, above the basement story was lifted up six or seven feet, and then in falling back again the rush of air to fill the vacuum seemed to have drawn its walls inwards, and thus instantaneously reduced the building to a vast heap of ruins

The floors of Messrs. Hull & Son's building were lifted up, and the thick walls, both those adjoining Mr. Taylor's establishment and those fronting on the next street, were bulged considerably, although built of unusual thinckness, with reference to the possibility of fire or other contingency.

It is impossible to state the amount of damage done or the number of lives which have suddenly been cut off. There have been thus far 24 bodies recovered. and ascertained that 28 are seriously and 16 slightly injured.

Besides the above, the number of missing supposed as dead, amounts to 71, so that the total of the killed, so far as known, can scarcely be less than 85.

Mysterious Noises.

Can it be possible that in this enlightened age – this age of scientific attainment, that there are men, learned men, the most enlightened and liberal editors of our most able public journals—men who are constantly exposing every species of fraud and humbug, can be found, over whose minds the tales of their nurses holds such preponderating influence, that they must needs be the willing dupes of such preposterous humbugs as the stories of communications with disembodied spirits at Rochester, Auburn, &c.? Have these men forgotten the history of Salem Witchcraft, the prophetess Joanna Southcote, the prophets Matthias, Miller, and a thousand other instances wherein credulous fools have thrown away their only true guide, their reason, and followed old wive's fables until the superstition thus engendered have caused the most disastrous results? When will men discard superstition and follow the dictates of common sense? Never, while the education of Woman is neglected, the mothers and nurses of our children, we must expect new fools to be born or rather made every day! See Tribune of Feb. 4.

☞ We are indebted to Dr. John W. Craig, and Charles, D. Hiniline Esq's. for Public Documents.

☞ Mr. Root's resolution, in Congress, instructing the committee on territories to bring in bills prohibiting slavery, were laid on the table by the following vote. 105 to 79.

Also Gidding's resolution declaring it the duty of Congress to secure to all people under the government, of whatever complexion, the rights proclaimed in the Declaration of Independence. Laid on the table 104 to 89! So it would appear that our forefathers labored under a hallucination!

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 1.

G. Montesquieu, the author of the recent tragedy at Barnum's Hotel, has been indicted for murder in the first degree. Raimond, his brother, has been retained as a witness in the case. The trial will probably come off during the present term of the Court.

☞ The Cohoes Cataract says that, 'the body of a small negro child was found in a Molasses hogshead in that place a few days since, after the Molasses was all drawn off. No marks of violence were found upon him—We can vouch for the truth of this.' The same phenomena have been often exhibited in Sugar hogsheads, freshly emptied in this city—but the little negroes were alive, licking.—Albany Argus.

TRENTON Jan, 31.

SENATE.—Bills Passed, to authorize inhabitants of School District No. 1 in Plainfield to raise money to build school houses; a further sup extending lien law to Morris county: Assembly bill to charter N. Y. Morris and Elizabeth Railroad co; to charter Paterson & Hackensack R. R.; sup. to Medical Law. Adj.

FRIDAY Feb 1.

HOUSE.—the Speaker laid before the House the report of the Secretary of State on the subject of recording Births, Deaths, and Marriages. The report states, that reports have been received from 105 out of the 180 townships in the state and recommends certain alterations in the law. The compensation is said to be inadequate for the labor required. In the 105 townships heard from there were 1799 marriages. In the 105 townships there were 71,000 births, and 3673 deaths. There are 75 townships from which no report has been received.

The Ten Hour bill was passed by the following vote.

Ayes—Ayars, Bishop, Butcher, Buzby, Carpenter, Coriell, Day, Doty, Fritz, Hageman, Hineline, Hooper, Hopper, Hornbeck, Hoxey, Hurf, Huyler, Loller, Marlow, Meeker, Moore, Newell, Nixon, Opdycke, Personett, Phillips, Pierson, Price, Remester, Ribble, Risley, Sithens, Tinsman, Van Dyke, Van Wagoner, Wade, Walling, Wyckoff—38

Monday, Feb. 4.

HOUSE.—Mr Day, from Essex, to suppress Sunday travelling; and to set off the townships of Rahway, Westfield, Elizabeth, Union, Springfield, New Providence and Plainfield, into a New County, to be called "Union."

Tuesday, Feb. 5.

SENATE.—Several petitions were presented by Messrs. Morford, Cassedy, Satterthwaite, Rogers, and others, on several subjects, among which were against chartering any new banks, or renewing old charters, and in favor of a general law; for a law respecting the title to lands under water; to erect Houses of Refuge: remonstrances against the new county of Ocean &c.

The General Banking law was debated and recommitted.

HOUSE.—Mr. Pierson, from Westfield Essex Co, to alter the School law; also, to divide the County.

Passed—The General Rail Road bill; amendments to the Hackensack and Morris Rail Roads, and act to authorize Colored Schools in Morris County.

A General School Law.

As soon as ever our legislature can steal a little time from wrangling about General Banking laws, and General Railroad laws, and laws conferring special privileges upon wealth, we would supplicate their attention towards a general school law for the benefit of the generation that is to succeed them. The wretched parsimony, the contemptible half-way measures adopted towards the public schooling of the children of the State, is a disgrace to the age in which we live. The men who vote away thousands of dollars annually from the State Treasury into the pockets of hungry partizans and pimps, who pay two thousand dollars a year for 'stationery' which never cost half that sum, who vote themselves books and money from the treasury without law or precedent. These men, we say, are seized with a sudden fit of economy when the question of eduation is broached, and talk feelingly of the 'burdens of taxation!'

It is time that a broad and liberal foundation was laid in the policy of New Jersey, in regard to the public school system. In comparison with this subject—in its influence upon the future glory and greatness of our State—your banking laws, and your railroad laws sink into utter insignificance and contempt.

Let some member who has brains, courage and perseverence move in this matter. The 'Trentonian' will stick by him while a mast is left standing, or a single rag of canvass remains fluttering in the breeze of hope.—Trentonian.

☞ Mr. Thurston, the Oregon Delegate in Congress, was in 1844, a citizen in Maine, and moved from thence to Iowa; the next year he started, with his wife, two children, and an ox-team, for Oregon, driving the team himself, two thousand miles, to the Columbia River.

☞ 'I hope you will be able to support me,' said a young lady while walking out one eveniag with her intended, during a somewhat slippery state of the side walk. 'Why, yes,' said the somewhat hesitating swain, 'with a little assistance from your father.' There was some confusion, and profound silence.

Were we to ask a hundred men, who from small beginnings have attained a condition of respectability and influence, to what they imputed their succes in life, the general answer would be; 'It was from being early compelled to think and depend on ourselves. Chambers.

☞ A young lady who was rebuked by her mother for kissing her intended, justified herself by quoting the passage—'Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them.'

☞ We commend to the attention of the members of the Legislature, and especially the whig members, and the people generally, the following article from the New York Tribune of Feb 2, reviewing and contrasting the Whig legislation of New-Jersey with the more liberal policy persued in her sister States, showing conclusively that the whig party or their rulers in New Jersey are entirely behind the enlightened spirit of the age. Will those who have the power, and pledged themselves to reform these abuses, to obtain it. heed the warning ere it be too late?

The policy of 'masterly inactivity' has prevailed in the legislation and government of our nearest sister State for a time whereof our memory runneth not to the contrary. In Education, Banking security, Transportation facilities, and many other important respects, she is constantly dropping steadily astern. While other States have compelled their townships to provide efficiently for the Education of all the children within their borders, New-Jersey has positively restricted the power of the towns to tax themselves for Educational purposes to a very inadequate and inconsiderably percentage While other States have been strengthening the basis of their currencies respectively by requiring their Banks to deposit ample securities in the public chest and receive their bills countersigned therefrom, at the same time abandoning the system of special charters for one of equal and free permission to all who have the disposition and the means to engage in Banking, New-Jersey still clings to the old out-worn system of special charters procured by the skillful administration of Champagne and Oysters to the legislators pro tem with securities duly bespoken in the charter but often utterly absent from the vault or from any other tangible abiding place Hence swindling bankers find within her borders the most tempting field for the exercise of their professional skill: hence business men of other States, who have a genius for disbursing more money than they can easily borrow, find their account in buying up each his Jersey Bank and omitting money without limit or check, for which he pays no interest and the public has no reliable security If his Business prospers, his Bank enables him to make a great fortune rapidly: and if a reverse comes, his Bank blows up and its creditors may whistle for their money. Between this and the Free Banking System, with convertible security in the public coffers instead of a poetical supposition thereof in the banker's private chest, there would seem to be no room for comparison as to safety: yet Jersey shakes her head and thinks—or rather, her Bank Presidents shake it for her and make her imagine she is thinking, which answers the same end. She ponders vacantly and does nothing.

On the subject of Household and Homestead Exemption, New-Jersey stands equally in the background Most of her Free sisters have long ago settled the former question by a liberal exemption of Furniture, Implements, &c. &c from seizure on distress or execution None of them think of imitating the mistake of Lot's wife so far as we can hear. On the contrary, several States have already gone forward to the Exemption of the Home also of every family from confiscation for debt under proper limitations are with safeguards against designing knavery. But New-Jersey only a few years since abolished Imprisonment for Debt, and had hard work to hold on to that Her exemption of personal effects from distress is of the narrowest kind, while she has hardly begun yet to think of Homestead Exemption. But she will think of it, and in earnest, before many years

As to the Railroad Monopoly, we await the forthcoming Report of the Investigating Commissions before saying a gread deal. If that should under take to lay most of the blame on the consolidate Companies, we shall interpose a word. We hold that the Companies have behaved much better than the State throughout, and that it is not often that so gigantic a monopoly has been less oppressive. But a State of gardeners, fruit-growers, market-men, which could allow its law-makers to be oyster-suppered into granting such a monopoly what shall be thought of it? Who could suppose that a community whose products urgently demand and would richly sustain Railroads through every County would tie up its hands and consent to wheel its bulky products over yielding sands at an added cost (including injury to the fruit, &c) of not less than Half a Million of Dollars per annum in order to clutch some Forty to Sixty Thousand which the Monopoly hands over punctually as tho State's share of the Spoils of Victory,' stripped from citizens of other States who are compelled to pass through this? Just think of legislators stipulating, after this Central Railroad had been built not to allow any other, no matter how necessary to their own constituency, on which travelers might reach New-York from Philadelphia or the reverse. Does any one imagine that this sort of restraint upon the natural right of producers to make cheap roads to their markets will long be tolerated?

—"I am constrained to tell you, my Lords," said Brougham in urging the Parliamentary Reform bill upon the House of Incurables, "that through this House or over this House, REFORM WILL BE CARRIED." He was heard and heeded, even in that stronghold of mummy institutions whereof the soul has departed May we not entreat the present rulers of New-Jersey to heed the admonition?

Cheap Postage.

The New York Cheap Postage Association has expressly stated that one of its original and fundamental objects, is to effect a postal reform by which pre-paid letters under half an ounce, shall be carried to any part of the United States for two cents. We hope that Congress will pass such a Bill this Session. We have no fears of a decrease in the revenue—not the shadow of a fear.

We also advocate an ocean two cents postage law for the whole world. We heartily concur in the views of Elihu Buritt, in regard to the limits of such a system. A letter from New York to Liverpool costs 24 cents—nearly as much for carriage as a barrel of flour. In the name of common sense, how is it that a letter becomes so heavy on sea beside what it is on land? In Englanc, a letter of half an ounce will be carried for one penny from Dover to John O'Groats, but whenever it gets on board an ocean steamship, somehow or other it gets very heavy all to once—passing into the scale half an ounce, and out on the other side six times heavier It is a strange process, that of postal transformation. Chemistry has its wonders, and so has Geology, but none to equal this. It surely must be built on that scientific deduction, ascribed, to Faraday, that 'a drop of water contains as much electricity as would sink a ship.'

Mr Clay's Compromise Resolutions

Preamble, It being desirable for the peace, concord and harmony of the Union of these States to settle and adjust amicably all existing questions of controversy between them arising out of the institution of Slavery, upon a fair, equitable and just basis, Therefore

Resolved, That California, with suitable boundaries, ought, upon her application, to be admitted as one of the States of this Union, without the imposition by Congress of any restriction in respect to the exclusion or introduction of Slavery within those boundaries.

Resolved, That as Slavery does not exist by law, and is not likely to be introduced, into any of the territory acquired by the United States from the Republic of Mexico, it is inexpedient for Congress to provide by law, eitheir for its introduction into or exclusion from any part of the said Territory; and that appropriate Territorial Governments ought to be established by Congress in all of the said territory not assigned as the boundaries of the proposed State of California, without the adoption of any restriction or condition on the subject of Slavery.

Resolved, That the western boundary of the State of Texas out to be fixed on the Rio del Norte, commencing one marine league from its mouth, and running up that river to the southern line of New-Mexico: thence with that line eastwardly, and so continuing in the same direction to the line established between the United States and Spain, excluding any portion of New-Mexico, whether lying on the east or west of that river

Resolved, That it be proposed to the State of Texas that the United States will provide for the payment of all that portion of the legitimate and bona fide public debt of that State, contracted prior to its annexation to the United States, and for which the duties on foreign imports were pledged by the said State to its creditors, not exceeding the sum of $——, in consideration of the said duties so pledged having been no longer applicable to that object after the said annexation, but having thenceforward become payable to the United States; and upon the condition also that the said State of Texas shall, by some solemn and authentic act of her Legislature, or of a Convention, relinquish to the United States any claim which it has to any part of New-Mexico

Resolved, That it is inexpedient to abolish Slavery in the district of Columbia, while that institution continues to exist in the State of Maryland, without the consent of that State, without the consent of the District, and without just compensation to the owners of slaves within the District.

But Resolved, That it is expedient to prohibit within the District the slave-trade, in slaves brought into it from States or places beyond the limits of the district, either to be sold therein as merchandize, or to be transported to other markets without the district of Columbia.

Resolved, That more effectual provision ought to be made by law, according to the requirement of the constitution, for the restitution and delivery of persons bound to service or labor in any State who may escape into any other State or territory in the Union.

Resolved, That Congress has no power to prohibit or obstruct the trade in slaves between the slaveholding States: but that the admission or exclusion of slaves brought from one into another of them, depends exclusively upon their own particular laws.

The Drury Case--Jury Discharged --Rioter Sentenced.

NEW YORK, Feb 2

The jury in the case of Drury, charged with an attempt upon the life of Thomas Warner, Esq, came into court this morning, and stated that they were unable to agree. The judge thereupon discharged them It is understood they stood eight for acquital and four for conviction.

The young man, Long, who was convicted on the charge of setting fire to the Astor Opera House, was, this morning, sentenced to two years imprisonment.

Mr. Day, Chairman of the judiciary committee in the House, we observe has reported adversely to the petitions asking the abolition of the property qualificication in the case of jurors. We think Mr. Day's nomenclature very inappropriate: his name should be changed to Night as more expressive of the darkness and vandalism of a majority of the Whig Judiciary committee. Let every poor man, especially every whig, think of this when he has a vote to give Mr. Day says you don't know enough to sit on juries because you ain't rich. Were old Ben. Franklin living at this day he would call Judiciary Day a Jack-Ass — N. J. Herald.

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

A curious dialogue, 'tis said,
Took place among the ladies,
Of DRY GOODS AND GROCERIES,
Where the best place to trade is!

Mrs. A. S. and Mrs B,
Declared they knew where was good T.
Mrs L. and O wished to know,
If anywhere on Earth they'd go!
For, good T was hard to get,
They neither had had good as yet.
B. S. and A., that is the Mrs,
Knew also where to get their dresses,
And sugar, ribbons, and molasses,
Carpets, earthenware, looking-glasses,
Muslin, over-shoes, and gloves,
Blankets, saleratus, nutmegs, cloves,
Umberellas, tin pans, and toys,
Beautiful ones for girls or boys;
In fact, everything that's eat, drank or wore,
You'l find it at D. BULLMAN'S Store!

You'l find this just as 'tis said
If 'tis not, then you need not trade;
My thanks for the past to all are due,
While a happy New Year I wish to you.

DANIEL BULLMAN.

IMPORTANT TO HORSEMEN.

DR. PEARSON'S BARBER'S

EMBROCATION

IS decidedly the best preparation that can be used for the cure of sprains, bruises, cuts, galls, splint, curb, ringbone spavin, stiffness of the joints, &c. It is an article which should be in the hands of every horseman, and no stable should be without a bottle of it Price only 25 and 50 cents per bottle.

The following is the testimony of Mr Schench, proprietor of the "Somerset House," Somerville, N J., a gentleman well known to horsemen in New Jersey.

DR. S. A. PEARSON: Dear Sir—I feel it a duty which I owe to you and the community at large, or rather that part of the community who possess, or in any way have charge of Horses, to say, that I have used your Embrocation,' for horses. It is decidedly the best preparation that I have ever used, or have any knowledge of for the various diseases which it is recommended

I also know a great number of my friends who have used it—and they all say, that it is the best medicine for horses that they have ever used. I would confidently recommend every person who has a horse should keep a bottle of this valuable Embrocation in his stable

Yours respectfully, AB'M C SCHENCK.

CHAIN PUMPS.

THE best machine for raising water, in use — This Pump has many advantages over any other in use on account of its simplicity of construction, being made wholly of wood and galvanized iron, not liable to get out of order or to get deranged in any way It can never freeze in winter, and can be put in wells of any depth

It takes less power to work it than any other machine, to raise the same amount of water

It is never obstructed by gravel or sand: it keeps the water perfectly sweet and fresh: the action of the chain mixes the gasses with the water always keeping it lively and fresh: on ceasing to work it, the water in the tube descends to the level of the water in the well: on commencing to work the pump, the first water that is drawn is from the bottom of the well.

☞ This pump received the premium at the late Essex county fair

These Pumps may be had at the Pump Factory of S. B. Miller, 340 Broad-street, Newark, N. J.

GREAT AMERICAN REMEDY.

Vegetable Dyspepsia Bitters.

TO THE PUBLIC,

DR HUTCHINGS would call the attention of all afflicted with dyspepsia, and the various disorders arising from a diseased stomach, to his remedy therefor. His DYSPEPSIA BITTERS will be found, on trial, to contain every property requisite to restore the disordered stomach to a healthy action: to reproduce the lost appetite of the patient, and do away with the periodical nervous headache and general debility consequent on this afflicting disease Thousands have tested its efficacy, and thousands more are now under treatment; and not one solitary case of failure has yet been reported to him This is consolatory, and urges him on in his efforts to relieve poor suffering humanity. He could fill a volume with certificates of those who have been permanently cured; but he conceives the testimony of a few well-known citizens will answer every purpose The reader will find, on looking over the following testimonials, they are not "got up" for the occasion: but bona fide letters from gentlemen who can be seen at any time at their places of business.

The following Certificate is from M. B. Brady, the Celebrated Daguerreotypist:

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness, I was advised to take Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia M. B. BRADY.

No. 205 Broadway, N Y.

From Luther B Wyman, Esq, late President of the New York Musical Society, now of Brooklyn.

The undersigned was afflicted with the Dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half during a greater portion of which time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself, until he was recommended to try Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, he very soon derived benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of Hutchings' Bitters for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine.

L. B WYMAN, 38 Burling Slip.

New York, Sept 3 1849

Dear Sir—My wife having been a great sufferer from dyspepsia, low spirits, palpitation of the heart, and having been cured as I believe by your Bitters, I most cheerfully attest their efficacy: her case was a bad one In the space of four months she lost her strength and thirty-five pounds of flesh: was compelled to abandon her household affairs: there seemed but little probability of a cure until she began to take your bitters: in one week she was greatly relieved, and in three weeks she was perfectly well, and has since gained thirty pounds. You are at liberty to use this if it will at all further your laudable purpose of circulating this valuable remedy

DOCT PEARSON'S

PULMONIC EXPECTORANT,

FOR the cure of Coughs, Colds, Consumption of the Lungs, Influenza, Bronchitis, Asthma, Pain in the Breast, spitting of blood, Whooping Cough, Croup or Hives, Hoarseness, Difficulty of breathing, and every other disease of the Lung and the Breast.

This invaluable medicine should be in the possession of every family. In a country where the continual and sudden changes of the atmosphere, from heat to cold, and from cold to heat, render the inhabitants extremely liable to diseases of the Lungs and Breast, it is of the most vital importance that every one should be in possession of a remedy that shall at once effectually and permanently cut short those diseases, and restore the patient to health The first symptom of cold or influenza should be immediately attacked and reduced by some remedy that has power over the disease. The medicine which has the most complete control over these diseases, and will most speedily restore the health of the patient is

PEARSON'S PULMONIC EXPECTORANT.

The following Card of three respectable phisicians sets forth the virtues of Dr Pearson's pulmonic Expectorant. 'Having made use of Dr Pearson's pulmonic Expectorant, we feel it a duty to recommend it as a safe and effectual cure for the various diseases for which it is intended We are acquainted with many persons who have been cured of Cough, Bronchitis, pain in the breast and side, spitting blood, palpitation of the heart, and incipient consumption, by its use, and many of them after all other means had failed'

A Fearson, M. D U S Navy; S. K Leedem, M D. Champlain Co, Ohio; W. R. Cadwallader, M. D. U. S. Navy.

Dr. Pearson's Carminative Balsam

Is decidedly the most beneficial remedy for the cure of Dysentary, Cholera Morbus and Summer complaint, that is known to man Parents will find it the best medicine that can be used for young children and infants And every person who is travelling in the summer months should not be without a bottle of it in their possession: as it is an infalliable remedy against the change produced in the system by drinking bad water

We annex the following certificate of Mrs A M. Sanford, of New York, in reference to the Carminative Balsam We might add a long list, but consider this sufficient.

This is to certify that I have used Dr Pearson's Carminative Balsam, and confidently believe it to be the best medicine that can be used for the various diseases for which it is recommended, and recommend it to the ladies who are travelling in summer months, and to mothers for the fretting and crying of infants for which it is a certain cure

MRS A M SANFORD.

No 160 East Broadway N. Y.

The proprietor of the above valuable medicines, as also of Dr. Pearson's Barber's Embrocation for Horses, being himself a Physician and graduate of one of the best medical schools in the U S. and having had the advantage of years of experience in an extensive practice, is therefore from the practical knowledge which he has acquired, well qualified to prescribe those remedies, and restore the patient to sound health

Prepared only by S. A Pearson M D., and for sale wholesale and retail, at No 106 North 4th street Philadelphia Also, by J. R. Swallow, General Agent, No. 123 Fulton-st N. Y., by whom all orders for the above medicines will be promptly attended to How Lumkin's Wife got a Cradle.

BY PETER PEPPERPOD, ESQ.

"When a woman will, she will, and there's an end on't.
—Vide any place you choose to look.

Miss Louisa Stubbs married Mr. Lumkin, a fine, handsome young gentleman, whom she had so long adored as the choicest pattern of the opposite sex' and firmly believed that her whole life would now glide along as pleasantly as any dream of fairy land. Mr. Lumkin had sworn that she was a perfect angel—good, charming, beautful, and without the shadow of faults of any kind—whom he should ever deem it his privilege as well as duty to please and gratify, by seeking to fulfil her every and most trivial wish. Well, during the next twelve months he kept his vow, and she was the happiest of women—seeming to enjoy pleasure while basking in the sunshine of her smiles, every whim of her's was granted unmurmuringly, lest the smiles should be changed to frowns, and he in conseqnence be rendered distractedly miserable. Though following a laborious mechanical business, he never came home so tired but that he was willing to run to the store, split wood, draw water from the cistern, in fact, make himself generally useful, as every loving husband should.

As might naturally be expected, his wife doated on him more and more every day, and, considering that such unequalled affection on his part deserved some suitable return, in due time presented him with a beautiful daguerreotype portait of himself, and filled the cup of his happiness to the brim. Of course, she then expected that he would, if any thing, begin to in crease in affection, and gratify her wishes to a greater extent than before. But, alas! for this expectation, like a great many others in this sublunary world of blighting hopes, it was doomed to be disappointed. Mr. Lumkin began to discover that it was entirely too far for him to go the store—that it was nonsense to ask him to draw water, when his wife could do it just as well herself—that he was too tired to attend to the task of splitting wood.—Bad as was this change, however, Mrs. Lumkin contrived to bear it uncomplainingly; but when was added the sin of denying her divers articles she wanted, on the foolish plea that they were entirely unnecessary, and that he had something else to do with his money than let it go in such extravagance, the scale at length fell from her eyes, and she learned the alarming fact that even she must look to having her wishes greatly thwarted.

Mr. Lumkin's baby, like all other babies had a tendency to be cross, and that generally at such times as it was most devoutly to be wished that it would be quiet; therefore, Mrs. Mumkin wished to procure a cradle, wherein it might be rocked to a gentle lullaby, and desired Mr. Lumkin to purchase one without delay. But Mr Lumkin, in common with a great many men, had certain opinions of his own, to which he adhered with the most dogmatic stubborness and would almost as soon have thought to part with a limb, as to acknowledge them to be wrong. One of these opinions was based on the singular idea that it was the silliest piece of nonsense in the world, to accommodate babies with the luxury of a cradle, as if they were from the first used to being laid in bed, they would sleep just as well, and be far more healthy. Besides, he contended that a cradle was an unsightly piece of furniture, which was everlastingly in the way, and could never by any artifice be stored in any hole, nook, or corner, whatever. Such being his peculiar views on the point, Mrs. Lumkin was again disappointed; for despite her daily teasings during three mortal months, morning, noon and night, Mr. Lumkin remained firm to his resolve.

One day, at the end of that time, Mr. Lumkins brought a large rocking chair for his own especial comfort, and told his wife to make a cushion for it, as soon as ever she could spare time for the purpose. But a week went by and the cushion still remained untouched.—Then Mr. Lumkin began to scold, saying it was a pretty come off if a man couldn't be pleased in such a small matter as that. To which Mrs. Lumkin quietly replied, that it would give her the greatest pleasure to provide her husband with a soft seat on which to throw his tired frame after a hard day's work, but, really, the baby was so cross, and as there was no cradle in which to keep it quiet, her time was too much occupied in nursing the dear little cherub to permit her to make either cushions or anything else. Mr. Lumkin was fairly caught, and put on as woful a looking face as you would wish to see. He would not give way, however; he would still adhere to his resolution on principle! What! he beat at his own game by his wife! Spirit of manhood, forbid the thought. No, sir, he would buy a cushion, and let Mrs. Lumkin see he was not in the least beholden to her. So, that very night he started up town in a huff, and expended twice as much in the purchase of a cushion as would have been the cost had it been made at home. But what mattered that, he had bought it on principle—the principle of proving that he could, and would have his own way.

It was a beautiful sight to see the majestic air with which he threw himself on that cushion, the moment he had settled it nicely in the chair; and elevating his feet on the table, leaned back in the very fullest luxury of indolent enjoyment. He had half a notion to sleep all night there out of spite because his wife did not seem mortified as he could have wished, but he thought better of it, and instead sought relief in giving to Mrs. Lumpkin the assurance that she should'nt have a cradle now under no consideration, and retired to bed.

"John," said his wife, with a very teasing smile on her coutenance; as they sat at breakfast the following morning, I dreamed last night that you still refused to buy me a cradle, and as dreams always go by contraries, I know that you have concluded to buy one. Will you send it home to-day, love?

"No, nor at any other time," replied John, biting savagely at his buttered toast.

"I think you will, John, love," responded his wife with the same teasing smile (only a little more so)—indeed I am sure you will. You are only letting on you won't so as to send it home unexpectedly, and cause me an agreeable surprise."—And she looked up into his face so archly, and at the same time so sweetly tantalizing, that he had not been more than usually out of temper, he must have clasped her in his arms and hugged and kissed her on the spot.

But he was out of humour, and so failed to seize the blissful opportunity (ungrateful dog that he was) and snatching his hat as though wishful to tear her in twain at the very least, he repeated that he would not buy a cradle, no, he would—something lost in the stamping of his boots—before he could be wheedled into any such nonsense.

All that day Mr. Lumkin nursed his mortified feelings warmly, and at night returned home with a full determination to spread himself out and take a bigger, 'stiff' in his chair than ever. But, ye gods and little fishes! what an unexpected disappointment awaited him. There, before his wide-staring eyes, asleep and calmly gentle as a summer's day lay their tender little love branch reclining in the rocking chair.

Reader, didst thou ever see a miserly man stoop to pick up a gold piece from the gutter, and discouered it to be merely brass metal?—Then hast thou seen the exact fac simile of Mr. Lumkin's countenance, as he stood transfixed before his wife's ingenious make-shift for a cradle.

To bed Mr. Lumkin retired that night, without enjoying the luxury of a single moment's loll on the cushion. On the following evening it was the same; and the one after that; it seemed as though Mrs. Lumkin must keep the baby purposely awake in the day time, it remained so sound asleep during the hours its father was at home. And such another twisting about on the hard wood-bottomed chairs as the unfortune Mr. Lumkin performed, in the vain attempt to gain an easy posture, was surely never before seen. It was a wonder how Mrs. Lumkin contrived to keep from laughing outright while witnessing the poor fellow's miserable evolutions; but she did, and appeared to be fully imbued with the belief that every thing was going on just as it should.

On the fourth morning after the new order of things, Mrs. Lumkin was summoned by a knock at her door, which knock proved to have emanated from a carman, whose car standing near the curb in front of the house, and who asked if that was Mr. Lumkin's.

'Yes,' was the response.

'Then I've got a cradle for you, I believe,' returned the carman, and proceeded to lift out a handsome willow one from the vehicle, and placed it in the parlor.

'I knew it!' exclaimed Mrs. Lumkin, carrying the cradle into the kitchen, and as she lay the darling little sweet within its comfortable embrace, after arranging the bed and clothing she had already confidently prepared in readiness for the present occasion, she continued:

'Bless his dear, good kind heart! I knew he'd buy me a cradle! I knew he would.'

It is on record that there was more hugging and kissing in the Lumkin residence on that same evening, than ever occured before outside of the first three months of married life.

Scenes in a School-House.

Under this head we find in the York Spirit, some humorous reminiscences, from which we extract the following spicy scenes in a country school-house:—

'First class, rise!' thundered our old schoolmaster. Well the first class did rise.

'Now answer every question correctly or I'll break every bone in your ugly little bodies,' was the next pronunciamento of the old autocrat of our red school-house.

'John Brown, what do you understand by acoustics?'

'Why, a stick to drive cows with, I suppose.

'Get out, you young vagabond! Did I not see you reading about the science of sound?'

'Guess not; that was about Sylvester Sound the Somnambulist.'

'It was, eh? Sarah you are John's younger sister?'

'Yeth, thir.'

'What is acoustics?'

'I know, thir—it ith, it ith the art of making a noith and hearing a noith.'

'You are right. Explain it.'

'Yeth, thir. If you thtick your finger in your mouth and then pull it out thuddenly, the cold air rusheth into the vacuum, and produteth a thound that thtrikes upon the tympan of the ear, which makth the thound audiable, and is denominated the thienth of accouthtixth.'

'You are quite right, Sarah. John, can you now tell me what is meant by the science of accoustics? Be careful, sir, or you'll feel my stick.

'Yes, sir. A cow sticks your finger in her mouth—kicks over the tin pan, which sounds awful, and is called the science of a cow's kick.'

'Well, John, you do credit to your teacher. You may take your books and run home.'

'Willy Chase, what is the currency of the United States?'

'Cash and money.'

'What are its denominations?'

'Coppers, bogus and Bungtown cents, pennies, fips, pics, fourpence-hap'nies, levys, ninepences, Spanish quarters, pistareens, and shin-plasters'

'That will do.'

'Jones, what is the standard weight of the United States?'

'Scale weight and a little longer.'

'Samuel, how many kingdoms are there in the material world?'

'Four.'

'Three, only three.'

'Four, I think, sir.'

'Well, name them—what are they?'

'Mineral kingdom, animal kingdom, vegetable kingdom, and kingdom come.'

'Now, how many kinds of motion are there?'

'Four.'

'No, only two; voluntary and involuntary.'

'Simeon says there's four.'

'What does Simion say they are?'

'Point, point up, point down and wig-wag.'

'You rascal! I've a mind to wig-wag your jacket! Hadn't you better describe the motion of my stick?'

'I can sir.'

'And its effect?'

'Yes, sir. Up stroke and down stroke—the up stroke regular and easy, the down stroke spasmodically electrifying, and its effect strikingly indescribable.'

'You understand that, I see.'

'George Smith, do you recollect the story of David and Goliah?'

'Yes, sir; David was a tavern-keeper, and Goliah was an intemperate man.'

'Who told you that?'

'Nobody; I read it, and it is said that David fixed a sling for Goliah and Goliah got slewed with it.'

'Wasn't David a musician?'

'Yes, sir—he played psalms on the harp, a favorite instrument with the Jews, and at the present day it is called a Jews-harp. I have one in my pocket; here it is. Place it in your mouth thus—breathe on the tongue gently, then strike it with your fingers this way, and the psalms, in harmonious corncob, fructify on the ear as natural as thunder'

'That's sufficient; you can pocket your harp.'

'Jane, what is time?'

'Something that flies, any how.'

'How do you make that out?'

'Why, tempus fugit.'

'What's that?'

'Latin; it means that time flies, and how can time if it flies, be anything else than something that flies?'

'Excellent. What is the meaning of requiescat in pace?'

'Rest, quiet cat, in peace.'

'Well, Jane, at Latin you are perfectly au fait, which, translated, means perfectly awful; it is a great phraise, from the classics, and applicable to this class particularly. Now take off your jackets, and I will give you 'reward of merit.' Those who get more than they merit can keep the overplus as a token of my special affection for them; and those who get less can have the mistake rectified by mentioning it to me.'

PREDESTINATION.—'Do you believe in predestination?' said the captain of a Mississippi steamer to a clergyman who happened to be travelling with him.

'Of course I do.'

'And you also believe that what is to be will be?'

'Certainly.'

'Well, I'm glad of it.'

'Why?'

'Beecause I intend to pass that boat ahead in fifteen consecutive minutes, if there be any virtue in pine knots and loaded safety valves. So don't be alarmed for if the bilers ain't to bust they wont't.'

Here the divine began putting on his hat and looking very much like backing out, which the captain, seeing, he observed:

'I thought you said you believed in predestination, and what is to be will be?'

'So I do, but I prefer being a little nearer the stern when it takes place!'

MORAL CHARACTER.—There is nothing which adds so much to the beauty and power of man as a good moral character. It is his wealth—his life.—It dignifies him in every condition, and glorifies him in every period in life. Such a character is more to be desired than anything else on earth. It makes a man free and independent. No servile tool, no crouching sycophant, no treachorous honor-seeker ever bore such a character. The pure joys of truth and righteousness never spring in such a person. If young men but knew how much a good character would dignify and exhalt them—how glorious it would make their prospects, even in this life; never should we find them yielding to the groveling and base born purposes of human nature,

STRIKING DEFINITION.—At the examination of the children of the Windsor Infant School, a short time since, a little boy was asked to explain his idea of 'bearing false witness against your neighbor.' After hesitating he said it was 'telling tales.' On which the worthy and reverend examiner said, 'That's not exactly an answer. What do you say?' adressing a little girl who stood next, when she immediately replied,, 'It was when nobody did nothing, and somebody went and told of it.'

'Quite right,' said the examiner, amidst irrepressible roars of laughter' in which he could not help joining, the gravity of the whole proceedings being completely upset.

THE LATEST.—A woman in Ohio put her baby into the washing-tub, and its dirty frock and petticoat into the cradle, and set her little boy to rock it. She did not discover her mistake until the baby cried when she pinned its left leg to the line as she hung it out in the yard to dry.

'If a man were to set out,' says Lord Halifax, 'by calling everything by its right name he would be knocked down before he got to the next corner.

"FREEDOM TO ALL OPINIONS CANDIDLY EXPRESSED."

This being our motto, we are at all times prepared to practice it by the admission into our columns of articles on all subjects calculated to benefit the welfare and happines of man, whether in accordance with our own opinions or not—simply premising that they are written in accordance with the equal rights of others and a due regard to their moral effects on society.—All men, we hold, have an inalienable and equal right to think, speak and act as their consciences may dictate provided they do not infringe upon the equal rights of their fellow man. The legitimate business of the newspaper we consider to be to properly represent the wants and promote the interests of all—to protect, defend and advance these, man's natural, political, social and religious rights—at least for this was ours established; considering our own interest best secured by promoting the interests of all. We do not therefore intend to advocate the exclusive interests of any party or sect or be improperly swayed by their acts or opinions but to advocate whatever we conceive to be for the best interest of our fellow citizens, our country and for all mankind.

Holding the opinion with our forefathers—as proclaimed by them to all the world, in the Declaration of Independence—that man's rights are equal and inalienable—and consequently that he does not possess the power himself to alienate them, and therefore like stolen goods, he may reclaim them wherever found, as none could have had legitimate right consequently no authority to alienate them, being conferred by God he cannot himself possess the power to delegate them to another. These we consider the fundamental principles of true democracy upon which our government was and is founded, as proclaimed as aforesaid. We shall therefore advocate to the best of our abilities the restoration of these rights, by whom or whatsoever power held, and strenuously oppose the abridgment of those that are left by whatever power attempted. upon this ground, with a free invitation to all to point out our errors and advance the truth, we hope to be sustained—that every person in our village will take an interest in our welfare, by supporting our paper, that we may be enabled to advocate and sustain the interests and welfare of all. Our forefathers maintained that man was endowed by his Creator with certain rights—which rights were equal and inalienable to all mankind. They, after appealing to the Supreme Judge of the World for the rectitude of their intentions, maintained them against the most powerful nation on the earth, and tney were acknowledged by them to be so; they also declared that for this end alone was governments established, deriving their just—which are their only powers—from the consent of the governed; and that whenever it became subversive of these ends it was the right, as it is the duty of the people to alter or abolish it.

In the constitution or creation of government man necessarilly delegates power, the necessary power (not rights) to the goverment for the protection of his rights, to advance his interest and happiness—to collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises, --to pay the debts and provide for the common defence—to coin money and regulate its value—to fix the standard of weights and measures—to establish post offices and postroads—to promote science and the useful arts--to constitute tribunals sinferior to the supreme court—to declare war, raise and support armies, maintain a navy &c. &c. But man, "dressed up in a little brief authority," by his fellow man assumes to himself rights over his fellow man not delegated to him,—and as they could not be—he becomes a tyrant, declares himself a God, or his vicegerent and anointed king and high priest on earth and which submitted to has ever been construed to sanction this pretended hereditary right! inheritable from father to son! Thus it is pretended that man surrendered his rights when he only delegated powers for their protection! Man's rights are so simple, so definable so easy of comprehension "that he who runs may read them." "They are equal and inalienable;" whatever rights the greatest may possess belong also to the most humble; man never did and never can delegate his rights away. On this ground alone it was that our fourfathers were or could be justified in abrogating or annuling the authority of the British king who had as good authority over them as it was possible for any government to hold, being a constitutional monarchy, strictly defining the powers of the king; yet they annulled it because it had usurped their rights, and provided new guards for their future security. This right was acknowledged by every nation so far as we were concerned, who acknowledged our independence, and must sooner or later be acknowledged in their own dominions by every nation on the earth. On this ground also the People of this state, of these United States demand the surrender of their every usurped right; by this simple rule of common sense is his rights clearly defined.

Indeed! thousands will undoubtedly exclaim, how can this be? we have ever considered, being so taught, that it was necessary to surrender a portion of our rights that the remainder thereby might be protected and guarantied! Thus it is that man has been taught by those who have heretofore and many of whom still pretend to have power and authority over matters and rights pertaining not only to this, but to another world; claiming to hold the keys of the kingdom of heaven, laying grievous burthens upon mens shoulders, demanding that they only possess the right, the hereditary right, as being the only true successors of the King of kings! Thus it is that man by little and little has been imposed upon by his fellow man, whose rights could only equal his own.

We would ask all such to carefully examine into their rights and ascertain what powers it is necessary for them to delegate to government for the proper and necessary protection of their and their fellow man's rights—as all beyond what is sufficient being unnecessary, are therefore null and void. Look over the Constitution—that charter of our liberties as predicated by our forefathers upon man's inalienable rights and point out that section which usurps, withholds or unequally confers these rights and privileges. Is it in that section which confers the power to collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises, which are to pay the debts and provide for the general defence? Is it in coining money and regulating its value? Is it in fixing the standard of weights and measures? Is it in establishing postoffices and postroads?—in promoting science and the useful arts?—in constituting tribunals inferior to the suprme court?—in declaring war, supporting armies or maintaining a navy? Are not all these powers defined, and delegated simply to protect and defend the above rights?

Therefore as it must be clearly evident to all that our forefathers established this government for the protection of man's rights, and further, that whenever they cease to accomplish this object it is the right and the duty of the people to alter or abolish it. It therefore follows that it becomes obligatory on every patriotic citizen—he being an integral portion of the sovereignty of these United States, and as necessary to the defence of his own rights—that he protect and defend the rights of his fellow man.

Therefore, as it is not necessary for the protection of the equal rights of the white man that he should be the slave of the black man, neither is it necessary for the black man to be the slave of the white man to secure his rights but is as derogatory to the dignity of the one as it is to the freedom and equal rights of the other, it is therefore the duty of the white man—unless he would make our forefathers hypocrites and liars, bring disgrace on them and the government which they established—to enfrachise him. Further, is it necessary to the protection of the equal rights of A. that B. should possess all the land or so much of it that A. has not a sufficient quantity left to sustain life? Did B. create it, that he has a right to more than he can occupy and use or till so long as A. has not sufficient to sustain life—has not B, just the same right to monopolize all the water as he has to deprive him of so much land? What can be the difference and how can he acquire the one right and not the other? Again, by what right does A sell all the rum which it may be considered *un*necessary to drink in this village, is it because it is necessary to the equal rights of this community? Why not give him a special charter to sell all the necessaries of life and compel this community to buy of him! does the constitution contain the one power and not the other, or is it the superior protection that rum selling affords this community that it is necessary to enforce it by a special act? Again, is it necessary to the protection, or derogatory to the rights of the people of New-Jersey that the Camden and Amboy Companies should posses the exclusive right (within certain accessible and only desirable distances) to transport passengers and merchandise across the State, and if it is thus necessary would it not more fully accomplished it if they possesed the additional powers to cross it in every other direction and through and over all the other states of this confederacy? If this is not considered necessary for the protection of the equal rights of the people of New Jersey, and as it is only for their protection, safety and happiness that any right (power) should be delegated ascording to the most strenuous advocates of vested or exclusive rights or privileges whence comes this power? As it is not necessary for their protection, safety or happiness, what other inference can be drawn than that it is a usurpation of the just and equal rights of the people, therefore unconstitutional,—as all other special privileges are which another cannot enjoy upon the same conditions,—null and void.

The Camden & Amboy R. R. Suits.

Mr Field, council for the companies, has been allowed a writ of Error to carry the verdict of the Court of Errors, in the case of Briggs vs. the Camden and Amboy Railroad Company to the Supreme Court of the U. S. The State Gazette says, that on account of the amount of business now before the Court, it is not probable this case can be reached in less than five years!

There are from six to seven hundred cases of this kind commenced against the Company, but each will be contested and carried through all the Courts from a Justice of the Peaec to the Court of Errors. These suits for penalty must be commenced within one year after the transaction, and as the Company altered their rates more than a year ago, this number cannot be increased.

THE EXPLOSION!

The following is the result of the terrib'e explosion in Hague-st N. Y.:

Whole number dead	67
Whole number iujured	30
Whole number escaped	32
Whole number missing	6
Total	135

Truly a more disastrious accident could not well be imagined, or one which so strongly calls for sympathy and assistance to the suffering friends of the Wounded and the Dead.

It would appear by the evidence before the Coronors Jury that the explosion was caused by the safety-valve being weighted at 112 pounds, when the boiler was only intended to carry 40 pounds of steam to the square inch! and that 100 pounds was ordered to be carried by Mr. A. B. Taylor, being 60 pounds more than it was calculated to bear!

☞ The Tribune in commenting on the General Railroad bill before the legislature of this State, says:—

"How the assembled wisdom of New-Jersey cling to the 10 cent tribute levied on unoffending passengers. They seem to think it a profitable operation."

Surely friend Greely ought not to condemn the practical application of his favorite hobby, protection—of making the consumer or recipient of the benefit pay the bonus to the government or wealthy manufacturer. If there is any part of the bill for which he should have a special liking it should be this clause.

According to Senator, Benton, Texas has a gulf frontier of nearly a thousand miles, and a surface of three hundred and fifty thousand square miles. She is large enough to make seven States of the first class; and yet she is now demanding to be made larger. Mr. Benton's bill proposes to reduce her at once with her consent, into a state of about 150,000 square miles; and eventually, into two states of about 75,000 square miles each.

[From the New-Jersey Journal]

Division of Essex Co.

It will be perceived, by reference to the proceedings of the Legislature, that the bill creating the new County of Ocean, by a division of Monmouth, passed the Assembly on Wednesday last. We happened to be in the House when the final vote was taken, and conversed with a large number of the members, many of whom informed us that this was a favorable opportunity to press our application for the division of Essex, at the same time assuring us of their hearty co-operation. They are already familiar with some of the grievances to which the inhabitants of the outer Townships are subjected; they are aware that the pressure of business in our Courts is so great, that jurors are detained from their business for about four weeks at each quarterly term, that witnesses are kept waiting for several days in succession, and that the unavoidable delays, in a majority of cases, are so oppressive to the parties interested, that the difficulty of bringing a suit to trial, operates so disadvantageously as to amount to a denial of justice. They know that the population of Essex is rapidly increasing, that the expenses attending the punishment of crime, are most unjustly distributed, and that the laps of every year is increasing the disproportion by which the country Townships suffer a loss of time and money. They cannot be ignorant that the population of the townships proposed to be included in the new county is greater than that of any one ever created in the state, and that a very large majority of the inhabitants desire to be set off into a seperate organization. Taking these circumstances into consideration, together with many other which might be urged, and remembering that one of the principal objections with the legislature of 1848 was an unwillingness to give East Jersey an additional county until West Jersey was prepared to ask for one to counterbalance our application, we are sure that the time has now arrived to ask for that act of justice. and we mistake the character and disposition of this legislature if they refuse to grant our request.

Copies of a petition may be obtained at this office, bp any person who will put them in circulation.

LATER FROM CALIFORNIA!

The Empire City arrived at her dock about 12 o'clock (Feb. 7) after a passage of ten days from Chagres. She brings 257 passengers and about one and a half millions in gold dust.

The Oregon brought down three millions in gold dust!!

While the Empire City was lying off Chagres on the 26th, there were in all five steamers at anchor, viz: Empire City, Chorokee, (arrived on 20th) Falcon, Alabama, and the British steamship Severn, of London. The Osceola, with materials for the railroad company, was at Chagres.

The Legislatnre met December 15, and was organized on the 17th by the choice of Dr. T. J. White of Sacramento, as speaker of the assembly, and E. K. Chamberlain of San Diego, president pro tem of the senate. Gov. Burnett was inaugerated on the 20th, immediately after which ceremony the legislature voted viva voce for United States senators.

John C. Fremont and Wm. M. Gwin were declared duly elected; Wm. V. Vorhies of San Francisco has been appointed secretary of state; J. S. Houston, controller; Major R. Roman, treasurer; F. J. C. Kewen, attorney-general; Chas. J. Whiting surveyor-general; S. C. Hastings, judge of the supreme court.

The whole number of votes thrown in the election for governor and representatives to congress was only 15,000, although the state can probably poll 70,000 votes.

On the morning of the 24th of December a fire broke out in Dennison's exchange, and in two hours nearly a million of dollars worth of property was destroyed. The Parker house was among the buildings burned.

The prospects for gold hunters for the next season were considered very flattering. It was thought that much larger amount would be taken out than was the past year.

Gold-digging had been mostly suspended for the season and a great many persons were flocking into the towns. Wages of common laborers were much lower, only from four to six dollars a day being paid. Mechanics, such as carpenters, masons, &c. commanded from $12 to $16 a day. The country is overrun with printers.

Lumber was lower, cargo prices from $200 to $275 per M. Flour retailed at $30 per barrel. Mess pork at $35 to $40. Butter $1,50 a pound. Cheese $1.

Coarse short boots were worth $16 to $32 a pair at retail: long boots, suitable for San Francisco street navigation, brought from $50 to $96 per pair. Seamen's wages for the rivers, and bay, were 100 a month; foreign voyages, $80 to $100.

Russia and Turkey.

The Hungarian Prisoners.

A complete reconciliation is said to have taken place between Russia and Turkey—the latter having consented that all those Polish subjects of Russia who were concerned in the late Hungarian movement shall be obliged to leave the Turkish dominions. A similar arrangement is on the point of being entered into between Austria and Turkey.

The Russian list of persons prescribed, contains the name of Gen. Bem and twelve others; that of Austria begins with Kossuth, and contains thirty-two names. It is announced that Madame Kossuth has joined her husband, she having escaped from Hungary in the disguise of a mendicant.

The English Consul at Vienna has discovered a diabolical attempt instigated bp the Austrian Government to murder Kossuth.

Compulsory Virtue---Religion.

We occasionally hear of legislation for the Sabbath. This is the last means that should be adopted for such an end. No considerate being was ever forced by a statute, in his convictions' to hold time, place, or circumstance sacred. There must be a perfect freedom of conscience to give the idea of sacredness any value in the mind of man. What he is compelled to against his convictions, he will contemn secretly, though statutes oblige him to be outwardly reverent. All this legislating for the conscience, only irritates, sours, and renders more obstinate those who believe their natural rights are infiringed upon. It even shuts their minds against much that they would otherwise account true, wise and beautiful.

To render the Sabbath truly sacred or hallowed, men must come intelligently to regard it as a divinely blessing institution—as a day not arbitrarily, or tyrannically imposed, but as wisely and beautifully ordained for the good and glory of man as a day of neekful rest from the toils of life, and of a calm meditation upon the goodness of God, as displayed in all his works. When men come to know and feel, that the Seventh day is holy, as a sanatory provision for physical and mental nature, it will be truly held sacred, for in holding otherwise, man will know that he is doing the greatest injury to himself. Let those who now regard the Sabbath from this nigh point of view, shape their conduct accordingly, and their example will have a better effect than any compulsory statute.—N. Y. Sun.

Arraignment of Professor Webster.—Professor Webster was arraigned before the Supreme Judicial Court on Saturday Feb 9. and pleaded "Not Guilty" in a firm and decided tone of voice. His trial is set down for Tuesday, the 19th of March next. Edward E. Sohier, Esq. and Hon. Pliny Merrick are employed as council for his defence.—Boston Transcript.

Legislature.

Trenton, Feb. 6. 1850.

House.—Bills Passed.—Sup. to charter of Newark—to vary the grades of the schools in that city; to charter Borough of Elizabeth 32 to 1; to charter the Parkesville Hydropathic Institute after some remarks by Mr. Duell 31 to 19.

Feb 7.—Passed—A bill to increase the pay of Common Pleas Judges, after being earniestly advocated by Messrs. Day and Hageman—41 to 11, to render more speedy and effectal proceedings by quo warranto, 45 to 6; to ascertain the times of holding certain courts, changing the time in Cumberland to the 3d Tuesdays in the month, and in Salem to the 4th Tuesdays—48 to 0; to charter Delaware and Raritan Plank Road—42 to 0; Monmouth Plank Road—48 to 0; South River and Freehold Plank Road—45 to 0.

Feb. 8. Senate—On motion of Mr. Craig the rules were suspended, and the bill to create the county of Ocean, as amended in the Senate, was taken up and passed—10 to 9.

The General Banking Law was then taken up, and various amendments were adopted. The bill was then postponed, in order to be reprinted.

Bill passed to Establish Public schools in Newark.

Feb. 11. House—Passed—The sup. to Lien Law extending the same to Morris county, Mansfield and Chester in Burlington, and East Windsor in Mercer sup. to enable inhabitants of schools district No. 1, in Plainfield to build school houses: to confirm the partition of certain real estate in County of Burlington.

☞ Mr. Wetmore on Saturday paid up $50,000 in gold which was deposited with the Sub-Treasurer On Tuesday he is to pay $42,000 more. The remainder of the $181,580 is to await the result of the visit of his counsel to Washington, who left on Saturday. The Government it is hoped will recover the entire amount due from Mr. Wetmore, as security will probably be given for the balance, and his Claims for commissions will not be allowed.

☞ The commissioners apponted by the last legislature to investigat thoroughly the proceedings of the combined Camden and Amboy ralroad and New-Jersey canal transportation companies, reported yersterday morning.

The report exonerates the company from all charges of fraud, compliments their manner of doing business on the railroad, but condemns that pursued on the canal.

Nominations by Governor Haines.—Governor Haines sent into the Senate, Yesterday afternoon, the following nominations.

Judge of the Court of Errors—Robert S Risley,
Secretary of State—Thos. S. Allison.
Clerk in Chancery—Jacob Van Arsdale,
Att'y General—L. Q. C. Elmer,
Prosecutors: Hudson Co. L. R. V. Wright. Burlington—G. S. Cammon. Somerset—John M. Mann. Salem—R. P. Thomson. Warren—R. S. Kennedy. Borough of Elizabeth—Ezra Darby.

☞ A large public Meeting, consisting of members of the Legislature, and many leading and influential gentlemen from different parts of the State, was held at Trenton, on Wednesday evening, for the purpose of urging the passage of a law to prevent Sunday travelling on the public works of the State.

The meeting was a very interesting one, and a fine spirit was manifested favorable to the objects for which it convened.

Congress.—The Slavery question appears to be the all absorbing topic of discussion in this body—the right of Petition being restricted because it may not be in accordance with the peculiar views of some of the members of that body; surely this is a strange idea that the body petitioned should thus dictate what shall and what shall not be petitioned for. The right of petition is a sacred and inalienable right, beyond the power of Congress to deny being settled by the Constitution. Why not receive and refer petitions to their appropriate committee, and let them take such action as in their judgment the nature of case demands?

☞ The following are the names of those Locofocos who vote it necessary that a citizen of New Jersey should own a Jack-Ass--which need not be paid for—or his equivilent value in mud, to entitle him to exercise and enjoy the rights of a freeman of New Jersey!

As we inadvertently omitted four names last week, we republish it that posterity may know who they are indebted to for their liberal and enlightened laws!

☞ Abraham, Brown, Cobb, Condit,
☞ Coriell, Day, Doty, Duell, Emley,
☞ French, Stockton, Thompson, Van-
☞ Dyke, Van Wagoner, Wade, Wood,
☞ Gaskill, Kanouse, Meeker, Pierson,
☞ Wyckoff--21.

A leading Michigan Democratic paper, speaking of the position taken by General Cass on the territorial question, says:

"The people of Michigan undoubtedly, are almost unanimous in favor of the prohibition of slavery in the territories. There is no public man in the State, besides Gen Cass, who dares express an opinion unfavorable to it. He stands solitary and alone in the enjoyment of his opinion, without a constituent to back him, without a cotemporary leader to give him countenance.—Representing this condition of the popular mind, the same Legislature which elected Gen. Cass to his present seat in the United States Senate, instructed him, in unequivocal language, to vote for the application of the proviso to the territories."

The friends of Land Reform and Homestead Exemption are making arrangements for a grand mass demonstration to call on Congress and our various State Lsgislatures to cede to the people of the United States the now unoccupied public domain.

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

A curious dialogue, 'tis said,
Took place among the ladies,
Of DRY GOODS AND GROCERIES,
Where the best place to trade is!

Mrs. A. S. and Mrs. B.,
Declared they knew where was good T.
Mrs. L. and O. wished to know,
If anywhere on Earth they'd go!
For, good T. was hard to get,
They neither had had good as yet.
B. S. and A., that is the Mrs.,
Knew also where to get their dresses,
And sugar, ribbons, and molasses,
Carpets, earthenware, looking-glasses,
Muslin, over-shoes, and gloves,
Blankets, salaratus, nutmegs, cloves,
Umberellas, tin pans, and toys,
Beautiful ones for girls or boys;
In fact, everything that's eat, drank or wore,
You'l find it at D. BULLMAN'S Store!

You'l find this just as 'tis said
If 'tis not, then you need not trade;
My thanks for the past to all are due,
While a happy New Year I wish to you.

UNPRECEDENTED ATTRACTION!—Over 60,000 NATURAL CURIOSITIES!!—Being a combination of Nature and Art, from the unrivalled Mammoth of the Nile to the most minute Dwarf in Christendom!!!

At the opening of this establishment we beg leave to state to our friends in Plainfield and vicinity, that we have spared no pains or expense in making our vast Hall one of splendor and magnificence. The indudements, though too numerous to mention, cannot fail to attract all lovers of variety of whatever grade in society. But as

COLD WEATHER IS COMING,

and the Printer wants a job, I'll not leave you in wonder, but will give a transcript to all ladies and gentlemen, young and old, to call at 85 Broad-st.

AND SEE THE FUN!

For such rattling of Stoves and clatter of Tin,
Never, in Newark before has been.
Stoves, yes, we've the Fashion, the Empire, U. S. and the Bride,
A host of gay parlors, with office beside.
But of all the fine patterns named in our invoice,
The one that ranks highest is the famed People's choice.

UNDERTAKING.

COFFINS AT REDUCED PRICES.

THE subscriber would call the attention of the public to his complete assortment of Coffins, where all the different sizes are finished and ready for use at a moments warning; they are made of Mahogony, Black Walnut and Cherry, and finished in every style, so that all can be suited, also a superior style of stained ones, which he offers remarkably low; he has hitherto defered giving his prices, but as he has understood that there is some misrepresentation in regard to his prices, he deems this sufficient excuse to the public for to say that for a large size Black Walnut Coffin including hearse in attendance he has $6, Mahogany $14, Cherry $6, and small ones accordingly, tight case made in coffin style $1,75. By leaving the order with him, the sexton of either of the churches will be seen if required, and all necessary arrangements made without any extra expense.

J. W. S. MARTIN, Principal.

HE has given up the idea of Cuba being annexed this fall. consequently he has made up his mind to stay a little longer at his old stand adjoining Webstor & Marsh's store, where he offers a new and splendid assortment of Cabinet Furniture, unequalled in this or any of the neighboring towns for stability or neatness of finish, patterns being all new, and we advise all who wish to be fitted out with such articles as he offers, to make their purchases of him instead of going out of the place, do not forget the minerel and you will get a bargain as sure as the whale swallowed Jonah. IMPORTANT TO HORSEMEN.

DR. PEARSON'S BARBER'S

EMBROCATION

IS decidedly the best preparation that can be used for the cure of sprains, bruises, cuts, galls, splint, curb, ringbone. spavin, stiffness of the joints, &c. It is an article which should be in the hands of every horseman, and no stable should be without a bottle of it. Price only 25 and 50 cents per bottle.

The following is the testimony of Mr Schench, proprietor of the "Somerset House," Somerville, N. J., a gentleman well known to horsemen in New Jersey.

DR. S. A. PEARSON: Dear Sir—I feel it a duty which I owe to you and the community at large, or rather that part of the community who possess, or in any way have charge of Horses, to say, that I have used your Embrocation,' for horses. It is decidedly the best preparation that I have ever used, or have any knowledge of for the various diseases which it is recommended.

I also know a great number of my friends who have used it—and they all say, that it is the best medicine for horses that they have ever used. I would confidently recommend every person who has a horse should keep a bottle of this valuable Embrocation in his stable.

Yours respectfully, AB'M. C. SCHENCK.

Prepared only by S. A. PEARSON, M. D. and for sale wholesale and retail at No. 106 North 4th street, Philadelphia; also by J. R. Swallow, General agent 123 Fulton-st. New York.

For sale in Plainfield by E. Kirkpatrick, and M. F. Cushing, also by Druggists and country store keepers generally, throughout the United States, Canadas ane West Indies. [77.

Dubuque, Joseph Hoxie, New York, and many others who are living witnesses of its superior efficacy. N. B.—One peculiar property of the bitters is, that it does not contain any spirituous liquors, and is on an entirely new plan of cure for Dyspepsia. The EMPIRE COMPANY, to whom orders should be addressed, are at No. 53 Courtland-st. N. Y.

Pain Killer!

A medical preparation by the name of the PAIN KILLER, has been put into the market by the Empire Company in new York, which bids fair to cast all other preparations into the shade. It cannot, perhaps, be better described than by stating that it is in a liquid form, and is adapted to internal and external use, holding instantaneous control over all Nervous Affections, Rheumatism, Croup, Inflammations, Tooth and Ear ache, Burns, Brtuises, Sprains, Sores, &c. Empire Company, No. 53 Courtland st.

Deaf Persons

Can be made to hear in almost Every case! by proper treatment, but they should remember that the organization of the Ear is the most delicate structure of the body, (except the eye,) and hence is oftener injured than benefitted by syringes. The ACOUSTIC OIL sold by the Empire Company, 53 Courtland-st. is the surest and most successful article ever known for cures.

Chemical Cleansing Fluid.

Manufactured and sold by the Empire Company, is to every person who washes or has washing done, of very great and essentiul service. It obviates more than half the ordinary labor and also the wear to clothes. It sets the color fast to fading calicoes, and answers as well for cambrics muslins, and woolen goods.

Ornamental and Useful.

The Laundry Starch Polish is used to give that peculiar polish to collars, bosoms and linens, that nothing else can give; besides, it greatly, facilitates the ironing. The genuie has the stamp of the Empire Company, No. 53 Courtland-st.

Be sure about Vermifuges!

Some kill the CHILDREN! as well as the WORMS, and the only safe article that kills, the WORMS, and not the CHILDREN, is the one made and sold by the Empire Company, at 53 courtland-st.

The Empire Company.

Is the only one of the kind incorporated by the Legislature of this state as a Stock Company, and under such legislative enactments as to make the stock always at par, and the Company clear of liabilities. Individuals holding any of the Stock of the Company, will be entitled to their pro ratio amount of the profits of the business, declared upon the affidavits of the trustees, at the end of each year. The Company receive their own stock at par in the payment for goods at the New York office, 53 Courtland st.

The Empire Company.

Are Manufacturers of, and Agents for some of the finest and most popular kinds of Shaving and Fancy Soaps, such as Vanilla, Napoleon, Toilet, &c., Barbers' Shaving Soap in bars.

The Genuine Hay's Liniament,

Balm of Columbia, Hews Nerve and Bone Liniment, Sphons, Sick Headache Remedy, the Chinete Celestial Skin Powder, &c., have been transferred to the Empire Company 53 Courtland st. to whom all orders and applications should be made.

The Empire Company.

Has the Agency of the Nervine Balsam, the Great Indian remedy for Fits, the only sure and certain cure for Epiliptic Fits, Cramps, Convultions, &c. It has been administered with astonishing success, and is as near a specific as anything can be. It forms a new era in the practice of Physicians, many of whom use this Balsam, as the only remedy. Persons wishing the Nervine Balsam, must apply to Empire Company, 53 Courtland st.

CHAIN PUMPS.

THE best machine for raising water, in use.—This Pump has many advantages over any other in use on account of its simplicity of construction, being made wholly of wood and galvanized iron, not liable to get out of order or to get deranged in any way. It can never freeze in winter, and can be put in wells of any depth.

It takes less power to work it than any other machine, to raise the same amount of water.

It is never obstructed by gravel or sand; it keeps the water perfectly sweet and fresh; the action of the chain mixes the gasses with the water always keeping it lively and fresh; on ceasing to work it, the water in the tube descends to the level of the water in the well; on commencing to work the pump, the first water that is drawn is from the bottom of the well.

☞ This pump received the premium at the late Essex county fair.

These Pumps may be had at the Pump Factory of S. B. Miller, 340 Broad-street, Newark, N. J.

GREAT AMERICAN REMEDY.

Vegetable Dyspepsia Bitters.

TO THE PUBLIC,

DR HUTCHINGS would call the attention of all afflicted with dyspepsia, and the various disorders arising from a diseased stomach, to his remedy therefor. His DYSPEPSIA BITTERS will be found, on trial, to contain every property requisite to restore the disordered stomach to a healthy action; to reproduce the lost appetite of the patient, and do away with the periodical nervous headache and general debility consequent on this afflicting disease. Thousands have tested its efficacy, and thousands more are now under treatment; and not one solitary case of failure has yet been reported to him. This is consolatory, and urges him on in his efforts to relieve poor suffering humanity. He could fill a volume with certificates of those who have been permanently cured; but he conceives the testimony of a few well-known citizens will answer every purpose. The reader will find, on looking over the following testimonials, they are not "got up" for the occasion; but bona fide letters from gentlemen who can be seen at any time at their places of business.

The following Certificate is from M. B. Brady, the Celebrated Daguerreotypist:

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness, I was advised to take Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me. I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia. M. B. BRADY,

No. 205 Broadway, N. Y.

From Luther B. Wyman, Esq, late President of the New York Musical Society, now of Brooklyn.

The undersigned was afflicted with the Dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half during a greater portion of which time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself, until he was recommended to try Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, he very soon derived benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well.

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of Hutchings' Bitters for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine.

L. B. WYMAN, 38 Burling Slip.

New York, Sept. 3. 1849.

Dear Sir—My wife having been a great sufferer from dyspepsia, low spirits, palpitation of the heart, and having been cured as I believe by your Bitters, I most cheerfully attest their efficacy: her case was a bad one. In the space of four months she lost her strength and thirty-five pounds of flesh; was compelled to abandon her household affairs; there seemed but little probability of a cure until she began to take your bitters; in one week she was greatly relieved, and in three weeks she was perfectly well, and has since gained thirty pounds. You are at liberty to use this if it will at all further your laudable purpose of circulating this valuable remedy.

With respect, NATHAN SAYRE, No 61 Fourth-st

DOCT. PEARSON'S

PULMONIC EXPECTORANT,

FOR the cure of Coughs, Colds, Consumption of the Lungs, Influenza, Bronchitis, Asthma, Pain in the Breast, spitting of Blood, Whooping Cough, Croup or Hives, Hoarseness, Difficulty of Breathing, and every other disease of the Lung and the Breast.

This invaluable medicine should be in the possession of every family. In a country where the continual and sudden changes of the atmosphere, from heat to cold, and from cold to heat, render the inhabitants extremely liable to diseases of the Lungs and Breast, it is of the most vital importance that every one should be in possession of a remedy that shall at once effectually and permanently cut short those diseases, and restore the patient to health. The first symptom of cold or influenza should be immediately attacked and reduced by some remedy that has power over the disease. The medicine which has the most complete control over these diseases, and will most speedily restore the health of the patient is

PEARSON'S PULMONIC EXPECTORANT.

The following Card of three respectable phisicians sets forth the virtues of Dr. Pearson's pulmonic Expectorant. 'Having made use of Dr. Pearson's pulmonic Expectorant, we feel it a duty to recommend it as a safe and effectual cure for the various diseases for which it is intended. We are acquainted with many persons who have been cured of Cough, Bronchitis, pain in the breast and side, spitting blood, palpitation of the heart, and incipient consumption, by its use, and many of them after all other means had failed.'

Dr. Pearson's Carminative Balsam

Is decidedly the most beneficial remedy for the cure of Dysentary, Cholera Morbus and Summer complaint, that is known to man. Parents will find it the best medicine that can be used for young children and infants. And every person who is travelling in the summer months should not be without a bottle of it in their possession; as it is an infalliable remedy against thr change produced in lhe system by drinking bad water.

We annex the following certificate of Mrs. A. M. Sanford, of New York, in reference to the Carminative Balsam. We might add a long list, but consider this sufficient.

This is to certify that I have used Dr. Pearson's Carminative Balsam, and confidently believe it to be the best medicine that can be used for the various diseases for which it is recommended, and recommend it to the ladies who are travelling in summer months, and to mothers for the fretting and crying of infants for which it is a certain cure.

MRS. A. M. SANFORD,
No. 160 East Broadway N. Y.

The proprietor of the above valuable medicines, as also of Dr. Pearson's Barber's Embrocation for Horses, being himself a Physician and graduate of one of the best medical schools in the U. S. and having had the advantage of years of experience in an extensive practice, is therefore from the practical knowledge which he has acquired, well qualified to prescribe those remedies, and restore the patient to sound health.

Prepared only by S. A. Pearon M. D., and for sale wholesale and retail, at No. 106 North 4th street Philadelphia. Also, by J. R. Swallow, General Agent, No. 123 Fulton-st. N. Y., by whom all orders for the above medicines will be promptly attended to.

For sale in Plainfield by E. Kirkpatrick, and M. F. Cushing, sold also by Druggists and country storekeepers generally throughout the United States Canadas and West Indies.

THE HERO.

ANONYMOUS.

My father was a farmer good,
With corn and beef a plenty,
I mowed and hoed and held the plow,
And longed for one-and twenty.
For I had quite a martial turn,
And scorned the lowing cattle;
I burned to wear a uniform,
Hear drums, and see a battle.

My birthday came, my father urged,
But stoutly I resisted:
My sister wept, my mother pray'd,
But off I went and listed.
They marched me on through wet and dry,
To tunes more loud than charming,
But lugging knapsack, box and gun,
Was harder work than farming.

We met the foe, the cannons roared,
The crimson tide was flowing—
The frightful death-groans filled my ears,
I wished that I was mowing.
I lost my leg, the foe came on,
They had me in their clutches;
I starved in prison till the peace,
Then hobbled home on crutches.

The Death Penalty.

We believe that the age is against execution as a punishment for crime. Penalties for the breach of laws are made for many reasons—for the safety of the community, to deter evil-doers, and for the reformation of criminals; and a penalty that is satisfied only with the blood of the victim, sounds too malicious and revengeful to be Christian. Blood for blood, an eye for an eye, and all retaliating doctrines, have long since been obliterated from the Holy Book.

If executions, therefore, are really necessary for the prevention of crime, it might well be argued that criminals should be executed for every species of crime. If the simple object and end of the law is to rid society of the of the criminal, that end is answered only when all criminals are executed It was the law, fifteen years ago, that executions should be public.—The practice was found to have an immoral tendency; it was considered not a moral, but a theatrical spectacle, in which the courage of the hanger-on of the gallows was applauded by the mob, or his fears hissed and cat-called; and plenty of roughs there were who would consider it glory enough for a life-time, to dangle magnificently at the end of a rope, for the gratificatio o a most vicious and depraved ta t of the multitude. Executions in private are an acknowledgment that public ones answered no good purpose, and we are yet to hear of the good arising from their being done in secret; and they should be shown to be of advantage, either to the public or the criminal, or else they ought to be abolished; and it can hardly be contended that hanging will tend to the reformation of the criminal, seeing that he is beyond the reach of work, device or knowledge.

There is another—and we consider it the most important—argument in favor o abolishing the penalty, and that is, that the murderer generally escapes. A man is starving—perhaps his wife and little ones are pleading for bread with tears flowing down their cheeks—he may be induced to steal a loaf, or the means to satisfy his hunger, and save his life. On very slight evidence he may be condemned, and he is sure to be punished by the outraged laws, although the recording angel may wipe out the record of judgment with tears.—But the heartless, cold-blooded murderer—the midnight assassin—the wretch who applies the torch to the dwelling when deep sleep is fixed upon his victims, regardless of human life, is almost sure to escape the penalty of the law; and unless it were possible to get twelve men on the jury who saw the murder with their own eyes, or unless the murder were committed in open court, it were a thing impossible to get a verdict of guilty of murder. In saying this, however, let us not be misunderstood. We say it, fully believing that juries are perfectly consistent, and that it is proper for them to lean to the side of safety, more especially when the penalty is death; and they no doubt feel that it is like taking a dagger into their own hands to bring a man in guilty of murder. But once remove the penalty, and there will be a prospect of the murderer receiving some punishment for his crime; and to the jury should be left, in all cases, to mete out the sentence of the law upon the prisoner.

We hang for murder, but there seems to be no such thing as murder; and the reason why is that the community are so opposed to the taking of human life, even justifiably, that it requires great nerve in the jury to find their fellow man guilty, from the fact that they believe by such finding they are in a measure a party the execution of the criminal. It appears to us quite certain that if Wood and the negro, both of whom were sentenced to death, had been tried by juries preceding their trials, they would have escaped—and the reason is, that some Juries, more than others, are opposed to capital punishment.—Men will think and reason differently on this subject. Ninety-nine guilty persons may escape by the operation of the law, while the hundredth rogue, born under the influence of an adverse star, pays the penalty of all the others.

We therefore contend that it is really for the safety of the community that the death penalty should be abolished; it is the only means to secure some kind of punishment to the wilful murderer, instead of, as now, permitting him to go forth into the world, "up to his ears in blood," as an innocent man.

The State Legislature is now in session, and we call their earnest attention to this subject; and if they will not pass a law directly for the accomplishment of it, we trust they will allow it to be submitted to the people, at a general election, "Whether or not capital punishment shall be abolished."—Sunday Dispatch.

Mutual Banking.

The theory has recently been propounded by Horace Greely and others that no country can pay six per cent. interest on its capital, for any great length of time. Taking the value of property, for instance, in Massachusetts, twenty years ago, and compound interest at the rate of six per cent. upon it up to the present time, the present value of the property of that State. In other words, it is alleged, and supported by what are declared to be facts, that the pursuits in which men are engaged, taking them in the whole, will not average a profit of six per cent. on the capital invested, over and above the necessary expenses.

The periodical 'hard times' that we have in this country, and the numerous bankruptcies at such peiods, are, imputed by this new school of philophers, to the fact that the profits of business have been eaten up by interest, and a general bankruptcy comes in to play to restore the ebuilibrium.

To practically reduce the present legal rate of interest, it is therefore suggested a system of Mutual principle should not operate as successfully in Banks, as in Insurance Companies, &c. We do not know that any efforts have yet been made to procure the incorporation of a Bank upon the system alluded to; but as one of the new ideas of the time, we have thought well to lay it before our readers.

CANINE CRITICISM.—A French newspaper says that a house in Boulevare St. Martin was thrown into a great hubbub by an event which adds a new chapter to the history of celebrated dogs. A painter of great repute and talent had just finished a portrait of a fellow lodger, a jeweller, and was sitting in his studio examining his work with fatherly satisfaction, when the jewellers dog came into the room in search of his master. Seduced by a hallucination very natural in an animal of intelligence, the dog thinking his master had been murdered and beheaded flew at the artist, uttering a howl of despair. A terrible struggle ensued which brought in all the boarders, and among them the original portrait. The voice of his master calmed the fury of the animal, who hastened to throw himself at the painter's feet, as if to supplicate forgiveness for his error and justice. The painter, though suffering from three severe bites, glowed with just pride, and nobly pardoned the canine critic, whose sanguinary ferocity was at the same time the warmest eulogy.

A cotemporary, anouncing the marriage of an editor, says he always was of the opinion that editors had just as good a right to starve some man's daughter as any one else.

'I do not wish to say anything against the individual in question,' said a very polite gentleman, 'but I would merely remark, in the language of the poet, that to him truth is strange, 'stranger than fiction.'

What can be done on an acre of Ground.

The Editor of the Maine Cultivator published, a few years ago, his management of one acre of ground, from which we gather the following results: One-third of an acre in corn usually produced 30 bushel of sound corn for grinding, besides some refuse. This quantity was sufficient for family use, and for fattening one large or two small hogs. From the same gound he obtained two or three hundred pumpkins, and his family supply of beans. From a bed of six rod squares he usually obtained 60 bushels of onions: these he sold at $1 per bushel, and the amout purchased his flour. Thus from one-third of an acre and an onion bed, he obtained his breadstuffs. The rest of the ground was appropriated to all sorts of vegetables, for summer and winter use; potatoes, beets, parsnips, cabbage, green corn, peas, beans, cucumbers, melons, squashes, &c., with fifty or sixty bushel of beets and carrots for the winter food of a cow. Then he had also a flower garden, raspberries currants, and goosberries, in great variety; and a few choice apple, pear, plum, cherry, peach and quince trees.

Some readers may call the above a 'Yankee trick.' So it is, and our object in publishing it is to have it repeated all over Yankee land, and every where else. If a family can be supported from one acre of ground in Maine, the same can be done in every State and county in the Union Ex.

ENEMIES.—Have you enemies? Go straight on, and mind them not. If they block up your path, walk around them, and do your duty regardless of their spite. A man who has no enemies is seldom good for anything—he is made of that kind of material which is so easily worked, that it resists nothing, while every one thinks for himself, and speaks what he thinks is always sure to have enemies. They are necessary to him as fresh air; they keep him alive and active. A celebrated character, who was surrounded by enemies used to remark.—They are sparks, which if you do not blow, will go out of themselves. Let this be your feeling, while endeavoring to live down the scandal of those who are bitter against you. If you stop to dispute, you do but as they desire, and open the way for more abuse. Let the poor fellows talk—there will be a re-action, if you perform your duty; and hundreds who were once alienated from you, will flock to you and acknowledged their error.

GAS FROM WATER.—Sir Humphrey Davy once declared that, at 'some future day, gas would be generated from water for general purposes, surpassing that of coal in brilliancy and purity.' This prediction is now fully realized. An apparatus has been patented in England, by Stephen White, for making gas from water and common rosin or tar. Tar gas is extremely pure, and in burning emits no smoke or smell. The apparatus is cheap and the gas cheaper than that from coal The apparatus consists of three retorts placed in a stove, two of which are filled with charcoal and thin pieces of iron, and the other with iron chains, hanging from a centre bar. The first two retorts are for the decomposition of water, which is regularly supplied by means of a symphon pipe, passing through and into the centre of the retort; the water, in pasing through the heated material, becomes converted into pure hydrogen ane oxide or carbon. It then passes into the third retort, to receive its dose of bicarburet of hydrogen, which is prepared from common tar or melted rosin, or similar substance, passing or dropping on the red-hot chain, from a syphon tube, which reglaltes its supply. This causes the tar or melted rosin, to throw off an abundance of bicarburet of hydrogen gas. The gases being mixed in this manner are immediately conveyed into the gasometer for use, without any purifying vessel whatever, none being required.

A Word to Boys.

The learned Blacksmith says: Boys, did you ever think that this great world, with all its wealth and woe, with all its mines and mountains, oceans, seas and rivers, with all its shipping, steamboats, railroads and magnetic telegraphs, with all its millions of darkly groping men, and all the science and progress of ages, will soon be given over to the boys of the present age—boys like you, assembled in your school rooms, or playing without them, on both sides of the Atlantic. Believe it, and look abroad on your inheritance, and get ready to enter upon its possesion.—The Kings, Presidents, Governors, Statesman; Philosophers, Ministers, Teachers, Men of the future, all are boys, whose feet like yours cannot reach the floor, when seated on the benches upon which they are learning to master the monosyllables of their respective languages.

ORIGINAL LETTER of DR FRANKLIN.—The Boston Post is publishing some original letters of Dr. Franklin. The following is advice to a young lady, with whom a very chatty correspondence appears to have been undergone:

PHILADELPHIA, Oct 16, 1755.

DEAR KATY:—Your favor of the 28th June, came to hand, but the 23d September, just three months after it was wiitten. I had two weeks before written you a long chat and sent it to the care of your brother Ward. I hear you are now in Boston, gay and lovely as usual. Let me give you some fatherly advice: Kill no more pigeons than you can eat. Be a good girl, and don't forget your chatechize; go to meeting, or church, till you get a husband then stay at home and nurse the children and live like a christian. Spend your spare hours in sober whilst, prayers, or learning to cypher. You must practice addition to your husband's estate by industry and frugality. Subtraction of all unnecessary expenses. Multiplication—he will soon make you mistress of it. As to division, I say with brother Paul, 'Let there be no divivision among ye:' but as your good good sister Hubbard (my love to her) is well acquainted with the rule of two, I hope you will become as expert in the rule of three that when I have again the pleasure of seeing you I may find you like my grapevine, surrounded with clusters, plump, juicy, blushing pretty little rogues, just like their mamma.—Adieu; the bell rings, and I must go among the grave ones and talk politics. B. F.

COURTSHIP AND MARRIAGE.—Some unhappy Benedick, who evidently flatters himself that his experience qualifies him to 'speak from the book' in the matter, thus philosophizes on the difference between courtship and marriage. We dislike to publish any thing which may prevent the tying of hymeneal knots at this season; yet, as the curent of opinion is almost wholly in favor of the practice there will be little harm in casting this pebble against the stream. Read youngsters and remember Æsop's frogs, that asked themselves whether they would wish to get out again, before they leaped into the well—that is whether they had not better 'let well alone.'

'What made you get married, if you did not like it?'

'Why, I was deluded into it—fairly deluded—I had nothing to do evenings, so I went courting. Courting is fun enough—I haven't a word against it. It's about as good a way of killing an evening as I know of. Wash your face, put on a clean dickey, and go out and talk as sweet as sugar and molasses candy, for an hour or two, to say nothing about a few kisses behind the door, as your sweet heart goes to the step with you.

'When I was a single man, the world wagged well enough. It was just like an omnibus; I was a passenger, paid my levy, and hadn't anything more to do with it, sit down and didn't care a button for anybody. S'posin the omnibus got upset well I walks off and leaves the man to pick up the pieces. But then I must take a wife, and be hanged to me. It's all well for a while; but afterwards it's plaguey like owning an upset omnibus.

By the aid of the telegraph wires, the newspapers at Dubuque, Iowa, are enabled to publish the proceedings of Congress the day after they occur, and the news brought by foreign vessels to New York or Boston, within twenty hours after their arrival. How incredible would such a statement have appeared a few years ago!

JUST COMING OUT.—'Have you said,' an inquiring mined and slightly worldly gentlemen' recently, to an 'evengelical bookseller' in Broadway—'have you Christ's Sermon on the Mount?'

'Chris'ts Sermon on the Mount!' exclaimed the bookseller, with not a little surprise.

'Yes,' said the other; 'it was mention-yesteray in a very charming discourse at our church as an admirable thing; but, perhaps, it isn't out yet!'

The anxious inquirer was not corrected but was permitted to go his way—'for he had great possessions.'

ONE MORE LEFT.—The razor strop-man, holding forth at the Agricultural State Fair, was thus addressed by a young man, who thought himself remarkably smart—

'You're a fool!'

'And there's one more left of the same sort,' said the strop man.

TERRIFFIC EXPLOSION.—A telegraphic dispatch is said to have been lately received in Boston, which read as follows:

'The boiler of a horse ferry boat on the Delaware river has exploded, killing fifteen female women!'

This left no room for doubt of the sex of the killed.

☞ The Ladies and the public generally are respectfully invited to attend.

E. M. Dunn, Sec'y.

The Lecture of Courtland Parker Esq.—We believe we but express the opinion of the entire audience who heard the Lecture delivered by Mr. Parker, on Tuesday evening, when we say, that it was in every respect a masterly production, and richly merits a wider and more substantial fame than the fleeting and evanescent memories of the audience will or can give it. The subject, we would also express the hope will excite a sufficient interest in the minds of those who heard it to desire more of a similar character, and that more frequently—the appreciation in which such lectures are held by the inhabitants of a town or city, in our opinion, are a significant and correct criterion by which to judge of their intellectual and also of their moral atainments.

Report of the Commissioners.

THE END IS NOT YET.

If ever there was an imposition practised upon the people of New Jersey, such imposition, in our judgment, has been practised in the investigation of the affairs of the Camden and Amboy and Delaware and Raritan Canal Companies. In 1848 the Legislature of New Jersey appointed a Committee to examine into the affairs of the Companies. All know the result of that investigation. It bears all over the state the dignified cognomen of the "white washing Committee," being as was clearly evident upon the face of their report, a one sided and interested exposition and exculpation of the affairs of the Company, alike disgraceful to the committee and to the State. The People were dissatisfied with that investigation, and so convinced were all of its partiality and unfairness that another was appointed by the last Legislature This Committee was composed of persons who were supposed by public rumor to be rather unfavorable than otherwise to the companies—honest, upright, talanted and respectable men as were to be found in the State of New Jersey; confidence was restored in the minds of the people that an impartial investigation would be had. This investigation has been had and reported to the Legislature, and what is the result? Why, according to the abstract of it read before the legislature, although finding the companies defaulters to the amount of $12,000 and the non return of 100,000 tons of merchandise they yet declare that the companies have conducted their business fairly and are entirely exonerated from all suspicion of fraud! How was the result arrived at? By a partial examination of the books of the company and such parts too as was suggested by an agent of the companies! According to the correspondence published by Mr. Carey, had between himself and the commissioners, they entirely refused, (as is admitted by them, at the dictation of the managers, and at the suggestion of their agent) to allow Mr. Carey—who was the only person that could be supposed to know anything about the facts of the case—to have access and privilege to examine under their supervision the books of the Companies, upon which examination he repeatedly asserted, connected with other evidence, he relied to substantiate the charges which he had made, and which were alone the conditions upon which he would attempt to prove that there had been collusion with the managers and their agents to defraud the State. Yet this reasonable request, which it will be perceived would alone enable Mr. Carey to substatiantiate his charges, and which he repeatedly declared was the only conditions upon which he would make the attempt, was denied him! What will the people say to such partial investigation? Do the commissioners, the managers, or the Legislature expect the people are such fools as to rest satisfied with such investigation? Can it be supposed for a moment that the people of New Jersey, after having given up their party predilections and united to accomplish this matter which is the foundation of monopoly legislation in this State—which they are determined to rid themselves of, that they will rest satisfied with a report exculpating the Companies when that same report shows—under the best construction they were enabled to put upon it—that there were errors to the amount of $12,000, and no returns of 100,000 tons of merchandise! If we are not mistaken the end is not yet.

☞ Reader, do you consider yourself entitled to the equal and inalienable rights for which your sire may have fought, or are you content to remain the 'hewer of wood and drawer of water' of the majority of our present legislators and their descendants forever? If you belong to the former and scorn to be the slave of the latter you should let no opportunity escape you to cast your vote for freedom.—If you would be free indeed, ever hold yourself ready to sacrifice your own selfish and partizan interest—which are opposed to your true interest—on the altar of your country's good. Never degrade yourself by asking, much less by taking a privilege which you would not cheerfully accord to another. How contemptible in the eyes of all liberal minded men must the legislation of New Jersey appear—with a property qualification as the basis of the rights of intelligent freemen! With her absurd and tyranical laws based upon the superstitious customs of by-gone ages, and of the exploded divine rights of kings and priests! With special and exclusives privileges granted to incorporations—which under a republican government are the first-born of tyranny and oppression, and are begotten by a monied aristocracy—which are acknowledged to have been bonght for a consideration—and such a consideration—oysters and wine! The people of New Jersey are free, are they? Oyster-suppered and white-washed out of their rights! Spirit of Washington, of Layfayette, of the Signers of the Declaration of Independence protect us, or rather inspire us with the firm resolution to boldly carry out in practice the Declarations that you lived and died but to maintain.

☞ Seventy-three years have elapsed since our forefathers declared these United States to be free and independent; that all men were inalienably entitled to equal rights; they appealed to the Supreme Judge of the World for the rectitude of their intentions, and invoked the blessings of Heaven on the glorious compact. With this basis to start upon, acknowledged by the world as our just right, what have we done to carry into practice and extend the blessings handed down and guarantied to us by the blood of our forefathers? Why, New Jersey, after the lapse of seventy-three years, in the year 1850 has not yet enfranchised one half her sons! Why is this? Is it because they are not sufficiently intelligent to properly apreciate and exercise the privileges of freemen? No. What then can be the reason that they are not entitled to all the privileges that the most favored are elegible to? Ask the following members of our legislature:

☞ Abraham, Brown, Cobb, Condit,
☞ Coriell, Day, Doty, Duell, Emley,
☞ French, Stockton, Thompson, Van-
☞ Dyke, Van Wagoner, Wade, Wood,
☞ Gaskill, Kanouse, Meeker, Pierson,
☞ Wyckoff—21.

What say you gentlemen why one half the people of the State are not entitled to enjoy the same privileges with the other half? Because they do not posses what in our Judgments is essentially requisite to entitle them, PROPERTY; because they are too poor!

☞ The following burlesque on New Jersey legislation we copy from the "Trentonian;" it is about as important as two-thirds of our legislation, and is too true to be made a joke of; it should arouse the people to a proper sense of their degradation, and cause them to unite in action to wipe out the foul disgrace which their legislators have brought and continue to bring upon the State.

Awake! the Country is in Danger!—We understand that the "Saw & Buck Company," of this city, are about applying to the Legislature for an enlargement of their charter. In the original act of incorporation is a clause prohibiting any member of this company from greasing his saw with the fat of animals, raised or slaughtered out of the State. The object of this prohibition was to encourage "domestic industry," against the pauper hog-fat of Pensylvania. We trust that the whig protectionists of the Legislature will keep a top eye open upon the insidious movements of these "Saw & Buck" gentlemen, or before they are aware of it the inferior "greasers" of Pensylvania will glut the market, and the fat of the domestic article will be in the fire of "free trade" in less than no time. We shall expect of the Hon. Mr. Hageman, when this matter comes up, an effort worthy of the "great embodiment" of small potato conservatism.

☞ We have received from the publishers, (Greeley & McElrath) The Whig Almanac for 1850—We know of no publication of its price containing a tithe of the amount of valuable information that is contained in this unpretending publication; no person should be without a copy; price one shilling, to be had of the publishers.

Keeping up Appearances.

There is no greater folly on earth than attempting to outshine our neighbors.—"We must keep up appearances," has been the cry which has caused thousands to be unhappy all their lives. They could not be contented with enjoying the blessings in store for them; but they must continually worry themselves because they had not everything which heart can wish.

It is the desire for display which has been the ruin of multitudes. Many young men who at their outset in life, would have despised a mean action, have been incensibly drawn into the vortex of thoughtless extravagance by desiring to make "a good appearance." This course of conduct necessarily led them to contract debts which they at first found it difficult, and, finally, impossible to pay. Thus they lost their self-respect and their good name, because they were not willing to live according to their means.

Nor is it the young men only who are drawn from the right path, by their ambition of "taking the shine off" their more humble and more honest companions. The history of every frail one who has become an outcast from the society of her virtuous companions, is explicit, and furnishes abundant evidence that it was a desire to outshine her rivals, that led her to listen to the temptations of those who sought her ruin.

The only safe course is for us to mind our own business, and leave our neighbors to manage their affairs in their own way. If they can afford finer clothes and more costly furniture than ourselves, it is madness for us to imitate their example. What folly for a man to hold his nose to the grind-stone from twelve to fifteen hours per day, merely to keep pace with the extravagance of those around him. How many men have been slaves all their lives because they were anxious to "keep up appearances."

A.

For the Gazette.

Too poor to take the Papers.

How many thousands there are who spend in the course of the year from $20,—none probably spend less who spend any—to $100, a year for intoxicating drink—for that which unless used for medical purposes—benefits neither the body or mind; who, when solicited exclaim, that they are to poor to take the papers! Contrast my friends, and especially my young friends, the enjoyments, the advantages of the one with the other; the one, the quiet and unobtrusive companion, imparting unperceived—but to the observant mind—knowledge; but for which man would be as the beast of the field knowing not from whence he came or whither he goeth. "Knowledge is power hence those who acquire it are enabled to live at the expense of those who ueglect its advantages—they, are content to be the hewers of wood, and drawers of water to those who prefer the healtful and solid advantages to be derived from reading, from reflection—the handmaid and twin-sister of reading—for the enjoyments of a base and degraded appetite! Who can for a moment hesitate between the advantages of tho one and the debasement of the other? Reflect, reader, it needs but reflection to convince you of the advantages, both in body and mind, in health and true enjoyment, in purse and respectability of those who lead a sober and industrious, a temperate and honorable life, to that of an intemperate, debased—self debased too!—degraded and despised wretch. Shall this appeal, which is quietly made to your judgment, to your conscience, be in vain?

M.

☞ We perceive by an exchange, that the Legislature of Georgia has passed an act 31 to 8, and appropriate $ 30,000 to carry it into effect, making it the duty of the Governor of the State to call a Hartford Convention to assemble in the State of Georgia, provided certain contingencies occur, viz:

Should the Congress of the United States pass any law prohibiting Slavery or involuntary servitude in any Territory of the United States, or any law abolishing Slavery in the District of Columbia! What has become of South Carolina?

☞ We are indebted to the Hon. John P. Hale, of the U. S. Senate, for a revised copy of Mr. Clay's speech in support of his compromise resolutions on the Slavery question.

☞ We are indebted to Dr. John W. Craig, and Charles D. Hineline, Esqr's. members of the State Legislature, for public documents.

Prodigious!—Apples of no extraordinary quality are selling in our city at eight dollars per barrel!—Tribune.

Unprofitable Servants.

The Legislature have nearly exhausted the 40 days, contemplated by the constitution, as the time which the interests of the state would require them to sit as a legislative body—And the question may be pertinently asked what have they done? Nearly the whole time of the session has been expended in granting and altering charters for public and private corporations. The great questions of reform so generally demanded by the people—The equalization of Taxes—the abolition of the property qualification—the exemption of Household property to the value of $200 from execution—the employment of children in factories under ten years of age.—What have the legislature done in any, or either of these questions? Is not the epualization of Taxes, kept in the back ground in order to afford a pretext for its ultimate defeat? Is not this the secret motive which actuates the Committee who have this matter in charge? On the subject of property qualification the Legislature has indeed acted by defeating the bill, and continuing the odious and anti-democratic distinction, in the republican—or profesedly republican state of New Jersey. The exemption bill sleeps, something very much like the sleep of death, in the Senate, among its Bank Directors, Ralroad Presidents, and conservative Codfish Arristocracy. In the same body the hours of labor were limited to 10 as a legal day's toil, but that section, which forbids the wasting of the life and energies of the tender child was stricken out by the humane and magnanimous Senators! Little is to be hoped in the reformations of abuses from men, who seem to be so essentially embued with the principles of social and political arristocracy. There must be a change—a radical change in the selection of representatives by the people. If the people want liberal and humane laws, they must elect men of liberal and humane views. Their selections must be from their own ranks—despite the threats and frowns of the favored few.—Trentonian.

We cannot allow the statements of the determinations of the Investigating Committee copied in another column from the Newark Daily Advertiser, to go to our readers without accompanying it with a letter from Mr. Carey to the Committe, showing that he was not permitted to personally examine the books and records of the combined Companies and is therefore in no wise responsible for the conclusions arrived at. We perceive that the papers in the interest of the Monopoly herald the Report as a triumph of the Directors of the Camden and Amboy Rail Road and Transportation Co. but we think not: the same rule by which the Committee find due the State some $12,000, would probably have been extended to many hundred thousands had Mr. Carey's villigance been brought directly to aid them in it: but this the Company refused, showing something rotton upon the face of it. What the Committee have failed in is in taking for granted certain statements of the Company concerning their business the records of which if not kept or destroyed but substantiate the allegations of Mr. Carey. However honest we may have reason to believe the gentlemen composing the Committee to have been, the public have never ascribed to it the ability to make the Investigation without Mr. Carey's direct aid, and no greater obstacle could have been thrown in the way of a thorough investigation than the refusal of the railroad managers to allow Mr. Carey, in company with the Committee, to see and examine their books. The public will be surprised to learn that the Committee ever allowed the investigaion to proceed in this manner, and when so informed less surprised at its partial results. Nothing will satisfy the public mind short of an Investigation of the books by Mr. Carey himself, and with that view we move that Mr. Carey's name be added to the Committee, and that the Investigation be continued until the assembling of the next Legislature. Twelve thousand dollars a year may charitably be viewed as a regular god-send to a State so poor as New Jersey, and when the time for making another Repot arrives, the sum, with Mr Carey's help may be quadrupled.—New Jersey Herald.

Girls, Read This.

A few days since, a young gentleman related to us the following:—He said that his mother was speaking in the evening at the social home cicle, of 'fortune's changes,' and remarked, 'that in her girlhood, at a social party, where there was music and dancing, a young blue-eyed, light-haired boy asked her to dance. She refused, and thought him rather presuming, as he was the son of a blacksmith, and she the daughter of Captain ——, a militia captain. There was a difference in the social position. That boy is the present Governor of Massachusetts!!—Boston Post.

The speedy admission of the new state of California, with her free constitution, is now reduced to a certainty. Mr. Webster and Col. Benton will address the senate in favor of immediate admission during the next week.

A meeting of the citizens of New-York, irrespective of party, is in contemplation, to respond to and sustain the position taken by Mr. Clay in his compromise resolutions.

Legislature.

Trenton, Feb. 13. 1850.

Senate.—Petitions were presented against a Quarantine at Sandy Hook, and on other subjects.

The bill to charter the Borough of Elizabeth was passed—10 to 3. To render quo warranto more speedy; to give $1000 to Commissioners of Investigation.

The president presented a communication from Henry C. Carey, relative to the Railroad Commissioner's report.

The bill to appropriate taxes on foreign insurance companies in Newark and Patterson to the firemen's charitable fund of those cities was recommitted to extend its provisions to the whole State.

House.—The speaker laid before the House a letter from Henry C. Cary, transmitting a copy of correspondence between him and the Commissioners to investigate the charges against the Joint committees. Reading dispensed with, and laid on the table.

Mr. Condit, from corporations, a bill to charter Cooper's Point Ferry Co; Odd Fellows' Hall Association of Camden; Free Hold Banking Co.; Mount Holly and Pemberton Railroad; Farmer's and Merchant's Bank of Bordentown; the Camden and Keyport Railroad.

Kanouse, from Education, bills to authorize the payment of $200 to the Teacher's Institute of Somerset; relative to Public Schools in Howell, Monmouth; joint resolution to appropriate $600 to procure copies of the Journal of the Provincial Council and General Assembly, from 1703 to 1775; Doty, from Library, a resolution to appoint an Agent for the purpose of making International Exchanges, &c; Hoxey, from special Com. to establish Workhouses in county prisons; Buzby, from Com. on printing, in reference to printing documents accompanying Commissioners of Investigation; also a bill to charter Town of Beverly.

Mr. Hoxy called up the resolution offered by him a few days in the commencement of the present session, on the subject of Slavery,—instructing our Senators to vote against the introduction or slavery in territory now free. Mr. H. addressed the House in a very forcible speech, reviewing the whole question and taking strong ground against the conduct of the whig press of this State, who he said was misrepresenting the spirit of New Jersey. Gen. Taylor had taken the same ground that Cass did in his Nicholson letter on the subject of slavery—our Senators were broken down by the press of the state—and therefore it was time for the Legislature to speak. Mr. H. administered a strong rebuke to senator Dayton, for his course on the Amistad question, voting to pay the pretended owners of those unfortunate persons.

The whig and democratic parties are trying to outdo each other in the business of doughfaceism.

The ayes and nays were called on the motion to print as follows: Ayes 29. Nays 22.

3 P. M.—Passed—Joint resolution to light the State House with gas; act respecting conveyance; to reimburse the county of Mercer for keeping Carter and Park: to create the county of Ocean—34 to 15; to enable N. J. Annual Conference to appoint Trustees of Institutions of Learning.

The bill to prevent Sunday travelling on railroads was taken up and passed 31 to 17.

Feb. 15.

Senate.—Passed—The bill to remunerate Mercer county for keeping Warren county prisoners, by a suspension of rules.

Mr. Canfield offered a resolution requesting committee on Miscellaneous Business, to report suitable inscription for Washington Monument. Adopted.

Mr. Whitehead reported a bill ceding to New York Jurisdiction over Sandy Hook, also a sup. to act for preservation of sheep.

The act relative to Doubln Spring Brook was passed. Adj.

House.—Mr Hoxey presented a petition from certain persons in favor of the Legislature giving some decided expression of sentiment against the extention of slavery in Territory now free

Passed—Senate Joint Resolution appropriating one thousand dollars to committee of Investigation.

Congress.—In the Senate, yesterday, Mr. Clay's Compromise Resolutions were under consideration.

In the House. Mr. Doty moved to instruct the Committee on Territories to report a bill admitting California with the boundaries established by her Constitution. The friends of the 'peculiar institution' made every possible effort to smother the resolution, but could not succeed. The utmost that they accomplished was adjournment, under the operation of the previous question. They cannot, however, much longer delay the admission of California. That is settled.

Fire at New-Orleans.

There was a large fire at New-Orleans on Saturday last, (Feb 16) consuming 30 large stores, valued at $1,000,000 supposed to be the work of an incendiary.

☞ The troops had been called out at Three Rivers, in Canada, to quell a riot.

☞ Two American volunteers who served in the Yucatan war, arrived at Boston on Monday, in the brig Cobden from Sisal. Their names are Clement Lewis of New York, and George Reley of Philadelphia.

☞ The Florida Indians have agreed to emigrate as soon as they can collect their people. The whole expense, which is paid by Government, will exceed $200,000.

In matters appertaining to legislation we have a very droll account to make up of the doings and proceedings of the legislature for the last ten days. The important questions of a general Banking Law, General Rail Road Law, Free School System, Homestead Exemption, Equal Taxation, &c., are only called up and their titles read to indulge a pardonable curiosity in some of the members composing the majority to hear how they would sound within the walls of the State Capitol, without the remotest idea of passing any of them into laws. Our worthy legislators wish to do something, but they don't know where to begin. If they pass a general bank law they will tread on the toes of the Bank-Monopolists; if they pass a general railroad law then they say the State will loose its revennes; if a free school system is proposed we have no means of supporting it; should equal taxation become a law it would drive all capital from the State!! in short, were we to adopt the axoims of the wise Solons of our legislature we should believe the general principles established for the better government of other States totally inapplicable to New Jersey.—New Jersey Herald.

☞ The original manuscript of Washington's Farewell Address, was sold at the Philadelphia Exchange, on Tuesday, Feb. 12th, at public sale, for $2300 The purchaser was the Rev. Dr. Boardman. It is said that Dr. Boardman purchased the manuscript for a gentleman, who resides in Virginia.

When we hear a man—a man! say he cannot afford to take a paper, we are inclined to tell him that he cannot afford to do without it. A man who is really too poor to take a paper, is like a person so emaciated by famine as to be to weak to eat bread.

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

A curious dialogue, 'tis said,
Took place among the ladies,
Of DRY GOODS AND GROCERIES,
Where the best place to trade is!

Mrs. A. S. and Mrs B.,
Declared they knew where was good T.
Mrs L. and O. wished to know,
If anywhere on Earth they'd go!
For, good T. was hard to get,
They neither had had good as yet.
B. S. and A., that is the Mrs.,
Knew also where to get their dresses,
And sugar, ribbons, and molasses,
Carpets, earthenware, looking-glasses,
Muslin, over-shoes, and gloves,
Blankets, salaratus, nutmegs, cloves,
Umberellas, tin pans, and toys,
Beautiful ones for girls or boys;
In fact, everything that's eat, drank or wore,
You'l find it at D. BULLMAN'S Store!

You'l find this just as 'tis said
If 'tis not, then you need not trade;
My thanks for the past to all are due,
While a happy New Year I wish to you,

DANIEL BULLMAN.

Plainfield, Jan 1, 1850. [63.

COFFINS AT REDUCED PRICES.

THE subscriber would call the attention of the public to his complete assortment of Coffins, where all the different sizes are finished and ready for use at a moments warning; they are made of Mahogony, Black Walnut and Cherry, and finished in every style, so that all can be suited, also a superior style of stained ones, which he offers remarkably low; he has hitherto defered giving his prices, but as he has understood that there is some misrepresentation in regard to his prices, he deems this sufficient excuse to the public for to say that for a large size Black Walnut Coffin including hearse in attendance he has $6, Mahogany $14, Cherry $6, and small ones accordingly, tight case made in coffin style $1,75. By leaving the order with him, the sexton of either of the churches will be seen if required, and all necessary arrangements made without any extra expense.

J. W. S. MARTIN, Principal.

HE has given up the idea of Cuba being annexed this fall, consequently he has made up his mind to stay a little longer at his old stand adjoining Webstor & Marsh's store, where he offers a new and splendid assortment of Cabinet Furniture, unequalled in this or any of the neighboring towns for stability or neatness of finish, patterns being all new, and we advise all who wish to be fitted out with such articles as he offers, to make their purchases of him instead of going out of the place, do not forget the mincrel and you will get a bargain as sure as the whale swallowed Jonah. EMBROCATION

IS decidedly the best preparation that can be used for the cure of sprains, bruises, cuts, galls, splint, curb, ringbone. spavin, stiffness of the joints, &c. It is an article which should be in the hands of every horseman, and no stable should be without a bottle of it. Price only 25 and 50 cents per bottle.

The following is the testimony of Mr Schench, proprietor of the "Somerset House," Somerville, N. J., a gentleman well known to horsemen in New Jersey.

DR. S. A. PEARSON: Dear Sir—I feel it a duty which I owe to you and the community at large, or rather that part of the community who possess, or in any way have charge of Horses, to say, that I have used your Embrocation,' for horses. It is decidedly the best preparation that I have ever used, or have any knowledge of for the various diseases which it is recommended.

I also know a great number of my friends who have used it—and they all say, that it is the best medicine for horses that they have ever used. I would confidently recommend every person who has a horse should keep a bottle of this valuable Embrocation in his stable.

Yours respectfully, AB'M. C. SCHENCK.

Prepared only by S. A. PEARSON, M. D. and for sale wholesale and retail at No. 106 North 4th street, Philadelphia; also by J. R. Swallow, General agent 123 Fulton-st. New York.

THE EMPIRE COMPANY.

Incorporated by the Legislature of the State of New York.

ARE the exclusive Agents for Green's Oxygenated Bitters, which is the best and strongest certified medicine for the cure of Dyspepsia, General Debility, Habitual Costiveness, &c., in the world. In every disease arising from imperfect digestion, or deranged stomach, this remedy has been certified to by Hon; L. Arnold, Ex-Governor of Rhode Island, Hon. Wm. Woodbridge, Ex-Governor of Michigan; Hon. J. T. Moorhead, Ex-Governor of Kentucky, Hon. J. S. Simmons, Senator from R. I; Hon. S. S. Phelps, Senator from Vt. Hon. Wm. Upham, Senator from Vt. Hon. S. Foot, Senator from Vt. Hon. H. D. Foster, member of Congress from Pa. Hon. W. S. Martin, Wisconsin, Gen. A. C. Dodge, Iowa, C. C. Trowbridge, Esq. Detroit, S. H. Holmes, Esq. Ct. G. W. Jones, Esq. Dubuque, Joseph Hoxie, New York, and many others who are living witnesses of its superior efficacy. N. B.—One peculiar property of the bitters is, that it does not contain any spirituous liquors, and is on an entirely new plan of cure for Dyspepsia. The EMPIRE COMPANY, to whom orders should be addressed, are at No. 53 Courtland-st. N. Y.

Pain Killer!

A medical preparation by the name of the PAIN KILLER, has been put into the market by the Empire Company in new York, which bids fair to cast all other preparations into the shade. It cannot, perhaps, be better described than by stating that it is in a liquid form, and is adapted to internal and external use, holding instantaneous control over all Nervous Affections, Rheumatism, Croup, Inflammations, Tooth and Ear ache, Burns, Bruises, Sprains, Sores, &c. Empire Company, No. 53 Courtland st.

Deaf Persons

Can be made to hear in almost Every case! by proper treatment, but they should remember that the organization of the Ear is the most delicate structure of the body, (except the eye,) and hence is oftener injured than benefitted by syringes. The ACOUSTIC OIL sold by the Empire Company, 53 Courtland-st. is the surest and most successful article ever known for cures.

Chemical Cleansing Fluid.

Manufactured and sold by the Empire Company, is to every person who washes or has washing done, of very great and essential service. It obviates more than half the ordinary labor and also the wear to clothes. It sets the color fast to fading calicoes, and answers as well for cambrics muslins, and woolen goods.

Ornamental and Useful.

The Laundry Starch Polish is used to give that peculiar polish to collars, bosoms and linens, that nothing else can give; besides, it greatly, facilitates the ironing. The gennie has the stamp of the Empire Company, No. 53 Courtland-st.

Be sure about Vermifuges!

Some kill the CHILDREN! as well as the WORMS, and the only safe article that kills, the WORMS, and not the CHILDREN, is the one made and sold by the Empire Company, at 53 courtland-st.

The Empire Company.

Is the only one of the kind incorporated by the Legislature of this state as a Stock Company, and under such legislative enactments as to make the stock always at par, and the Company clear of liabilities. Individuals holding any of the Stock of the Company, will be entitled to their pro ratio amount of the profits of the business, declared upon the affidavits of the trustees, at the end of each year. The Company receive their own stock at par in the payment for goods at the New York office, 53 Courtland st.

The Empire Company.

Are Manufacturers of, and Agents for some of the finest and most popular kinds of Shaving and Fancy Soaps, such as Vanilla, Napoleon, Toilet, &c., Barbers' Shaving Soap in bars.

The Genuine Hay's Liniament,

Balm of Columbia, Hews Nerve and Bone Liniment, Sphons, Sick Headache Remedy, the Chineto Celestial Skin Powder, &c., have been transferred to the Empire Company 53 Courtland st. to whom all orders and applications should be made.

The Empire Company.

Has the Agency of the Nervine Balsam, the Great Indian remedy for Fits, the only sure and certain cure for Epiliptic Fits, Cramps, Convultions, &c. It has been administered with astonishing success, and is as near a specific as anything can be. It forms a new era in the practice of Physicians, many of whom use this Balsam, as the only remedy. Persons wishing the Nervine Balsam, must apply to Empire Company, 53 Courtland st.

Dr. Bush's Health Pills

Are only to be had genuine from the Empire Company! This caution is necessary to avoid a spurious article. The genuine Rush Pills are harmless effectual, and the ne plus ultra of specifics. It was invented by the great Dr. Rush, and used as a universal remedy for disease.

Dr. Bartholemew's Expectorant Pink Syrup.

Is manufactured perfectly pure by the Empire Company, 53 Courtland st. under incorporation from the State, for Coughs, Colds, Pain of the Side, Lungs, &c. It is sure preventive of Consumption, but not a certain cure after the disease is once thoroughly seated. The genuine is only to be had from this Company.

The Thing is Done!!

Those who do not believe it, are respectfully desired NOT to read! But BALD-HEADED Persons may read and test, and have the head covered with a fine, luxuriant, glossy hair, by the use of the MAGNETIC HAIR RESTORER and INVIGORATOR. Manufactured and sold by the Empire Company, incorporated by the state of New York, No. 53 Courtland st.

CHAIN PUMPS.

THE best machine for raising water, in use.—This Pump has many advantages over any other in use on account of its simplicity of construction, being made wholly of wood and galvanized iron, not liable to get out of order or to get deranged in any way. It can never freeze in winter, and can be put in wells of any depth.

It takes less power to work it than any other machine, to raise the same amount of water.

It is never obstructed by gravel or sand; it keeps the water perfectly sweet and fresh; the action of the chain mixes the gasses with the water always keeping it lively and fresh; on ceasing to work it, the water in the tube descends to the level of the water in the well; on commencing to work the pump, the first water that is drawn is from the bottom of the well.

☞ This pump received the premium at the late Essex county fair.

These Pumps may be had at the Pump Factory of S. B. Miller, 340 Broad-street, Newark, N. J.

GREAT AMERICAN REMEDY.

Vegetable Dyspepsia Bitters.

TO THE PUBLIC;

DR HUTCHINGS would call the attention of all afflicted with dyspepsia, and the various disorders arising from a diseased stomach, to his remedy therefor. His DYSPEPSIA BITTERS will be found, on trial, to contain every property requisite to restore the disordered stomach to a healthy action; to reproduce the lost appetite of the patient, and do away with the periodical nervous headache and general debility consequent on this afflicting disease. Thousands have tested its efficacy, and thousands more are now under treatment; and not one solitary case of failure has yet been reported to him. This is consolatory, and urges him on in his efforts to relieve poor suffering humanity. He could fill a volume with certificates of those who have been permanently cured; but he conceives the testimony of a few well-known citizens will answer every purpose. The reader will find, on looking over the following testimonials, they are not "got up" for the occasion; but bona fide letters from gentlemen who can be seen at any time at their places of business.

The following Certificate is from M. B. Brady, the Celebrated Daguerreotypist:

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness, I was advised to take Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me. I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia. M. B. BRADY,

No. 205 Broadway, N. Y.

From Luther B. Wyman, Esq., late President of the New York Musical Society, now of Brooklyn.

The undersigned was afflicted with the Dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half during a greater portion of which time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself, until he was recommended to try Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, he very soon derived benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well.

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of Hutchings' Bitters for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine.

L. B. WYMAN, 38 Burling Slip.

New York, Sept. 3. 1849.

Dear Sir—My wife having been a great sufferer from dyspepsia, low spirits, palpitation of the heart, and having been cured as I believe by your Bitters, I most cheerfully attest their efficacy: her case was a bad one. In the space of four months she lost her strength and thirty-five pounds of flesh; was compelled to abandon her household affairs; there seemed but little probability of a cure until she began to take your bitters; in one week she was greatly relieved, and in three weeks she was perfectly well, and has since gained thirty pounds. You are at liberty to use this if it will at all further your laudable purpose of circulating this valuable remedy.

With respect, NATHAN SAYRE, No 61 Fourth-st

DOCT. PEARSON'S

PULMONIC EXPECTORANT,

FOR the cure of Coughs, Colds, Consumption of the Lungs, Influenza, Bronchitis, Asthma, Pain in the Breast, spitting of Blood, Whooping Cough, Croup, or Hives, Hoarseness, Difficulty of Breathing, and every other disease of the Lung and the Breast.

This invaluable medicine should be in the possession of every family. In a country where the continual and sudden changes of the atmosphere, from heat to cold, and from cold to heat, render the inhabitants extremely liable to diseases of the Lungs and Breast, it is of the most vital importance that every one should be in possession of a remedy that shall at once effectually and permanently cut short those diseases, and restore the patient to health. The first symptom of cold or influenza should be immediately attacked and reduced by some remedy that has power over the disease. The medicine which has the most complete control over these diseases, and will most speedily restore the health of the patient is

PEARSON'S PULMONIC EXPECTORANT.

The following Card of three respectable phisicians sets forth the virtues of Dr. Pearson's pulmonic Expectorant: 'Having made use of Dr. Pearson's pulmonic Expectorant, we feel it a duty to recommend it as a safe and effectual cure for the various diseases for which it is intended. We are acquainted with many persons who have been cured of Cough, Bronchitis, pain in the breast and side, spitting blood, palpitation of the heart, and incipient consumption, by its use, and many of them after all other means had failed.'

A. Fearson, M. D. U. S Navy; S. K. Leedem, M. D. Champlain Co., Ohio; W. R. Cadwallader, M. D. U. S. Navy.

Dr. Pearson's Carminative Balsam

Is decidedly the most beneficial remedy for the cure of Dysentary, Cholera Morbus and Summer complaint, that is known to man. Parents will find it the best medicine that can be used for young children and infants. And every person who is travelling in the summer months should not be without a bottle of it in their possession; as it is an infalliable remedy against thr change produced in lhe system by drinking bad water.

We annex the following certificate of Mrs. A. M. Sanford, of New York, in reference to the Carminative Balsam. We might add a long list, but consider this sufficient.

This is to certify that I have used Dr. Pearson's Carminative Balsam, and confidently believe it to be the best medicine that can be used for the various diseases for which it is recommended, and recommend it to the ladies who are travelling in summer months, and to mothers for the fretting and crying of infants for which it is a certain cure.

MRS. A. M. SANFORD,
No. 160 East Broadway N. Y.

The proprietor of the above valuable medicines, as also of Dr. Pearson's Barber's Embrocation for Horses, being himself a Physician and graduate of one of the best medical schools in the U. S. and having had the advantage of years of experience in an extensive practice, is therefore from the practical knowledge which he has acquired, well qualified to prescribe those remedies, and restore the patient to sound health.

Prepared only by S. A. Pearon M. D., and for sale wholesale and retail, at No. 106 North 4th street Philadelphia. Also, by J. R. Swallow, General Agent, No. 123 Fulton-st. N. Y., by whom all orders for the above medicines will be promptly attended to.

For sale in Plainfield by E. Kirkpatrick, and M. F. Cushing, sold also by Druggists and country storekeepers generally throughout the United States Canadas and West Indies.

Plainfield, Dec. 4. 1849. [82.

The following important remarks on Health, we copy from the "Plainfield Union." We fully agree with the writer, that "health is indeed the greatest of all earthly blessings;" and also, that owing to a 'perversion of scripture,' by which we are constantly taught to violate the immutable and eternal laws of nature, which are the laws of God; does the child die before its parent--does sickness and suffering entirely depend. We trust that the writer will as he intimates, "recur to the subject again." We place his remarks as an introduction to the sermon on death which follows, and with which they in sentiment coincide.

HEALTH.—Health is indeed the greatest of all earthly blessings, without which all else of temporal good is valueless, and in comparison with which wealth, fame, power, influence, or sensual pleasure, or all things which occupy the time, attention and efforts of mankind, are of but little account. It is astonishing therefore that so little attention is paid to it, and so little care taken of it.

The prevailing opinion appears to be that the care of health belongs to Providence rather than to ourselves, for sickness and death is always attributed to Him—and when children die, by a perversion of Scripture, it is generally said—"The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord." As was well remarked by Hon. Horace Mann in a recent address, we have as much right to accuse Providence of picking pockets or stealing horses, as taking away our children, or friends, or neighbors, by death. In both cases, God is charged falsely and foolishly—for sickness and death, except of old age, in nineteen cases out of twenty, are occasioned solely through our own fault. We have no reason to suppose that it is the intention of God or naturally necessary that any should die except of old age. God gives life, but does not take it away, until the object for which it was given is accomplished by a whole life. It is a libel on the Most High to suppose that He gives life to infants and takes it away beford the child knows any thing of happiness, or of its Creator—it is to charge Him with mutability, with a want of wisdom or power.

Why is it then that half of the human race die before they reach the age of five years,—why is it that not one in fifty die of old age—and not one in a thousand live to the age they ought? Hundreds in modern times, have lived to the age of from 150 to 170 years, and thousands to the age of from 120 to 150. Why then may not all live to the same great age, by living as becomes rational creatures, as they did?—That we do not, we are confident, is not the fault of nature, or of God, or caused by the fall of man in Adams's transgression. Man was created more perfectly than the brutes, and the curse of death was as expressly laid upon all animals, upon the earth itself, and all that it produced as upon man—but brutes, and trees, and vegetables never die unless they are killed, or from some other adequate cause, until they have accomplished the object of their creation, the use of man and the continuation of their species. It cannot be that sicknes and death except from old age, come from God, or are at all necessary in the nature of things. Invariably where life and health-preserving influences are sought for and attended to, such as pure air and plenty of it, water ditto, and exercise, there life is longer and health more prevalent,—and where intemperance, vice, uncleanness, insufficient or improper food, impure air or water abound, there sickness and death prevail in exact proportion to the prevalence of these evils. Can we rightly charge these evils upon Providence? No, indeed. The guilty ones must answer for it—and not only do the violators of the laws of health suffer by their own sickness and death—but in most cases the evil is extended to their children, friends and neighbors.

We shall recur to this subject again, at a convenient time, and go more into detail—giving our rather odd views on this important matter.

Funeral Discourse.

ROOTSTOWN, Dec. 14, 1849.

FRIEND JOHNSON! The following is an abstract of the remarks made by me at the funeral of SARAH H. CASE, this day in the presbyterian meeting-house in this town. I forward it to you for the Bugle, at the request of the friends of the deceased.

Before her death, she requested that I might be present at her funeral and be allowed to speak my sentiments freely over her earthly remains. She was assured it should be so if I could be found. I came, therefore, at her request. The body was brought into the house and laid in front of the pulpit. There she lay, so calm, so smiling; her babe lying on her bosom, encircled fondly in death by her right arm. It was beautiful to look upon that face, for a more open, calm, and dignified countenance it has seldom been my lot to look upon.

There was no oral, formal praying, nor singing; but after stating that I was there to speak at the earnest request of her whose only earthly remains lay before me; and that it was her wish that I might be allowed to express freely my views, she knowing what they were; and after reading a few verses from the Sermon on the Mount, I proceeded, in substance, as follows:

H. C. WRIGHT.

I have not one word to say, on this occasion, about the Lord's giving and taking away, and about blessing Him for sickness and death; for I do not believe the Lord had anything to do in the sickness and death of the mother and babe whose remains are before us. I have not one word to say to the bereaved husband, child, mother, sister, brother and friends about being reconciled to the Providence of God, who, as others will say, for wise and benevolent purposes had snatched away the loved wife, mother, daughter, sister, and friend. Such consolations is based on falsehood: I cannot give it. Yet I have much to say over these remains, solely with a view to the practical good of those who hear me. The two following propositions will be the basis of all I have to offer.

1. God works out his purposes, touching human beings, solely by the agency of fixed, constitutional laws, engraven by himself on their bodies and souls.

These laws if allowed to work out their designed results would never bring pain of body nor anguish of mind to any human being.

All the creation beneath man is under the control of fixed laws. The bodies of men are, also. But the soul—man's highest nature—is that under a government of caprice, of positive arbitrary law? No; it is as much under fixed law as the body. If the laws under which we are placed had been allowed to work out the designs of the author, unimpeded by human ignorance or wickedness, human beings had ever been born without suffering, carried through this state, and on through all the changes of an eternal progression, with a joy unspeakable. GOD is one law of our being: IMMORTALITY another; SOCIETY another. If the above two positions be true, sickness and death are no more attributable to God than murder, piracy, war and slavery. I do not believe the Lord inflicted death on that mother and child, and these human forms have no business to be lying here, so silent, so cold. God made them to bless the world Why are they here, and thus? The hand of man alone hath done the deed. Sarah Case, the friend of man, and, of course, of God, lies before us, in this lovely but stern repose of death, by some outrage upon the laws of health and life, as certainly as if she or some others had pierced her heart with a dagger.

There sits her widowed mother; desolate, weeping for her children because they are not; for this is her third daughter upon whom death had but recently in much the same manner. The popular theology and its priests tell her the Lord has taken from her these objects of her maternal love for some wise and mysterious and good end, and that she must bow and kiss the rod and bless His name. I can give her no such comfort. Nor have I any sympathy with the church and priesthood that, rather than give offence to those whose countenance and support they would receive, father all the crimes, the sufferings and death in the world upon God. I would say to her, the just and loving Father of man had no hand in thus removing your children from your presence, I do not wish to bless his name for this affliction, or any other, nor to be reconciled to the deed. Human agency alone, innocently put forth it may be, hath brought your daughter and her babe to this; and but for such agency, exerted in violation of the laws of life, she and her child had now been in health to bless you and others with their presence and love. It would be impious mockery to ask you, or the husband, or any of the afflicted friends, to feel reconciled to the hand that has inflicted death on these objects of your affection. I would rather say, set yourselves, with stern and dauntless hearts to rebuke and resist the power that has been so malignant and so fatal to the peace and happiness of your hearts and your homes. It is unnatural—a clear violation of Divine law—for children to precede in their exodus from this to another state. It never would be so if human beings had ever lived in harmony with Nature's laws and designs.—The bodies of Sarah Case and her babe ought not to lie there, locked in the arms of death; she ought to be now in full vigor, health and life to diffuse joy and confidence to all around her by her smiles and councels.

In saying these things, I utter what she expected and wished me to speak on this occasion. She had a firm conviction of the truth of the two leading positions I have taken, and of the above inferences I have deduced from them. This led her to look to her own soul to learn how she ought to feel and act towards her fellow beings. Where must that husband and wife, those parents and childred, those brothers and sisters, those fellow beings go to learn how God would have them feel and act towards one another? To the Bible? No; for even that in its two foundation principles, in which is summed up all the law and the gospel, directs them to another standard. "Love thy neighbor." "As thyself." Where shall men be directed to learn how to love themselves, and how they wish to be loved! To their own souls and never to the Bible, however holy and inspired it may profess and be supposed to be. Do to others"—how? Not as the Bible says, but as "you would they should do to you." Where is this to be learned? Not in a book, however pure, just and holy its instructions; but in the law and testimony written by the great author of our being on our social and spiritual nature. Thus even Jesus directs us to our own souls to ascertain how God would have us feel and act towards one another.

As men know how to act and feel towards men, they know how to feel and act towards God. Love to man is the only true practical love to God; respect for men as men, is the only true reverence for God. He that hates man hates God; he that dishonors man or woman, dishonors God. The only way to worship God is, to be just, loving, forgiving, thruthful, honest and good to man. Such were the sentiments of her who has left us so prematurely and so uncalled by her Creator; for she was not called of God to cease from her labors and her joy-giving presence here; she had not done the work which he sent her to do.

Being thus accustomed to associate God and his government with human beings rather than with a church, a priesthood, on ordinance, a house, the Sabbath, or the Bible, and being thus accustomed to love and worship God in loving and serving man, she was, as all such spirits must be, deeply and earnestly engaged in Anti-Slavery, Non-Resistance, and Temperance. Instead of spending her time and talents in seeking to rescue an ordinance, a Sabbath, or Bible from desecration, she sought to redeem men, women, and children, the representatives of God, from the polutions and outrages of war, slavery, and drunkenness Her anxiety, was to get men to embrace and practice the principles of Christianity, rather than inspire them with veneration for the Bible. Humanity had in her a loving and dauntless friend; and her zeal for God was shown, not in oral praying, shouting, and singing, nor in observing days, or reverencing a book, but in working to rescue our common nature from the auction block, the battlefield, and gallows of the American Church and Clergy.

She was a Comeouter, and renounced all fellowship with the war-making, slave-holding, and gallows-supporting organizations, called Christian Churches. She came out of them that she might be free to worship her God in seeking the abolition of those monster crimes of earth, slavery, war, and death-penalty. She was not free thus to live and serve her Creator while a member of a church organization. Her position there crushed her sympathy for the imbruted slave, and the mangled victims of war and the gallows, as it does all others. She was made to feel, as others are, that the chief end of Methodism is, to glorify Methodism and promote it forever; and that the same is true of other sects.—She could be only a Methodist there; She came out that she might be the friend or Humanity; she could be only a child of Methodism in the church; she came out that she might be the child of her Heavenly Father, and follow after Him, walking in love and good will to all mankind.

Though she thus came out solely that she might maintain a closer walk with God, and love and worship Him more devoutly by a practical consecration of herself to the redemption of her fellow-beings, yet she was stigmatized as an infidel by those who love their sect better than their fellow men, and who would offer up Truth, Justice, and Human Brotherhood on the altar of their Creed, or the Bible. She laid herself on the altar of Humanity to redeem it from slavery, war, drunkenness, and all wickedness. If this be infidelity, who would not embrace it? If she was an infidel, then has she, by her loving and self-forgiving spirit, and by her devotion to the cause of humanity, consecrated that word and made it holy. And who would not feel honored to be thus worthy to be called an infidel?

I have not a word to say as is customary on such occasions to urge you to prepare for death. I do not wish you to be prepared for death but for life. I would as soon urge you to prepare for any other outrages of Nature's laws as for death. Death came by sin; and man has no more right to die than he has to sin. It is their right and privilege to pass, without pain of body or sorrow of mind, without death, from this, to a higher state of being; but death is the enemy of God and man, and ought to have no place on earth. Man, when he assumes the right to inflict death on man, for any cause, assumes a power over his fellow-beings which their Creator never assumed over them. Therefore I cannot urge you to prepare to die, or to kill; to inflict death upon yourself or others.

Nor have I a word to say to urge you to prepare for Eternity, or a future judgment. Death, Judgment, and Eternity? These are the great trinity of horrors used by priests, on such occasions as this, to work upon the fears of men. Prepare for Death; prepare for Judgment; prepare for eternity; these make the the beginning, middle and end of all funeral discourses. I would say, prepare for the daily and hourly judgment that God pronounces on you every moment, by obeying the laws of your physical and social nature, and you need fear no judgment of God. He will say to thee daily; through the law of thy nature, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter into the joy of thy Lord." Eternity? It is here, not yonder. We are born it; we live in it every moment, and ever shall. Where is our departed one? In Eternity? No more than we are. The difference is, she has left the body; we have not. Is she with God? She is; but no more than we are. Does she see God? She does with her mental eye; but in the same way that we do, and in none other, only her conception of Him, I would fain believe, is purer, clearer, and more just. Prepare to meet thy God? We all met him when we assumed the nature of man, and we have lived, and moved, and had our being in Him ever since.

Such are the views which the spirit that but a few hours since animated that body, expected and wished me to speak on this occasion. If those lips, now forever closed, could speak one word, it would be Amen to what I have said. For the sake of her whom you loved, and whose gentleness and goodness you will long remember, weigh the sentiments which I have uttered with candor; and if you find them true, embrace them as she did with eager fondness, and practice them with energy, boldness and perseverance.—A. S Bugle

Alarm and Thief Detector.

Mr. Nicholas, of the U. S. Pay Department at New Orleans, has invented two very ingenious machines to answer for the purposes stated in the caption above. The alarm is made so as to produce a great noise when opened; similar to a locomotive whistle. This is followed by the descent through a tube of a quantity of sonorous balls (marble or brass, as may be chosen) which are at length thrown successively from a hopper to the floor; rattling with terrific force. In the midst of the confusion of sounds produced by the falling balls a bell begins to toll, and so loud as positively to startle even a person who is prepared to encounter the alarm.

The machinery which puts in operation the alarm, occupies but a small space and can be put inside money safes, armories, or other pieces of furniture in which valuables are preserved. The noise created by it extends to a great distance and would effectually scare a thief to a precipitate flight. The Thief detectors is a simple and more profitable piece of machinery, designed to be placed inside doors or windows of store or dwelling houses, as a protection against depredators. It consits of a heavy granting which is suspended within a double groove in the upper part of the door or window frame, and connected by a spring with the floor beneath. Immediately the foot of the robber presses on the floor inside the threshold, the spring is put in action, when down falls the grating, and the intruder is caught like a rat in a trap.

The Iron and Zinc of New Jersey.

In New Jersey there is an abundance of the red oxide of Zinc, combined with Franklinite. This latter is an iron ore resembling small black peas. It is peculiarly an American ore. For a long time this ore and the Zinc, lay silent and useless; but now good metal is made out of both. The Zinc is superior to the zinc of commerce, and the Iron is equal to the very best of iron known in commerce. The iron is of a strength equal to 77,000 lbs. per square inch, and the zinc equal to 10,000 lbs. We believe that the best Swedith iron is only of the strength of 72,064 lbs., and the best English is only 61,000.—Scientific American.

Lecture to the Young.

Rev. L. Crandall will continue the course of Lectures to the Youth of this place, on Sunday Evening next, March 3d. in the Second Presbyterian Church.

It is with deep regret we announce the death of Mr. William P. Williamson, who died in this village on Monday morning last. The exemplary moral character and practical christian life of Mr. Williamson will long be remembered by our citizens as an example worthy their imitation; and while they would condole with his family in their bereavment, and regret with sincere sorrow his early death, they will long cherish his memory in grateful remembrance for his many virtues.

Prison Reform.

We have read with deep interest, the first annual report of the of the New Jersey Prison Reform Association. It contains the reports of the committees of the several counties, embodying much important information to every citizen of New Jersey, and to the friends of humanity everywhere. All men are or should be interested in whatever has a tendency to ameliorate the condition, by reforming and preventing the vices of mankind. We think the New Jersey Prison Reform Association in this respect calculated to do much good, by bringing home to the bosoms and hearts of men, the wretched condition of the unfortunate class of our fellow beings who fill the noisome dungeons of our prisons, and that whatever may have been the cause of their incarceration, they are the proper objects of humanity, and the special objects which Christ came to seek and to save, and which it is our duty as humble followers of Him to go and do likewise unto them.

It would appear from these reports that our county prisions, in most cases, are loathsome dungeons, totally unfit for the purposes for which they were designed, if that purpose is the prevention of crime and the reformation of the criminal; the only legitimate use for which we can suppose that the present enlightened age should be willing to acknowledge that they were built, or at least for which they will permit them to be used. The day we trust is past when a human being can be consigned to a dungeon, to gratify the malice or caprice of a self annointed king or priest, or be used as the instrument of revenge of any; but rather that they shall be used as places of philanthropic care for the degraded and downtrodden of the human race.

The report from our own County shows a most disgraceful neglect of this class of our fellow beings; there is no clasification of the prisoners whatever nor does the prison admit of any; all, from the youth of twelve years, who perhaps was confined because he was poor—for vagrancy or petty theft—to the most abandoned in crime, old offenders, graduates of the State Prison, males and females, all crowded togerher! without labor of any kind either for amusement or to assist in defraying the expenses of the prison; without any provision for their moral instruction; thus instead of becoming the means of reformation of the criminals and the prevention of crime, it is a primary school, a select college with professors for teaching and engendering it, where thousands graduate for the States Prison and the Gallows! This is not only so in Essex but in a majority of the Counties of the State! In the adjoining County of Somerset, they are equally deplorable; the committee report that although the County had recently enlarged and adorned the interior and exterior of the court house, beneath which is the county prison, yet nothing has been done to improve the prison, which consists of three cells, about twelve by sixteen feet, the floor below the surface of the ground, damp and unhealthy, without light sufficient to read by, consequently without ventilation; and with soil pipes without any outlet; a noisome and miserable hole, in which they found a small boy, about nine years of age, who was sent there by his own father, on a charge of arson; and although the grand jury refused to indict him, and the judge dismissed him from confiinement, has been continued there, because abandoned of his own parents and neglected by the overseers of the poor in the township in which he belongs!

Is it possible that our humanity and practical christianity is at so low an ebb? What a commentary is this report on the moral influences of sectarian religion, which thus makes clean the outside while within is rottenness and full of dead mens bones! Look over our County at the splendid and costly churches, and beauliful and stately private residences in our cities and towns, reared by the hand of toil, proud monuments of the science and skill of our citizens; how great the contrast of these palaces, filled with every luxury that wealth can bestow, with every wish of their inmates gratified, with every inducement to virtue; when compared with the provisions made for the poor, the unfortunate, and the guilty inmates of our county prisons. Do none but christians worship in the one and live in the other, while the down trodden, the unfortunate, the vile and guilty are suffered to go unthought of and uncared for?—Look at the city of Newark, our County seat, filled with sectarian churches, and even having a society with a special charter permitting them to be charitable!—Look at Elizabethtown, filled with sectarian churches and wealthy citizens; look at our own beautiful village filled with churches all professing to believe in the necessity, as fulfilling the law and the prophets, of "Doing unto others as they would that they should do unto them;" yet if the above report be true, might as well have been preached to the seats in the churches as to the minds of the hearers, if it is thus made but an empty sound, a tinkling cymbal. All the above named places with several others are filled with churches which profess to be followers of the meek and lowly Jesus, while their County Prison denies, according to the test given by the Savior,—"by their fruits ye shall know them"—beyond the possibility of mistake that they are not!

Doubtless we shall be arraigned for thus freely speaking our mind on this important subject; but as we were determined and only intended to awaken the drowsy energies of our fellow mortals to a just sense of the degraded moral and physical condition of our fellow man, and to a full appreciation of a necessity for immediate action in the premises, we shall have gained our end if these remarks shall have accomplished it; and in doing which they will have felt the beauty of that principle which they profess, and say unto them and unto us in the spirit it embodies and in the language of Him who said to the woman taken in adultery, "neither will I condemn thee go and sin no more."

☞ It will be perceived by a reference to the proceedings of the legislature that a bill to establish a House of Refuge (appropriating $21,000 for the purpose,) has passed both Houses. Certainly this bill is loudly called for, according to the reports of the Prison Reform Association noticed above, and will undoubtedly become a law; no instution is calculated to be of more advantage to the State than this, if propperly managed.

☞ We have yet to see the person in this enlightened age and country, who has so far lost confidence in the patriotic people of these United States as to fear for a moment a disolution of the Union, or that they will so far abandon the principles of liberty for which our forefathers contended, as to submit to have that principle trodden under foot by the extension of slavery. We fear neither the one nor the other; Liberty and Union are indisolubly connected in the hearts of our countrymen.

The Weather.—That very respectable personage the "oldest inhabitant," says that it is beyond the ken of his memory when we have had such a spell of weather; thinks perhaps that during the month of January he must have been in a somnolent state, as he has no reccollection whatever of any thing that transpired during that month if indeed we have had such a month in the year 1850. Every thing appears to corroberate this, we have now the mild air of May, farmers are speculating about sowing oats and other matters incidental to a season at least two months in advance.

To a man full of questions make no answer.

☞ Our neighbor of the "Union" brings up some very disinterested witnesses who volunteer to prove the abominable monopoly which disgraces our State, by trampling the equal rights of its citizens under foot a most innocent and injured public benefactor. We were at first and should still be inclined to believe that our friend offered these names in evidence as a burlesgue on the whole matter, but for some grave conclusions which he arrives at. He says; "We do not believe the charges, however, and never did, and do not intend to until we have the evidence!" He also thinks Mr. Carey prejudiced; but what are the facts? The companies are declared by the very report of the commissioners which would exonerate them, that there is a fraud of about $12,000, and that they have made no returns to the State of 100,000 tons of merchandise; and this too with only a partial examination of the books under the direction of an agent of the companies, and refusing Mr. Carey, by his direction or sugestion, access to the books of the companies, when it was promised by them, and expected by the people. The whole thing on the face of it is a farce and will require something more than the evidence of a subsidized press, lawyers, or legislators to satisfy the people of its honesty or prevent them from electing men who have the independence and honesty to fulfill the will of their constituents in investigating and abrogating so unjust a law.

While on this subject we would express our surprise at the course of the "Trentonion;" this ably conducted journal has ever taken the side of the people, of right against might, ever advocating a liberal enlightened and correct public policy; we cannot account for its course recently on this subject; there appears to be a screw loose somewhere; will our friends enlighten us?

Union Meeting at Castle Garden.

New-York, Feb. 26. 1850.

A great demonstration, in support of the Union, took place, according to announcement, last evening at Castle Garden. As the call of the meeting indicated, its chief object was the endorsement of the Slavery compromise resolutions, lately offered in the United States Senate by Henry Clay. His Honor, Mayor Woodhull presided as Chairman, assisted by a long list of Vice-Chairmen, and six Secretaries.

The immense buildings was filled to overflowing, Nicholas Dean, Esq. after making some prefatory remarks, read a series of resolutions, recognizing those proposed by Mr. Clay as the basis of a harmonious adjustment of the distracting question of slavery, and calling on all citizens to give them their study and support. The resolutions were adopted unanimously. J. Depeyster Ogden, Jas. R. Whiting and J. L. White, Esq's, also Gen. Scott, addressed the meeting on the subject of the Union, and the inestimable importance of its preservation by conciliation and compromise. The greatest enthusiasm and good order prevailed throughout the proceedings.

The President, it is rumored, has expressed himself freely to a delegation of Southern members of Congress, who sought to know what he would do in case of a disunion movement. He assured them that on any attempt to resist the United States revenue laws, he would blockade every Southern port, and would call out Northern, Western and Southern volunteers—making no use of the standing army—and at their head march against disunion and disunionists, though it should be through a path of blood and to his grave. He assured them also that he had no fear of disunion; that the people of the south would never permit it, and in reply to the question what would be done if Southern members withdrew from Congres, he said their places would be filled by more patriotic and better men. We want no war, external or internal, but what ever else may come, we will not have disunion.

The Twenty-second of February.—From the accounts received by the papers, the celebration of the birth-day of the Father of his Country has been unusually spirited throughout the Union.—May the reverence for his memory, long continue to cement the perpetuity of the Union in the hearts of his countrymen.

Congress.—This body is still engaged in debating the question of Slavery, every ruse is resorted to by Southern members to stave off action on this question, with the vain expectation of extending the area of Slavey. The first member who makes such concession beyond what the Constitution clearly grants, with the most liberal construction in favor of freedom, will deserve, what he will undoubtedly get, the execration of his countrymen. Can it be possible that under a government which is eulogized for its principles of liberty, as a model to all the earth, shall be the last to disclaim the right of man to a property in his fellow man.

☞ The Legislature will adjourn sine dio on Friday next, March 1st,—a resolution to that effect having passed both Houses on Friday last.

Legislature.

Trenton, Feb. 19.

Senate.—Mr. Gill presented sundry petitions for an act authorizing Justices of the Peace to demand the payment of costs in civil actions previous to issuing of process, and also rendering the Justices of the peace responsible to the constabes for their costs in civil actions. Referred to the Judiciary.

Prosecutors of the Pleas—E. V. R. Wright, of Hudson: P. B. Kennedy, of Warren; J. M. Mann, Somerset; G. S. Cammon, Burlington; R. P. Thompson, Salem; Ezra Darby, Elizabeth Borough.

Commissioners of Pilotage—J. F. Ellis, W. T. Rogers, Lawrence Kearney, Lewis Bosworth, Wm. G. Hackstaff, Ezra Nye, Garret Hiers.

Commissioners of Deeds in Philadelphia—James R. Ludlow.

The Senate refused to agree to the amendments made by the House to the General Banking law, and concurred in the House resolution to adjourn sine die on the 1st of March.

Ordered to a 3d Reading—To appoint Trustees to take charge of the affairs of the New Hope Delaware Bridge Co; to authorize the Executor of Elizabeth Hazlehurst to sell real estate.

7 1-2 P. M. The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill to cede jurisdiction over Sandy Hook to New York, for the purpose of erecting Quarantine Hospitals, when

Mr. Olden moved to postpone it to the next session and to give the applicants leave to withdraw their papers.—Agreed to.

House.—Bills Passed—The Joint Resolution appointing Stacy G. Potts, Samuel B. Halsey, L. Q. B. Elmer, Whitfield S. Johnston, Alex. Wurtz, and the State Superintendent, Commissioners to prepare a School Law; Jt. Reso. appropriating $10,000 to Public Schools, in addition to the $30,000 now appropriated. the Jt. Reso. appropriating $500 to procure proceedings of Council and Assembly from 1708 to 1775; to repeal act authorizing inhabitants of Chester to vote by ballot: sup. to act concerning Wills.

Mr. Hineline gave notice of a resolution to alter the Constitution of the State.

☞ The bill to charter the Mount Holly ☜ ☞ Summer House Association was lost, 26 to ☜ ☞ 27—What a pity! ☜

The resolution appointing Commissioners to draft a law for the regulation of Public Schools was taken up and passed 46 to 7.

The bill to establish a House of Refuge (appropriating $21,000 for the purpose,) was taken up and passed 31 to 24.

Mr Hoxey moved that the House recede from their amendments to the General Banking bill. Agreed to

Feb. 25—House—Bills Passed—The bill to authorize inhabitants of school district No. 1 in Camden to raise money; to authorize inhabitants of Hopewell in Mercer County to vote by ballot at their town meetings; to prevent hogs running at large in Carpenter's Landing, Swedesborough, Woodbury, Columbus, Morestown, Gloucester City, Woodstown New Egypt, and Morristown; to charter Mount Holly and Pemberton Railroad Co.; to charter Mount Holly Summerhouse Association.

The bill for the appointment of a state Agriculturalist was next taken up.

The bill was opposed by several members from the Agricultural counties; a motion to postpone the bill failed. Various amendments wer made, several to reduce the compensation, which is $3000. A motion to reduce it to $1000 failed, and a motion to reduce it to $2000 was passed.

Feb. 26.

House—Passed—The bill to tax personal property after a long discussion, in which Messrs Hageman and Kanouse, opposed, and Van Wagoner and Phillips advocated it.

The following inscription was reported by Mr. Rogers, from the Miscellaneous Business Committee to be engraved on the stone contributed by this State to the National Monument, at Washington.

To the immortal Memory of George Washington,
the Father of his Country,
the founder of a hemisphere of freemen:
the State of New-Jersey
the battle-ground of that war of Independence which he so gloriously conducted to such a glorious issue—
the state of Trenton, and of Princeton and of Monmouth gratefully consecrated this votive stone

The Governor has signed the bills to establish the House of Refuge; to alter the time of holding the Newark Charter Election; and to furnish a block of stone for the National Monument, which are consequently laws now.

St. Louis. Feb. 18

Fatal Explosion.—On Saturday afternoon the boiler in the extensive wagon and plow factory of H. A. Wiltbeck at Chicago exploded killing Mr. Lunar, the engineer, and seriously wounding four others, among whom was Mr. Wiltbeck. A portion of the walls of the building were demolished by the force of the explosion—which was caused by the pumping of cold water into the boiler when hot.

☞ George Copway, the eloquent Indian Chief, is to be one of the speakers at the Land Reform meeting to be held at Tammany Hall on Friday evening, March 1.

Couldn't allow it.—A gentlemen tells us a good story of one of his domestics. Having employed a new femele servant, he sat down in the parlor, the evening after to a 'civil game of whist,' with his wife and a couple of neighbors. The next morning 'the help' observed that the card-playing must be put a stop to or she would be obliged to leave—she did'nt approve of the practice, and never allowed it in famlies where she lived.

A mouse ranging about a brewery happened to fall into a vat of beer, and appealed to a cat to help him. The cat replied—'It is a foolish request, for as soon as I get you out I shall eat you.' The mouse replied, that fate would be better than to be drowned in beer. The cat lifted him out, but the fumes of the beer caused puss to sneeze and the mouse took refuge in his hole. The cat called on the mouse to come out. 'You, sir, did you not promise that I should eat you?'

'Ah replied the mouse, 'but you know I was in liquor at that time.'

☞ As the Editors of the N. Y. Tribune have given the Rochester knockings their special attention, we would commend to their notice the following remarks on the subject.

Conversing with Departed Spirits.

They have a new humbug in Roches- N. Y., something almost equal to the Salem witchcraft, except that the witches are said to be departed spirits instead of live people, which precludes the possibility of the people amusing themselves by tarring, feathering, whipping or hanging.

These spirits are very foolish or ignorant ones as their language proves. They converse with people by knocking on the doors, walls or floors of the houses where they made their appearance. The people ask the spirit a question, then begin to repeat the alphabet to get the answer.—When repeating the alphabet, as soon as they name the first letter of the alphabet the spirits knocks. Then the person conversing with it commences the alphabet again, and when he gets to the second letter in the answer the spirits knocks again, and so on, till the answer is spelt out. Ridiculous as this affair is, hundreds believe that spirits do actually talk with people in this way. Committees of learned men have been appointed to investigate the matter, and have testified to the above as facts.

The story reminds me of an incident that happened some years since in this State. A family that occupied a new and unfinished house were alarmed by a solemn knocking under the floor; the nursery stories about ghosts, witches, and hobgoblins were raked up from among the treatured rubbish of memory and the alarm continued to increase. One thought the knocking a warning to some one about to die, another thought it must be the spirit of some one that had been murdered on that spot, and the more they talked the more the terror grew. At length one who had too much sense to believe in spirits that could knock, commenced a search under the house and found a flat stone nearly poised on a round one, and as cats ran over it it tipped, and as it returned to its place, the corner of it struck the sill. All the witches, ghost and goblins fled when their machinery was discovered, and I have not heard as they have ever ventured to visit that neighborhood since;—if they have the people have not dared to tell of it.

If there has really been a kocking heard at Rochester, that knocking must have been caused by something material, and will be as simple, when explained, as this knocking caused by the cat.—Portland Pleasureboat.

The Atmostphere.

The atmostphere rises above us with its cathedral dome arching towards the heavens of which it is the most familiar synome and symbol. It floats around us like that grand object which the Apostle John saw in his vision:—'a sea of glass like unto crystal.' So massive is it, that when it begins to stir, it tosses about great ships like play-things, and sweeps cities and forests like snow flakes, to destruction before it. And yet it is so mobile, that we have lived years in it before we can be persuaded it exists at all, and the great bulk of mankind never realize the truth that they are bathed in an ocean of air Its weight is so enormous that iron shivers before it like glass. yet soap-balls sails through it with impunity, and the tinest insect waves it with its wings. We touch it not, but it touches us; its warm south winds brings back color to the pale face of the invalid; its cold west winds refresh the fevered brow, and make the blood mantle in our cheeks; even its north blasts brace into new vigor the hardoned children of our rugged clime. The eye is indebted to it for all the magnificence of sunrise, the full brightness of mid-day, the chastened radience of the gloaming, and the clouds that cradle near the setting sun. But for it the rainbow would want it triumphal arch and the winds would not send their fleecy messengers on errands round the heavens. The cold ether would not shed its snow feathers on the earth, nor would drops of dew gather on the flowers. The kindly rain would never fall—hail, storm, nor frog diversify the face of the sky. Our naked globe would turn its tanned unshadowed forehead to the sun, and one dreary monotonous blaze of light and heat dazzle and burn up all things.—Scientific American.

He that thinks himself injured, let him say, 'Either I have deserved this, or I have not. If I have, it is a judgment; if I have not, it is an injustice; and the doer has more reason to be ashamed of it than the sufferer.'

'O, you're a 'prentice?' said a little boy the other day, trauntingly to his companion. The addressed turned proudly around an, while the fire of injured pride and the look of piety were strangely blended in his countenance, cooly answered—'So was Franklin!'

Somebody thinks that if nature had designed a man to be a drunkard, he would have been constructed like a churn, so that the more he drank the firmer he would stand.

☞ Despotic goverments are like bad schoolmasters, who care more to flog than to teach their pupils.

The largest subscription to the fund for the construction of a church in California, was given by a gambling-house. The sum was $5000.

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

A curious dialogue, 'tis said,
Took place among the ladies,
Of DRY GOODS AND GROCERIES,
Where the best place to trade is!

Mrs. A. S. and Mrs. B.,
Declared they knew where was good T.
Mrs. L. and O. wished to know,
If anywhere on Earth they'd go!
For, good T. was hard to get,
They neither had had good as yet.
B. S. and A., that is the Mrs.,
Knew also where to get their dresses,
And sugar, ribbons, and molasses,
Carpets, earthenware, looking-glasses,
Muslin, over-shoes, and gloves,
Blankets, salaratus, nutmegs, cloves,
Umberellas, tin pans, and toys,
Beautiful ones for girls or boys;
In fact, everything that's eat, drank or wore,
You'll find it at D. BULLMAN'S Store!

You'll find this just as 'tis said
If 'tis not, then you need not trade;
My thanks for the past to all are due,
While a happy New Year I wish to you.

UNDERTAKING.

COFFINS AT REDUCED PRICES.

THE subscriber would call the attention of the public to his complete assortment of Coffins, where all the different sizes are finished and ready for use at a moments warning; they are made of Mahogony, Black Walnut and Cherry, and finished in every style, so that all can be suited, also a superior style of stained ones, which he offers remarkably low; he has hitherto defered giving his prices, but as he has understood that there is some misrepresentation in regard to his prices, he deems this sufficient excuse to the public for to say that for a large size Black Walnut Coffin including hearse in attendance he has $6, Mahogany $14, Cherry $6, and small ones accordingly, tight case made in coffin style $1,75. By leaving the order with him, the sexton of either of the churches will be seen if required, and all necessary arrangements made without any extra expense.

J. W. S. MARTIN, Principal.

HE has given up the idea of Cuba being annexed this fall, consequently he has made up his mind to stay a little longer at his old stand adjoining Webstor & Marsh's store, where he offers a new and splendid assortment of Cabinet Furniture, unequalled in this or any of the neighboring towns for stability or neatness of finish, patterns being all new, and we advise all who wish to be fitted out with such articles as he offers, to make their purchases of him instead of going out of the place, do not forget the minerel and you will get a bargain as sure as the whale swallowed Jonah. IMPORTANT TO HORSEMEN.

DR. PEARSON'S BARBER'S

EMBROCATION

IS decidedly the best preparation that can be used for the cure of sprains, bruises, cuts, galls, splint, curb, ringbone, spavin, stiffness of the joints, &c. It is an article which should be in the hands of every horseman, and no stable should be without a bottle of it. Price only 25 and 50 cents per bottle.

The following is the testimony of Mr Schench, proprietor of the "Somerset House," Somerville, N. J., a gentleman well known to horsemen in New Jersey.

DR, S. A. PEARSON: Dear Sir—I feel it a duty which I owe to you and the community at large, or rather that part of the community who possess, or in any way have charge of Horses, to say, that I have used your Embrocation,' for horses. It is decidedly the best preparation that I have ever used, or have any knowledge of for the various diseases which it is recommended.

I also know a great number of my friends who have used it—and they all say, that it is the best medicine for horses that they have ever used. I would confidently recommend every person who has a horse should keep a bottle of this valuable Embrocation in his stable.

Yours respectfully, AB'M. C. SCHENCK.

Prepared only by S. A. Pearson, M. D. and for sale wholesale and retail at No. 106 North 4th street, Philadelphia; also by J. R. Swallow, General agent 123 Fulton-st. New York.

For sale in Plainfield by E. Kirkpatrick, and M. F. Cushing, also by Druggists and country store keepers generally, throughout the United States, Canadas ane West Indies. [77.

Dubuque, Joseph Hoxie, New York, and many others who are living witnesses of its superior efficacy. N. B.—One peculiar property of the bitters is, that it does not contain any spirituous liquors, and is on an entirely new plan of cure for Dyspepsia. The EMPIRE COMPANY, to whom orders should be addressed, are at No. 53 Courtland-st. N. Y.

Pain Killer!

A medical preparation by the name of the Pain Killer, has been put into the market by the Empire Company in new York, which bids fair to cast all other preparations into the shade. It cannot, perhaps, be better described than by stating that it is in a liquid form, and is adapted to internal and external use, holding instantaneous control over all Nervous Affections, Rheumatism, Croup, Inflammations, Tooth and Ear ache, Burns, Bruises, Sprains, Sores, &c. Empire Company, No. 53 Courtland st.

Deaf Persons

Can be made to hear in almost Every case! by proper treatment, but they should remember that the organization of the Ear is the most delicate structure of the body, (except the eye,) and hence is oftener injured than benefitted by syringes. The Acoustic Oil sold by the Empire Company, 53 Courtland-st. is the surest and most successful article ever known for cures.

Chemical Cleansing Fluid.

Manufactured and sold by the Empire Company, is to every person who washes or has washing done, of very great and essential service. It obviates more than half the ordinary labor and also the wear to clothes. It sets the color fast to fading calicoes, and answers as well for cambrics muslins, and woolen goods.

Ornamental and Useful.

The Laundry Starch Polish is used to give that peculiar polish to collars, bosoms and linens, that nothing else can give; besides, it greatly, facilitates the ironing. The genuie has the stamp of the Empire Company, No. 53 Courtland-st.

Be sure about Vermifuges!

Some kill the Children! as well as the worms, and the only safe article that kills, the worms, and not the children, is the one made and sold by the Empire Company, at 53 courtland-st.

The Empire Company.

Is the only one of the kind incorporated by the Legislature of this state as a Stock Company, and under such legislative enactments as to make the stock always at par, and the Company clear of liabilities. Individuals holding any of the Stock of the Company, will be entitled to their pro ratio amount of the profits of the business, declared upon the affidavits of the trustees, at the end of each year. CHAIN PUMPS.

THE best machine for raising water, in use.—This Pump has many advantages over any other in use on account of its simplicity of construction, being made wholly of wood and galvanized iron, not liable to get out of order or to get deranged in any way. It can never freeze in winter, and can be put in wells of any depth.

It takes less power to work it than any other machine, to raise the same amount of water.

It is never obstructed by gravel or sand; it keeps the water perfectly sweet and fresh; the action of the chain mixes the gasses with the water always keeping it lively and fresh; on ceasing to work it, the water in the tube descends to the level of the water in the well; on commencing to work the pump, the first water that is drawn is from the bottom of the well.

☞ This pump received the premium at the late Essex county fair.

These Pumps may be had at the Pump Factory of S. B. Miller, 340 Broad-street, Newark, N. J.

GREAT AMERICAN REMEDY.

Vegetable Dyspepsia Bitters.

TO THE PUBLIC,

DR HUTCHINGS would call the attention of all afflicted with dyspepsia, and the various disorders arising from a diseased stomach, to his remedy therefor. His Dyspepsia Bitters will be found, on trial, to contain every property requisite to restore the disordered stomach to a healthy action; to reproduce the lost appetite of the patient, and do away with the periodical nervous headache and general debility consequent on this afflicting disease. Thousands have tested its efficacy, and thousands more are now under treatment; and not one solitary case of failure has yet been reported to him. This is consolatory, and urges him on in his efforts to relieve poor suffering humanity. He could fill a volume with certificates of those who have been permanently cured; but he conceives the testimony of a few well-known citizens will answer every purpose. The reader will find, on looking over the following testimonials, they are not "got up" for the occasion; but bona fide letters from gentlemen who can be seen at any time at their places of business.

The following Certificate is from M. B. Brady, the Celebrated Daguerreotypist:

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness, I was advised to take Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me. I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia. M. B. BRADY,

No. 205 Broadway, N. Y.

From Luther B. Wyman, Esq., late President of the New York Musical Society, now of Brooklyn.

The undersigned was afflicted with the Dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half during a greater portion of which time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself, until he was recommended to try Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, he very soon derived benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well.

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of Hutchings' Bitters for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine.

L. B. WYMAN, 38 Burling Slip.

New York, Sept. 3. 1849.

Dear Sir—My wife having been a great sufferer from dyspepsia, low spirits, palpitation of the heart, and having been cured as I believe by your Bitters, I most cheerfully attest their efficacy: her case was a bad one. In the space of four months she lost her strength and thirty-five pounds of flesh; was compelled to abandon her household affairs; there seemed but little probability of a cure until she began to take your bitters; in one week she was greatly relieved, and in three weeks she was perfectly well, and has since gained thirty pounds. You are at liberty to use this if it will at all further your laudable purpose of circulating this valuable remedy.

With respect, Nathan Sayre. No 61 Fourth-st

DOCT. PEARSON'S

PULMONIC EXPECTORANT,

FOR the cure of Coughs, Colds, Consumption of the Lungs, Influenza, Bronchitis, Asthma, Pain in the Breast, spitting of Blood, Whooping Cough, Croup or Hives, Hoarseness, Difficulty of Breathing, and every other disease of the Lung and the Breast.

This invaluable medicine should be in the possession of every family. In a country where the continual and sudden changes of the atmosphere, from heat to cold, and from cold to heat, render the inhabitants extremely liable to diseases of the Lungs and Breast, it is of the most vital importance that every one should be in possession of a remedy that shall at once effectually and permanently cut short those diseases, and restore the patient to health. The first symptom of cold or influenza should be immediately attacked and reduced by some remedy that has power over the disease. The medicine which has the most complete control over these diseases, and will most speedily restore the health of the patient is

PEARSON'S PULMONIC EXPECTORANT.

The following Card of three respectable phisicians sets forth the virtues of Dr. Pearson's pulmonic Expectorant. 'Having made use of Dr. Pearson's pulmonic Expectorant, we feel it a duty to recommend it as a safe and effectual cure for the various diseases for which it is intended. We are acquainted with many persons who have been cured of Cough, Bronchitis, pain in the breast and side, spitting blood, palpitation of the heart, and incipient consumption, by its use, and many of them after all other means had failed.'

A. Pearson, M. D. U. S Navy; S. K. Leedem, M. D. Champlain Co., Ohio; W. R. Cadwallader, M. D. U. S. Navy.

Dr. Pearson's Carminative Balsam

Is decidedly the most beneficial remedy for the cure of Dysentary, Cholera Morbus and Summer complaint, that is known to man. Parents will find it the best medicine that can be used for young children and infants. And every person who is travelling in the summer months should not be without a bottle of it in their possession; as it is an infalliable remedy against the change produced in the system by drinking bad water.

We annex the following certificate of Mrs. A. M. Sanford, of New York, in reference to the Carminative Balsam. We might add a long list, but consider this sufficient.

This is to certify that I have used Dr. Pearson's Carminative Balsam, and confidently believe it to be the best medicine that can be used for the various diseases for which it is recommended, and recommend it to the ladies who are travelling in summer months, and to mothers for the fretting and crying of infants for which it is a certain cure.

Mrs. A. M. Sanford,
No. 160 East Broadway N. Y.

The proprietor of the above valuable medicines, as also of Dr. Pearson's Barber's Embrocation for Horses, being himself a Physician and graduate of one of the best medical schools in the U. S. and having had the advantage of years of experience in an extensive practice, is therefore from the practical knowledge which he has acquired, well qualified to prescribe those remedies, and restore the patient to sound health.

Prepared only by S. A. Pearon M. D., and for sale wholesale and retail, at No. 106 North 4th street Philadelphia Also, by J. R. Swallow, General Agent, No. 123 Fulton-st. N. Y., by whom all orders for the above medicines will be promptly attended to.

For sale in Plainfield by E. Kirkpatrick, and M. F. Cushing, sold also by Druggists and country storekeepers generally throughout the United States Canadas and West Indies.

Song of the Seasons.

BY JESSY HUTCHINSON.

Air "Boat-man's Glee."

Oh, sweet the spring, with its merry ring,
When the robins chirup, and the blue-birds sing,
Their voices clear make glad the ear,
In the welcome songs to the op'ning year; [adorning,
Then Ho! farmers ho! to the fields now with beauty
With hearts all right, and spirits light
We'll sing with the birds in the morning,
Heigh ho! farmers go over the fields to plough & mow.

Oh where's the mind so unrefined
But in the spring glows warm and kind,
As every worm is fresh new-born,
And the hills resound with the mellow horn:
Then Ho! farmers ho! &c.,

Now full of joy without alloy,
How merrily sings the farmers boy,
His voice he trills like the whippoor-will's
While the sound goes echoing o'er the hills,
Then ho! farmer's ho! &c.,

And summer too with its varied hue,
With flowerets sweet our footsteps strew,
All nature's gay at the break of day
While the dew perfumes the new mown hay,
Then ho! farmers ho! &c.
With sickle and scythe does the famrer thrive
Then hie to your reaping and mowing,
Heigh ho! farmers go!
Over the fields to reap and mow.

Oh blith the hours mid fields and flowers
When the Earth's embalmed with summers showers
'Tis then the rain o'er the waving grain
Makes Nature sing and smile again,
Then ho! farmers ho! &c

The sad heart grieves as nature weaves,
Her winding sheet in the Autumn leaves;
Yet most sublime, is the tempest chime,
Which reminds us all of the harvest time. [sowing,
The ho! farmers ho! and gather the fruits of your
For the waving corn, your fields adorn
In token of labour bestowing.
Heigh ho! &c.

When winter drear comes gathering near
The songster birds no more we hear
Yet dear those spells when music swells,
O'er the wintry storms in the merry bells.
Then ho! farmers ho! to the wild woods lets be going,
O'er sea and storm we'll onward go,
In spite of boisterous blowing,
Heigh ho! the woodman go,
Breaking the roads through the drifted snow.

Oh, happy he the farmer free,
In his mountain home of liberty,
For Heaven gave to the true and brave
The hills were ne'er could breathe a Slave.
Then ho! farmers ho! for yours is the best vocation,
Gods first command was till the land
In the morning of Creation, [dom ho!
Heigh ho! farmers go! chanting the songs of free-

Spring—Summer—Fall—and Winter's thrall
Bears many a lesson to us all;
For like the dove in the land of love,
They sing of purer springs above.
Then ho! mortals ho! and hasten to your duty
For tho' we die like the butterfly
We'll rise e'er long in new beauty,
Heigh ho! mortals go up to the world were joys o'erflow.

SHORT STORY.—When Mary and I were married we were young and foolish, for we had nothing to be married with, but Mary was delicate, and I thought I could take care of her best. I knew I had a strong arm and a brave heart to depend upon. We rented a chamber and went to house keeping. We got together a little furniture—a table, bedstead, dishes—but our money failed us before we bought the chairs. I told mary she must turn up the tub: for I could not run in debt. No, no. It was not long before our rich neighbor Mrs. M——— found us out, and kindly enough she supplied us: half a dozen chairs added to our stock. They were old ones, to be sure, but answered just as well for us. I shall never forget the new face those chairs put upon our snug quarters—they never looked just right before. The tables are turned with Mrs. M———and me now—she has turned a poor widow, but shall never want while I have anything, never!' cried the old man, with a beaming face, 'I don't forget those old chairs.'

Ah, now the secret was out. It was the interest of the old chairs which maintained the poor widow. She was living on the interest and compound interest of a little frendly act done years before and it sufficed for herself and daughter.

How beautiful it is to see how God blesses the operation of his great moral law. Love thy neighbor,' and we should oftener see it could we look into the hidden paths of life, and find that it is not self interest, not riches, not fame, that binds heart to heart. The simple power of a friendly act can do far more than they. It is these, the friendly acts, the neighborly kindness, the Christian sympathy of one towards another, which rob wealth of its power to curse, extract the bitter from sorrow, and open wells of gladness in desolate homes. We do not always see the golden links shining in the chain of human events; but they are there, and happy is he who feels their gentle but irresistable influence.—Merchant's Ledger.

A GOOD MOTIVE.—A Western paper says that the locomotive is the only good motive that has ever been given for riding a man on a rail.'

Slavery and Missionary Works.

The following advertisment is from the Religious Herald, a Baptist paper published in Richmond, Va.

"WHO WANTS $35,000 IN PROPERTY?"

I am desirous to spend the remainder of my life as a missionary, if the Lord permit, and therefore offer for sale my Farm, THE VINYARD, adjacent to Williamsburg, and containing about 600 acres—well watered, well wooded, and abounding in marl—together with all the crops and stock, and unensils thereon.

Also, my house and lot in town, fitted up as a boarding establishment, with all the furniture belonging to the same.

Also, about forty Servants, mostly young and likely, and rapidly increasing in number and value.

To a kind master, I would put the whole property at the reduced price of thirty-five thousand dollars, and arrange the payments entirely to suit the purchaser, provided the interest be annually paid.

SCERVANT JONES."

O, Holy simplicity! O, soul-degrading slavey! how have ye modified the labors of the cross! When Jesus traveled up and down the world, he was a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief. He had not where to lay his head, but poor and despised he travelled among enemies, proclaiming deliverance to captives and freedom to the bound. His was a cross bearing life; his daily path was the path of self-denial, and his life was sacrificed to his love for humanity, in his efforts to plant the principles of universal Liberty and eternal Right. He sent forth his missionaries in the same cross-bearing way, the path of self denial, to preach the same blessed doctrine—deliverance to the bound—freedom to the captive and the slave. They also sacrificed their lives to their love for all.

But now the professed disciple and missionary of Jesus can sell instead of liberating the captive, and go forth with the price of blood in his pocket, can associate with the great, clothe himself in purple and fine linen, and fare sumptuously every day. He knows no cross, exercises no self-denial, preaches not liberty to captives, but tells them it is the providence and will of God that they are in chains! If this be the gospel of Jesus, and this his missionary, how wonderfully have they changed.

Can any one believe that here in this country of boasted liberty and religious truth, a man can be found so utterly ignorant of the gospel, as to state as a reason for selling human beings, that he is desirous to spend his life as a missionary? can any one believe that a religious paper in this land is so blind, so lost to all sense of justice and right, to say nothing of humanity, as to publish such an advertisement? Yet it is even so! What on earth can the religion of such a paper consits of, and what on earth can such a missionary preach? The very first command of the gospel is 'Do unto others as ye would have others do unto you, undo the heavy burdens and let the oppressed go free,' and he that takes not this, the first step, cannot take the second nor the third. Yet such are the missionaries manufactured by the patent religious machinery of this nation. War, robery, plunder, rapine, and slavery follow in their train.

We often hear of the great good that missionaries have accomplished among the American savages but the most they have done has been to furnish them with rum, gunpowder, implements of war, and introduce slavery among them. The Methodist missionaries have introduced slavery among several tribes. Again I ask, in what does their religion consist, while all their practices are in direct opposition to the precepts and examples of Christ?

To a kind master this patent missionary would put the whole property at the reduced price of $35,000. By this it appears he has two prices; if he is compelled to stretch his conscience enough to sell them to a cruel master, he must have something more, so we learn that he is ready not only to barter the souls and bodies of others for money in order to become a missionary of Jesus, but even offers to sell his own soul. —Portland Pleasureboat.

☞ Of all the amusements that can possibly be imagined for a working man, after daily toils or in the intervals, there is nothing like reading a newspaper or book. It calls for no bodily exertion of which already he has had enough, perhaps too much. It relieves his home of dulness and sameness. Nay, it accompanies him to his next day's work and gives him something to think of besides the mere mechaical drudgery of his every day occupation: something he can enjoy while absent, and look forward to with much pleasure. If I were to pray for a taste which would stand by me under every variety of circumstances, and be a source of happiness and cheerfulness to me thro' life, and a shield against all its ills, however things might go amiss, and the world frown upon me, it would be a taste for reading.—Herschel.

☞ Do what you ought, and let what will come of it.

A Word to Boys.

You have the elements in your nature of becoming a useful man. It now depends upon your own efforts and choice what course in life you will pursue. You have been instructed faithfully in all the virtues, and in those principles that will grace your character, and impart honor and integrity to your life. But these principles and these virtues you must make your own. They will never be your own property until you live them out in your daily life and weave them hourly into that rich fabric which constitutes the best wealth, the character.

This is, and must be, your own work. It cannot be done for you. And you must remember that the process is going forward with the rapidity of Time, and is filling, up either with every thought, word, or deed. which you may carelessly allow to go in; or is being made rich and beautiful, with good deeds, kind acts, considerate behavior; making every one around you happy, which is both your duty and highest interest.

A habit of self control is absolutely necessary to your success. This will enable you to rise superior to the little vexations that hourly beset your pathway; and give you a reputation fair as the azure of Heaven, richer than the mines of earth, more beautiful than the costliest web that ever came from an Eastern loom.

But if your indifference and neglect shall allow angry passions, wild thoughts, and improper language, clownish manners, and vulgar habits to make the warp and the woof of your only possessions, you will be poor indeed! And what a picture of depravity, and loathsome ugliness, filled up with such unlovely threads, will your character present!

You are fast acquiring the stature of a man—and your age is rapidly approximating to manhood; you are endowed with faculties of mind and of body, that you have only to use as God has designed, and your success is sure in every useful endeavor But if you do not adopt right principles of conduct, applying the 'golden rule' of life to your intercourse with the world, then all will be lost, and you will find yourself destitute of that inheritance which might have been yours.

Your advantages require you only to act your part well, and you may exert a salutary influence, prevent evil around you and perhaps saving some one from ruin

At any rate if you do not make the effort to rise—you must sink. Then be in earnest to do right, to do well in all things and a choicer blessing will attend you than the approbation of men. L.G.A.

COUSINING.—A country gentleman lately arrived in Boston, and immediately repaired to the house of a relative, a lady who had married a merchant of that city. The parties were glad to see him, and invited him to make their house his home, (as he declared his intention of remaining in that city but a day or two.) The husband of the lady, anxious to show attention to a relative and friend of his wife, took the gentleman's horse to a liver stable in Hanover street.

Finally, the visit became a visitation and the merchant, after the lapse of eleven days, found, besides lodging and board the gentleman, a pretty considerable bill had run up at the livery stable. Accordingly, he went to the man who kept the stable, and told him when the gentleman took his horse he would pay the bill.

'Very good,' said the stable keeper; 'I understand you.'

Accordingly, in a short time, the country gentleman went to the stable, and ordered his horse to be got ready. The bill of course, was presented.

'Oh,' said the gentleman, 'Mr. ———, my relative, will pay this."

'Very good, sir,' said the stable keeper, 'please to get an order from Mr———; it will be the same as the money.'

The horse was put up again, and down went the country gentleman to the long wharf, where the merchant kept.

'Well,' said he, 'I am going now.'

'Are you?' said the merchant; 'well, good bye, sir!'

'Well, about my horse; the man says the bill must be paid for his keeping.'

Well, I suppose that is all right, sir,'

'Yes—well, but you know I'm your wife's cousin.'

'Yes,' said the merchant, 'I know that you are, but your horse is not!'

'Pompey,' said a good humored master to his servant, 'I didn't know till yesterday that you had a whipping last week.'

'Ah, massa,' said the black, 'don't you? Golly! I know'd it at the berry time of it.'

A lady being asked why she did not use the medicated soap, replied that she got a plenty of soft soap from her beau, and that always put a plenty of color in her cheeks.

The Selfish Man.

A few days since we read an account of a man who, having accumulated a large property, said to himself, "soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years—take thine ease—eat, drink and be merry," and, it is added, that notwithstanding his great wealth and fancied security he was cut off that very night.

This little story made us very sad, and yet originals of the picture so vividly drawn, may be found in every walk of life. Thousands upon thousands, like this poor fellow, centre all their hopes on the accumulation of wealth—they turn a deaf ear to the piteous tale of honest poverty—they think of nothing but self, self, self; and when they have amassed a great property, death stares them out of countenance—their souls are required of them, and they die mourning an ill-spent life.

We are verry far from sneering at those who desire to lay up something for the support of declining years, but we would have every one remember his accountability to his maker, and charity to his fellow man. As life is short and uncertain, let us at least drive selfishness from our hearts.

GOOD ADVICE.—Many an unwise parent labors hard and lives sparingly all his life for the purpose of leaving enough to give his children a start in the world, as it is called. Setting a young man afloat with money left to him by his relatives, is like tying bladders under the arm of one that cannot swim; ten chances to one he will lose his bladders and go to the bottom. Teach him to swim, and he will never need the bladders. Give your child a sound education, and you have done enough for him. See, too, that his morals are pure, his mind cultivated, and his whole nature made subservient to the laws which govern men, and you have given him what will be of more value than the wealth of the Indies. You have given him a start which no misfortune can deprive them of. The earlier you teach him to depend upon his own rescources; the better.

IMPRESSION OF THE MOON.—Mr. Humphrey, daugerrean artist of Canandaigua, N. Y. has sent a dauggerean impression of the moon to President Sparks, of Cambridge. The presidens replies:

'The result is striking and remarkable. We here perceive the apparent motion of the Moon, or rather the actual motion of the earth on its axis, distinctly measured for half a minute's time, within the space of one-tenth of an inch. I have shown the impression to several of our our scientific gentleman, who are much pleased with them, and applaud the skill with which they have been executed.

Perhaps the art may, at some future day, be carried to such a degree of perfection, as to bring out the face of the Moon sufficiently large for a map. This would be a most desirable attainment; since a map of the Moon's surface can now be made only by the detached images presented to the eye through a telescope; and then transcribed by the hand Such a map must necessarily be imperfect, and no two will precisely agree in all the parts. A daguerreotype map would exibit every feature with perfect exactness.' —Independant Beacon.

KILL OR CURE.—A surgeon was called up in the night by a laboring man, to attend his wife, who was in a fit; but having often attended under similar circumstances, he asked the man who was to pay him. The countrymen answered that he possessed five pounds, which, kill or cure, should be his reward. The doctor paid every attention to the poor woman, who, notwithstanding, died. Soon after her death, he met the widower, and observed that he had an account against him. The man appeared greatly surprised and inquired for what. On being informed, he replied: 'I don't think I owe you anything; did you cure my wife?'

'No, certainly, it was not in the power of medcine to cure her.'

'Did you kill her then?' said the countryman.

'No, I did not,' was the reply.

'Why, then,' said the countrymen, 'as you did not either kill or cure, you are not entitled to the reward.'

☞ He only is worthy of esteem who knows what is just and honest, and dares to do it; who is master of his passions, and scorns to be a slave to another's.—Such an one, in the poorest poverty, is a far better man, and merits more respect, than those gay things who owe all their greatness and reputation to their rentals and revenues.

'I believe the jury have been inoculated for stupidity,' said a lawyer. 'That may be,' said his opponent, 'but the bar are of opinion that you had it in the natural way.'

E. M. Dunn, Sec'y.

Ignorance, neglect and contempt of human rights are the sole causes of corruption in governments. This is self evident to all who have or will take the trouble to examine into the subject. From the first origin of human government until the present day, the great mass of mankind have neglected through ignorance their rights, and thus have desining men been enabled to degrade and enslave them, to make them hewers of wood and drawers of water, the slaves and bondmen of themselves and their heirs forever!

Thus it was through the ignorance and credulity of the mass that kings and priests were enabled to make them believe that they were appointed by the God of Heaven as his annointed vicegerents on earth. All history corroborates this.

Although the mass at various periods of the world's history have arisen and attempted to throw of the yoke or their fellow man, yet from the degrading bondage which they have been in they have never been fully able to accomplish it. Probably the nearest approach man has ever made towards gaining his rights since he was first enslaved, was upon the establishment of our government. They then made the declaration that all mankind were created equal; that their rights were equal, imprescriptable and inalienable—this declaration which commends itsself to the common sense of all men—was, so far as the rest of mankind were concerned, and in defiance of those who alone could have any claim upon them, completely established.

The great majority of the people being satisfied with thus accomplishing their independence and throwing off the yoke of their oppressors, neglected to carry out the principles for which they had so successfully contended, in the establishment of the government; thus by neglect at this proper period to secure for all what all had fought for, were the mass thrown back to fight the battle of freedom over again.

Thus it is even under this, which is acknowledged to be the most liberal and free government on earth, and although the equal and inalienable rights of all men are declared to be the fundamental principle upon which it is based, yet not one quarter of the people whose rights are thus plausibly made its foundation enjoy the privileges which are emblazoned forth on paper as the imprescriptible right of all.

We have stated at the commencement of this article, that ignorance, neglect and contempt of human rights are the sole cause of the corruptions of governments. We think it will be conceded by all, at least we take it for granted, that intelligence is too generally diffused, to permit us to charge it to ignorance. It therefore follows if the causes assigned are the true ones, that it must be through the neglect of the people whose rights are not fully recognized, on the one hand, and the contempt in which these rights are held by those in power on the other, that all do not enjoy them.

Look at our National and State governments; do not a majority of our representatives in both, hold in utter contempt the rights of their constituents? If not, why not accomplish the business for which they were elected by passing such laws and such only as will secure to the people equal rights? What further evidence do we want that our representatives hold the people's rights in contempt, than when they deny in their places in our legislative halls, the right of the people to petition; that sacred right guarantied to all by the Constitution. But say these contemners of the people's rights, we do not deny the right of petition; only acknowledge to us in your petitions the republican doctrine! of a divine right! to a property in our fellow man and we will receive them! first acknowledge our right to be fed and clothed by their sweat and blood, by their eternal degradation and then we will receive your petition! Can there be any greater contempt for the people's rights than this? By what right do our representatives dictate what shall be petitioned for? Is it by concessions which have been and are still being made? Do the people know this is their right yet neglect to demand it, and suppose it will be conceded when it has passed by custom and precedent into a law? Will the people without an effort, without a remonstrance, quietly submit to such a monstrous assumption of power? Will the Press, through the sinister influences of party, thus surrender the people's rights without a warning voice?

While the people are thus deprived of this right by the National Legislature—a right which the most abject slaves of a despotic government enjoy—they are equally the objects of contempt of the State Legislature. This body in defiance of the people's often expressed will and in utter contempt of their rights refuse to pass any law which has for its basis the equal rights of all. No law, however beneficial to the general welfare receives any countenance from a majority of this body, as they too declare that property and property alone is entitled to any consideration from them! Thus have the following gentlemen distinctly declared upon all occasions upon which they have been enabled to record their votes.

Messrs. Abraham, Bishop, Brown, Buzby, Cobb, Condit, Coriell, DeMott, Doty, Duell, Emley, French, Hageman, Kanouse Meeker, Nixon(speaker.) Pierson, Stockton, Thompson, Van Dyke, Wade, Williams, Wood, Wyckoff.

Thus it is, although the Constitution of the State and of the United States recognises the people as the source of all political power, yet practically it is in a few men who make politics their trade; who, as it will be perceived by a reference to the above mens votes, colleague with property, granting to it special rights and privileges, which in return does not scruple to colleague with men who thus hold in contempt the people's rights; and keep them constantly in power, thus are they enabled to live at the expense of the industrious classes. This will ever be the case until the working clases represent themselves. So long as men will continue to stand still with their arms folded and permit themselves to be contemned, robbed, just so long will there be some one to despise and rob them. It is useless to complain, complaint and remonstrance have alike been in vain. Never until the oppressed put their shoulder to the wheel will special privileges yield its advantages and grant to all under equal laws, their equal rights.

☞ The Lecture of F. T. Frelinghuysen Esq., before the Lyceum on Tuesday Evening, was of a very interesting, instructive and highly intellectual character.—The historical research displayed in so brief a dicourse, giving as it did a complete synopsis of the history of the Anglo-Saxon race, from their primitive and most ancient origin, to their extended empire, wide spread renown and well known peculiarities of the present day; certainly reflect much credit on the talent and research of Mr. F. May he long live to enjoy and perpetuate the principles he so glowingly depicted as the distinguishing characteristics of our noble race.

☞ The attention of our readers is requested to the advertisement of Mr. John Lutz's, in another column. Those wishing to purchase any description of Gentlemen's wear will find Mr. Lutz prepared with a complete assortment of every description, which he is prepared to sell as low as can be had in New York or elsewhere. Terrible Accident!

As the 12 o'clock train from Philadelphia on the Camden and Amboy Railroad reached White Hill, N. J. Friday March 1. the Locomotive Boiler exploded killing Jas. Leward and Martin Fisher, Engineers, and severely wounding Mr. Greenleaf, fireman, and a brakeman whose name we did not learn.—The wounded men are not expected to recover. The explosion set a Shed and a Barn and a Sloop's sails on fire

The Coroners Jury rendered the following verdict, viz:—'That Martin Fisher, and James Seward came to their death in consequence of the explosion of the boiler of Engine No. 29, caused by there being an insufficiency of water in the boiler at the time of the explosion.' The evidence established beyond all doubt the fact that this was the case, and the verdict is in strict conformity with all the circumstances developed during the progress of the investigation.

☞ The Body of one more of the Hague street sufferers was found in the ruins, on Friday last and recognized as that of John Stafford, 17 years of age, whose mother and five brothers resides at 126 Delancey street.—Sun.

For the Gazette.

Gentlemen:—In perusing your paper a few days since I was much interested in an article from the "Plainfield Union" entitled Health. The writer deprecates the evils consequent upon the generally received opinion, constantly put forth by the popular creed, and especially by those who give it direction, who by a "perversion of Scripture" charged God foolishly, making him the author of disease sickand death, consequently, of misery and sin! which alone, as is there shown, is the result of man's own evil conduct in violating the immutable laws of God. Never was sermon more true; and the writer should receive, as he deserves, much credit for the independent and clear manner he has treated the subject.

To every considerate and honest mind it must be painful to observe with what sang froid the evils and wickedness of man are charged to the author of all good. In the early ages of the world the mass of mankind were kept in ignorance and led and tyranized over by a few monks, priests, and wicked men, who found it to suit their own selfish and corrupt hearts to shroud all things in mystery. We would think however in this day of light and knowledge men would have thrown off these shackels; but alas! there are still many who love darkness rather than light, and instead of following the laws of God, which are good and unalterable, they give way to their unholy appetites and passions; and when evil over takes them, and they receive the penalty of the violations of those laws, they are comforted by some perverter of scripture, that it is the mysterious workings of Providence! such are the teachings of the popular creed; its tendencies mystery, hypocracy and ignorance of true religion, as founded on the immutable laws of God. I trust the "Union," your own and every other honest and independant paper in the land will fearlessly discuss all subjects on which man's happiness depends, and thus help to dispel the darknes and superstition which has so long enshrouded the human mind.

Those who fear the truth may attempt to construe this for their own selfish purposes as an attack upon religion, but this I distinctly disavow; as I do not wish to speak slighty of true religion, which it is every man's interest to understand, but only of that which I consider a perversion of the TRUTH.

Property Qualification.

Whatever may be said as an apology by those who killed the bill in the Legislature to abolish property qualification, the vote taken on striking out the word freeholder, in the Camden city bill, puts all caviling asto the sentiments of members beyond adoubt. The bill provided for the election of twelve members of Common Council, six of whom were required to be freeholders, and six to be elected without this distinction. A more palpable evidence of the absurdity of freehold qualification could not possibly have come up before the Representatives of the people; and of course every member had a fair opportunity of setting himself right on this question, and here we have the individual sentiments as well as the collective opinios of the members of the Legislature of New Jersey, on this important question.

Against striking out the word freeholder—Messrs, Abraham, Bishop, Brown, Buzby, Cobb, Condit, Coriell, DeMott, Doty, Duell, Emly French, Hageman, Kanouse, Meeker, Nixon (Speaker,) Pierson, Stocton, Thompson, Van Dyke, Wade, Williamson, Wood, Wyckoff—25.

In favor of striking out the word freeholder—Messrs, Ayars, Butcher, Day, Fritz, Hall, Hineline, Hooper, Hopper, Hornbeck, Hoxey, Huyler, Marlow, Moore, Philips, Price, Remster, Ribble, Risley, Simonson, Sithens, Walling, Young—22.

Here we have 25 whigs voting directly against the abolition of the property qualification in the municipal government of Camden. The whig party ought to repudiate its representatives.—Trentonian.

Steamboat Explosion.

Philadelpaia, March 3.

Yesterday morning, at 8 1-2 o'clock, the steamboat Clifton, Capt. Boon, left Salem, N. J. on her first trip to this City. Just as she reached the wharf at New-Castle, Del. her boiler exploded, instantly killing Charles Foster, of Salem, fireman, and scalding five other persons. A Mr. Gilmer of this City and Mr. Lassie of Delaware City were very severely scalded. The cause of the explosion is unknown. At the time of the unfortunate occurrence, the steam-guage showed but a small press of steam, and the boilers were full of water.

☞ Both Houses of the Legislature have agreed to adjourn sine die, on Thursday, March 7.

Legislature.

Feb 27.—House.—Mr. Day presented a petition for a law to punish inebriates. Laid on the table. The petition proposes that every one convicted of being intoxicated should in every town where he resides be immersed in a cistern of cold water, which shall have a stream running into it and be furnished with a pump, and that the convicted inebriate shall either keep pumping or be permitted to drown.

Passed—The sup. to school law of Trenton. The bill for the protection of small and harmless birds; the bill respecting Schools in Howell, Monmouth Co.; the bill changing the time at which public corporations shall make their annual statements; the sup. to the Lunatic Asylum Law; the bill extending the Mechanics Lein Law to all the Counties in this State, the bill also extends the time of the lein from six months to one year; sup. to act concerning fees and costs. Also the bill to prevent the abatement of suits in certain cases; the bill to protect fish in Swartout Pond in Sussex; bill to extend instruction of indigent deaf and dumb to six years; bill concerning constable fees; bill to relief of the children of Henry Traphagen; the bill concerning Inland Bills of Exchange and Promisory Notes.

Feb. 28—Senate—Passed.—To repeal act to vote by ballot in Ocean, Monmouth; to prevent swine from running at large in Lumberton: sup. to act for the promoting of learning: to charter Elizabethtown Savings Institution; to faciliate communication between Elizabethtown and Morristown; to charter Mt. Holly Summer House Association; to charter North American Telegraph Co.; for draining the River Riser;" to authorize certain townships in Gloucestor to vote by ballot; providing additional compensation to Court Criers and to Judges of Common Pleas; sup. to Lunatic Asylum; for relief of children of Henry Traphagen.

Mr. Olden moved to rescind the resolution to adjourn sine die on the first of March. Adopted.

House—The Joint Resolutions to print the Laws in all the newspapers in the State, were called up.

The House resolved itself into committee of the whole, and after some time spent therein, rose and reported progress, and asked leave to sit again.

The House concurred in the action of the Senate rescinding the resolution to adjourn on March 1.

March 1.—Senate—Passed—The amended bill to charter the Mount Holly and Pemberton Railroad Co.; to repeal the act allowing inhabitants of Chester in Morris, and Hope in Warren to vote by ballot; for relief of children of Henry Traphagen, with an amendment; further sup. to small cause act to alter the time of holding the charter election of Newark.

Mr. Craig by a suspension of rules, introduced a bill for the better observance of the Sabbath. Referred to Judiciary.

The Jt. Resolution appointing Commissioners to revise school Law was postponed indefinitely, 12 to 6.

House.—Passed—To create the new township West Hampton in Burlington; to annex part of Nort Hampton in Burlington to Pemberton; sup. to Insurance Companies; Camden City charter, as amended in the Senate; to authorize inhabitants of certain townships in Bergen, and Hudson to raise money for School purposes; to keep in repair the meadows ef the Repaupo Co.; to authorize administrators of David Kinsey, de'c to convey Real Estate.

Mr. Hoxey offered the following:

Whereas, the Commissioners appointed to investigate the charges made by Henry C. Carey, have fully sustained and established a majority of said charges, and the said H. C. Carey, Esq., has been instrumental in obtaining from said Companies the sum of $11,424, to which amount they were indebted to the State for transit duties, therefore.

Resolved, That the thanks of the House of Assembly are due to Henry C. Carey, Esq., for his industry and patriotic exertions in exposing the errors and inaccuracies of the accounts of said companies, and in obtaining for the State of N. J. its just dues.

Resolved, That the Speaker of the House sign and forward the above preamble and resolution to H. C. Carey, Esq.

Mr H. read a long statement previously prepared, reviewing the report of the Commissioners, to show that it proved the charges made against the Companies by Mr. Carey to be fully sustained, and he thought the State was greatly indebted to Mr. C. in obtaining partial justice, etc.

The seslutions were postponed for the present.

Congress—Mr. Calhoun.

Congress is still discussing the question of Slavery. Mr. Calhoun's views on the subject were read in the Senate on Monday. It is much to be regretted by the cause of Liberty that such talents are arrayed against it. What might they not accomplish if arrayed in its favor. He asks:

How could the Union be saved? It could only be by adopting such measures as will satisfy the Southern States that they can remain in the Union with safety and honor to themselves. It could not be saved by eulogizing the Union, nor by appealing to the memory of Washington; neither was there any thing in the life and example of that distinguished man, which could deter the South from seceding. On the contrary, there was much to encourage them to secession, as a remedy for oppression and deprivation of their rights.

From which it would appear that nothing but slavery extension can satisfy nor save the honor of the south. Neither the constitution nor the memory of Washington, nothing but the extension of Slavery. How nice the sense of honor and oppression when nothing but human bondage, misery and degradation can satisfy its acuteness of perception!

Mr. Webster will address the Senate on Wednesday or Thursday next.

Mr. Hale gave notice of his intention to reply to what he considered the Romance of history of the Anti-Slavery Agitation, presented by Mr. Calhoun.

LATER FROM CALIFORNIA.

New-Orleans, Feb. 28.

The steamship Alabama has just arrived from Chagres, with 65 passengers, and half a million in gold dust.

She also brings advices from San Francisco to the 15th of January, being two weeks later than previous accounts. They were received at Panama by the steamship California.

The City of Sacramento has been overflowed by water. But few spots of land are visible, and the inhabitants are suffering terribly from this dreadful calamity.

The loss by this unlooked for visitation is estimated at over $1,000,000.

Immense herds of cattle and other property have been swept away. While this great flood, however destroys a great deal of property, it will wash out the gold in immense quantities.

A party of Chilians had made an attack upon the Amerieans at the mines in the vicinity of Stockton, in which two of the assailed were killed and the others imprisoned, though the latter were afteward released.

The ship Prince de Joinville and bark Harman from New-York had arrived at San Fracisco.

Accounts from the Isthmus state that Mrs. Fremont had recovered from her illnes, and with her husband, were about leaving for the United States.

Sentence of Pearson, the Murderer

Boston, March 2, 1850.—Pearson, the murderer of his wife and children, was, to-day, sentenced to be hung. After the sentence had been pronounced he threatened to haunt his judges, protesting his innocence.

New Jersey.—The legislature of this State is to adjourn without day on Thursday next, when it will probably have accomplished the most Homœpathic quantity of Reform of any body that ever had so many and so good propositions before it.—No charter will be granted for a Railroad at all conflicting with the Monopoly of the Camden and Amboy; no Homestead Exemption act will be passed; no Free Banking Law; no anti-Drunkard-manufactory law; and not much of anything else.—Tribune.

Arnica LINIMENT

A CERTAIN CURE FOR

RHEUMATISM!

SORE THROAT, BURNS, SCALDS, PAINS IN THE LIMBS, CHEST, SIDE, AND BACK, SPRAINS, BRUISES, CRAMPS, CHILBLAINS, ETC., ETC., ETC.

Price, Twenty-Five Cents.

This newly-invented oleaginous preparation of ARNICA has been, before offering it to the public, satisfactorily tested by several of our most respectable physicians, who were also made acquainted with the ingredients of which it is composed, and the peculiar process of compounding them. So confident is the inventor of its efficacy, that he has authorized every agent—in case it does not prove itself as represented—to take back any part of the bottle and return the full price of it.

The ARNICA LINIMENT will be found more penetrating, and to relieve the most acute pain in less time, than any other external remedy; at the same time it will not irritate the skin or cause it to smart, even if badly broken, as is not unfrequently the case with Burns and Scalds, but will remove the fire and cause the injured part to heal so rapidly as seldom to leave any scar.

Most, if not all, other liniments contain some irritating ingredient, such as pepper, spirits of hartshorn, oil of vitriol, nitric acid, (spirits of salt,) combined with oil or alcohol, which cause the skin to smart very much, and the second application to be greatly dreaded, particularly by children; and the opinion is generally entertained that the more a liniment causes the flesh to burn and smart, the more good it will do. But this we are convinced is a very great mistake, and results in doing more injury than good: as, for instance, with SPRAINS, BRUISES, BURNS, SCALDS, CHILBLAINS, or any inflammation on or near the surface of the skin. All such exciting embrocations must naturally tend to increase the disease and prolong the cure.

The ARNICA LINIMENT requires neither true nor fictitious testimonials to recommend it, after one trial.

This splendid work is perfectly unique, both in its design and execution; it is eminently adapted as a patriotric presentation book.

In one volume, with ten hihgly finished engravings on steel, and a splendidly illuminated dedication plate, in gold and colors, richly bound and gilt,

The Odd-Fellows' Offering for 1850.

Contributed chiefly by the Members of the Order.

"This splendid annual holds a rank not surpassed, if indeed it is equaled, by any similar work in the United States, in the variety and talent exhibited in the letter-press, and the elegance of its embellishments.'—[Gazette of the Union.

In one volume, with seventy-eight beautiful engravings, and bound in muslin, gilt—

1776.

Or Authentic Chronicles of American Independence.

"We have no hesitation in commending this work as the best popular history of our Revolution yet published."—New-York Express.

In four volumes, with Portraits of all the Presidents, exquisitely engraved and bound in muslin, extra gilt—

The Statesman's Manual.

Containing all the Messages and Address of the Presidents of the United States, together with a vast amount of valuable national documents not to be found elseware in a collective form

"The most complete library in itself of all that concerns our political history that has ever appeared; no individual should be without it.'

[Democratic Review.

"We would not be without a copy for ten times its cost."—[New-York Tribune.

"It is indispensible to the library—a work of unspeakable usefulness."—[N. Y. Evening Post.

In one large octavo volume, with finely engraved Portraits of the Presidents, and elegantly bound and gilt—

The Presidents of the United States.

Their Memoirs and Administrations.

"An elegant picture galery of our Presidents, and an admirable cabinet of our political history,"

[New-York Sun.

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

A curious dialogue, 'tis said,
Took place among the ladies,
Of DRY GOODS AND GROCERIES,
Where the best place to trade is!

Mrs. A. S. and Mrs. B.,
Declared they knew where was good T.
Mrs. L. and O. wished to know,
If anywhere on Earth they'd go!
For, good T. was hard to get,
They neither had had good as yet.
B. S. and A., that is the Mrs.,
Knew also where to get their dresses,
And sugar, ribbons, and molasses,
Carpets, earthenware, looking-glasses,
Muslin, over-shoes, and gloves,
Blankets, salaratus, nutmegs, cloves,
Umberellas, tin pans, and toys,
Beautiful ones for girls or boys;
In fact, everything that's eat, drank or wore,
You'll find it at D. BULLMAN'S Store!

You'll find this just as 'tis said
If 'tis not, then you need not trade;
My thanks for the past to all are due,
While a happy New Year I wish to you.

DANIEL BULLMAN.

COFFINS AT REDUCED PRICES.

THE subscriber would call the attention of the public to his complete assortment of Coffins, where all the different sizes are finished and ready for use at a moments warning; they are made of Mahogony, Black Walnut and Cherry, and finished in every style, so that all can be suited, also a superior style of stained ones, which he offers remarkably low; he has hitherto defered giving his prices, but as he has understood that there is some misrepresentation in regard to his prices, he deems this sufficient excuse to the public for to say that for a large size Black Walnut Coffin including hearse in attendance he has $6, Mahogany $14, Cherry $6, and small ones accordingly, tight case made in coffin style $1,75. By leaving the order with him, the sexton of either of the churches will be seen if required, and all necessary arrangements made without any extra expense.

DR. PEARSON'S BARBER'S

EMBROCATION

IS decidedly the best preparation that can be used for the cure of sprains, bruises, cuts, galls, splint, curb, ringbone. spavin, stiffness of the joints, &c. It is an article which should be in the hands of every horseman, and no stable should be without a bottle of it. Price only 25 and 50 cents per bottle.

The following is the testimony of Mr Schench, proprietor of the "Somerset House," Somerville, N. J., a gentleman well known to horsemen in New Jersey.

DR. S. A. PEARSON: Dear Sir—I feel it a duty which I owe to you and the community at large, or rather that part of the community who possess, or in any way have charge of Horses, to say, that I have used your Embrocation,' for horses. It is decidedly the best preparation that I have ever used, or have any knowledge of for the various diseases which it is recommended.

I also know a great number of my friends who have used it—and they all say, that it is the best medicine for horses that they have ever used. I would confidently recommend every person who has a horse should keep a bottle of this valuable Embrocation in his stable.

Yours respectfully, AB'M. C. SCHENCK.

CHAIN PUMPS.

THE best machine for raising water, in use.—This Pump has many advantages over any other in use on account of its simplicity of construction, being made wholly of wood and galvanized iron, not liable to get out of order or to get deranged in any way. It can never freeze in winter, and can be put in wells of any depth.

It takes less power to work it than any other machine, to raise the same amount of water.

It is never obstructed by gravel or sand; it keeps the water perfectly sweet and fresh; the action of the chain mixes the gasses with the water always keeping it lively and fresh; on ceasing to work it, the water in the tube descends to the level of the water in the well; on commencing to work the pump, the first water that is drawn is from the bottom of the well.

☞ This pump received the premium at the late Essex county fair.

These Pumps may be had at the Pump Factory of S. B. Miller, 340 Broad-street, Newark, N. J.

GREAT AMERICAN REMEDY.

Vegetable Dyspepsia Bitters.

TO THE PUBLIC,

DR HUTCHINGS would call the attention of all afflicted with dyspepsia, and the various disorders arising from a diseased stomach, to his remedy therefor. His DYSPEPSIA BITTERS will be found, on trial, to contain every property requisite to restore the disordered stomach to a healthy action; to reproduce the lost appetite of the patient, and do away with the periodical nervous headache and general debility consequent on this afflicting disease. Thousands have tested its efficacy, and thousands more are now under treatment; and not one solitary case of failure has yet been reported to him. This is consolatory, and urges him on in his efforts to relieve poor suffering humanity. He could fill a volume with certificates of those who have been permanently cured; but he conceives the testimony of a few well-known citizens will answer every purpose. The reader will find, on looking over the following testimonials, they are not "got up" for the occasion; but bona fide letters from gentlemen who can be seen at any time at their places of business.

The following Certificate is from M. B. Brady, the Celebrated Daguerreotypist:

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness, I was advised to take Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me. I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia. M. B. BRADY.

No. 205 Broadway, N. Y.

From Luther B. Wyman, Esq., late President of the New York Musical Society, now of Brooklyn.

The undersigned was afflicted with the Dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half during a greater portion of which time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself, until he was recommended to try Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, he very soon derived benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well.

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of Hutchings' Bitters for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine.

L. B. WYMAN, 38 Burling Slip.

New York, Sept. 3. 1849.

Dear Sir—My wife having been a great sufferer from dyspepsia, low spirits, palpitation of the heart, and having been cured as I believe by your Bitters, I most cheerfully attest their efficacy; her case was a bad one. In the space of four months she lost her strength and thirty-five pounds of flesh; was compelled to abandon her household affairs; there seemed but little probability of a cure until she began to take your bitters; in one week she was greatly relieved, and in three weeks she was perfectly well, and has since gained thirty pounds. You are at liberty to use this if it will at all further your laudable purpose of circulating this valuable remedy.

With respect, NATHAN SAYRE, No 61 Fourth-st

DOCT. PEARSON'S

PULMONIC EXPECTORANT,

FOR the cure of Coughs, Colds, Consumption of the Lungs, Influenza, Bronchitis, Asthma, Pain in the Breast, spitting of Blood, Whooping Cough, Croup or Hives, Hoarseness, Difficulty of Breathing, and every other disease of the Lung and the Breast.

This invaluable medicine should be in the possession of every family. In a country where the continual and sudden changes of the atmosphere, from heat to cold, and from cold to heat, render the inhabitants extremely liable to diseases of the Lungs and Breast, it is of the most vital importance that every one should be in possession of a remedy that shall at once effectually and permanently cut short those diseases, and restore the patient to health. The first symptom of cold or influenza should be immediately attacked and reduced by some remedy that has power over the disease. The medicine which has the most complete control over these diseases, and will most speedily restore the health of the patient is

PEARSON'S PULMONIC EXPECTORANT.

The following Card of three respectable phisicians sets forth the virtues of Dr. Pearson's pulmonic Expectorant. 'Having made use of Dr. Pearson's pulmonic Expectorant, we feel it a duty to recommend it as a safe and effectual cure for the various diseases for which it is intended. We are acquainted with many persons who have been cured of Cough, Bronchitis, pain in the breast and side, spitting blood, palpitation of the heart, and incipient consumption, by its use, and many of them after all other means had failed.'

A. Fearson, M. D. U. S Navy; S. K. Leedem, M. D. Champlain Co, Ohio; W. R. Cadwallader, M. D. U. S. Navy.

Dr. Pearson's Carminative Balsam

Is decidedly the most beneficial remedy for the cure of Dysentary, Cholera Morbus and Summer complaint, that is known to man. Parents will find it the best medicine that can be used for young children and infants. And every person who is travelling in the summer months should not be without a bottle of it in their possession; as it is an infalliable remedy against thr change produced in the system by drinking bad water.

We annex the following certificate of Mrs. A. M. Sanford, of New York, in reference to the Carminative Balsam. We might add a long list, but consider this sufficient.

This is to certify that I have used Dr. Pearson's Carminative Balsam, and confidently believe it to be the best medicine that can be used for the various diseases for which it is recommended, and recommend it to the ladies who are travelling in summer months, and to mothers for the fretting and crying of infants for which it is a certain cure.

MRS. A. M. SANFORD,
No. 160 East Broadway N. Y.

The proprietor of the above valuable medicines, as also of Dr. Pearson's Barber's Embrocation for Horses, being himself a Physician and graduate of one of the best medical schools in the U. S. and having had the advantage of years of experience in an extensive practice, is therefore from the practical knowledge which he has acquired, well qualified to prescribe those remedies, and restore the patient to sound health.

Prepared only by S. A. Pearon M. D., and for sale wholesale and retail, at No. 106 North 4th street Philadelphia. Also, by J. R. Swallow, General Agent, No. 123 Fulton-st. N. Y., by whom all orders for the above medicines will be promptly attended to.

For sale in Plainfield by E. Kirkpatrick, and M. F. Cushing, sold also by Druggists and country storekeepers generally throughout the United States Canadas and West Indies.

THE FATHER AND SON.

An Incident of Real Life.

BY PAUL CREYTON.

One night last winter, while pursuing my way along one of the most obscure streets in Boston, I was aroused from the revery in which I was indulging by hearing footsteps close at my side. Turning quickly: I beheld a young girl, apparent y not more than twelve years old, following as if she was anxious to speak to me; and when I observed by a neighboring street lamp, that she was poorly clad, trembling thin and pale I asked her, in a tone of kindness, what she wanted.

'If you please sir,' she replied, in a voice that was almost choaked by sobs, yet which struck me as soft and peculiarly silver toned—'If yon please, sir will you go back with me a little way, and see my father, who is very sick!'

'What is the matter of your father?' I asked, afraid of being deceived.

'O, sir, I don't know,' she answered, in the same tone of voice: But I fear he is going to die. Do, sir, be so good as to go and see him.

The earnest manner of the broken hearted girl made me ashamed of having doubted her at first, and I resolved to comply with her request. I was in just the mood for some adventure where there was an opportunity of accomplishing an object of benevolence, and willingly followed my timid, sorrowful little guide back to her home.

The girl led me into a small and somewhat delapidated house, and invited me to ascend a small and narrow staircase. At the head of the stairs, I heard her grooping about until her hand touched a door which she opened, asking me in a low voice to follow her into the room.

I did so, and found myself in an humble apartment, where scrupulous neatness seemed struggling against absolute want. The dim light of a flickering lamp which stood upon a small table near the door, revealed to me the scanty furniture which I found to consist of a few chairs, and the table already mentioned, and among other articles of minor importance, a bed in the most retired part of the rom.

The girl stepped along before me, and pointed to the bed.

'Come this way, sir, if you please,' she whispered; 'here's father.'

As she turned to approach the bed side of the sufferer, to apprise him of my presence, I silently brushed away a tear, which the sight of her grief-worn, pallid cheeks; and eyes red with weeping, caused to start through my eyelids.

My youthful guide bent over the sick man, and laying her cheek close to his, while her arms encircle to his neck, whispered something in his ear,—A moment after, she arose, and placing a chair at the bedside begged me to approach.

Seating myself in the chair she placed for me, I took the hand of the invalid, and gazed for the first time full upon his face. I shall never forget the spectacle. Although much emaciated, his features betrayed the spirit of pride in the midst of poverty, of resolution in adversity, and of the strong endurauce during his moments of agony, which dwelt within his breast.

I was about to address him, when he cut me short by speakiag first.

'You find me in a bad condition sir,' said he, with a smile, I thought rather bitter. 'I can't deny that I am actually crushed by sickness and misfortunes; this you will readily believe, I never could have stooped to ask assistance of any one, had I not been perfectly helpless. And even now, sir, I doubt whether I would not have died before asking favor of any one, had it not been for the broken hearted girl who conducted you hither.'

I cannot describe my sensations on hearing these words, so full of pride and candor, fall from the lips of a man who might be dying. It was plain to be seen that the invalid had once seen better days, and moved in circles of refinement, and I was sure that his intellect was one of the finest order. It was owing to these peculiar circumstaaces of the case; that I became deeply interested in my new acquaintances, and felt anxious to relieve them, and at the same time learn something of their history. After conversing with the invalid for a few moments, he intimated to me that he would willingly let me into the secret of his history providing the girl was not present to listen.

Accordingly I directed 'little Hetty,' as the old man called her, to go for a physician of my acquaintance, telling her I would stay by her father until she returned. The night was not cold, and I felt that it would benefit her body and divert her mind to take a walk in the city, with the ways of which she was very well acquainted.

Hetty had scarcely left the house when the door bell rang. The sick man said that the lower part of the house was unoccupid and requested me to see who was at the door.

Carrying the lamp in my hand, I proceeded down the stairs. I found a well dressed man at the door who seemed surprised at seeing me in such a place.

'Does Mr. Farley reside here?' he asked.

'I don't know as he does,' I replied.

'Well then, is there no more than one family living in the house!'

'There is only one family I believe.'

'And you don't know whether the name of the family is Farley or not,' said the stranger with a smile.

I saw the drift of his remark, and replied that I was not acquainted with the house, never having been there before.

'The name of the family may be Farley,' said I 'But I have not heard it. All I know is, there is an old man and his daughter, he calls the girl Hetty.'

'The same,' said the stranger—'he is the man I would see.'

Hoping he might bring relief to my new acquaintance, I readily conducted him up stairs, and into the apartment I had left.

On approaching the bedside, I found that Mr. Farley had fallen asleep during my absence from the room.

'Let me sit here,' said the stranger, quietly seating himself at the foot of the bed, and shading his brow, which I observed betrayed some emotion—'and do not tell the old man I am here. It is the girl I would see; and I will wait here until she returns.'

Scarcely was the stranger seated, when as I approached the bedside, the invalid awoke.

'You must know, said he, continuing the subject of his history in a manner which showed that his slumber had been light, you must know that I have not always been in the condition of poverty you see me now in. I was once in excellent circumstances, and enjoyed a high standing in society.'

'How did you become reduced?' I asked.

'By a series of misfortune, of which I need not tell you. By degrees I lost, until I became quite fortuneless, quite friendless!

'Is the girl who brought me here your only child? I enquired.

'Ah, it is of that I would speak,' sighed the sick man, pressing my hand—'I had another child—a son—'

'And he is dead?'

'No—but he is dead to me. I lost him through my pride—my worse than folly!'

'Where is he now?

'Alas, I know not.'

'He has deserted you?'

'No—I drove him from my door. It was in my days of pride and affluence that I disowned him and cast him off peniless.'

The old man pressed his feeble hand upon his brow, as if to still its throbing, and closed his eyes with a suppressed groan.

'I loved my son,' he continued, after a pause—'I was proud of him, but even he could not change the firmness of my will. It is that which has estranged us.'

'In what manner?'

'Can you guess? Had you known Edward, you would have discovered ere this.

His generous soul, so unlike my own, was totally free from the family pride and prejudice to which I owe my ruin. He had no idea of the aristocracy of wealth; and when he found among the laboring classes a maiden whom he thought might make him happy, he cared not for her humble condition, but resolved to win her heart and hand.'

'And you opposed him?'

'Firmly–bitterly–blindly opposed him?' exclaimed the old man. 'He was a major, and I could not enforce my command, but I threatened, little thinking my threats were vain. I told him in a moment of calmness that the hour which saw him united to the poor girl he was wooing, saw him no longer my son. But his soul, like mine, was above compulsion, and unlike mine, it scorned the allurement of wealth. He believed that toil and poverty were honorable, and that worth was oftoner found with them than with luxury and riches. He trusted that he had found a priceless jewel in the person of the humble girl he loved, and he boldly, unhesitatingly offered her his hand, although he knew I would disenherit him.'

'And he married her?

'Yes—and from that time I have never seen him, He provided a home for himself and wife in Boston, and wrote me a letter. In that he begged me to excuse him—he did not say forgive—his acting against my wishes, but said not a word not a syllable about being received once more as my son and heir. He ended by inviting me to visit him in his now noble abode, and expressing a desire that we might live on friedly terms. I was too proud to visit him, and he never saw fit to cross my threshold again!'

'And he continued to reside in Boston—in the same city with you, his father?'

'Yes, for a time; but he was poor, and could not bear, I presume, of those of his old associates who ceased to know him when he was no longer able to live in style. He scorned them, it is true, but he hated the sight of them, and therefore he removed from the city.'

'And he never came to you, or wrote to you afterwards?' said I.

'Never. The last I heard of him he was in New York, and in tolerable circumstances. O, what would a triumph it would be to him could he see me thus reduced—shorn of my pride and wealth!

'You see I am now left alone in this unfriendly world, with the child who brought you hither. As my riches failed me, being swept away by misfortunes, my old friends dropped off one by one; and now sickness has reduced me to the helpless, miserable condition in which you behold me. There is not an individual living who cares for me and mine! You have already shown some kindness to us—for which Heaven reward you! But you are the only one—only one.

The sick man turned his eyes upwards, then closed them with a sigh.

At this moment I observed that the stranger, who at first appeared to take no interest in the old man's story, had at length drawn his chair closer to the bedside, as if to listen.

'My pride is humbled now,' resumed the invalid, after a long pause. 'I think I might be brought to ask relief of the very son I disowned. O, God, how just has been my punishment; to think that he whom I cast off, is now probably able to laugh at my fall in the midst of his prosperity. But think you he would do it? Think you my Edward, who was once my joy and pride, would have the heart to triumph over me in my misery?'

'No, he would not!' said a deep earnest voice behind me, which made me start.

On looking around I saw the stranger I had admitted approaching the bedside.—As the light fell upon his brow, I beheld it dark with agony, and there was a tear glistening in his eye.

'Who spoke? What voice is that?' demanded the invalid, turning on his pillow.

I made way for the stranger and he drew near the bed. He bent over the form of the old man, and their eyes met.

'It was I that spoke,' said the stranger, in hurried husky tones, 'it was my voice.'

The old man stared at him wildly.

'And who are you?' he demanded.

'Do you not know me?' murmered the other,—'Oh, God! that it should come to this—that I am forgotten by my father.'

'Edward! my son Edward!' sobbed the invalid, 'Oh, my injured—my noble and forgiving boy!

The old man's voice was choked by sobs, as with his feeble arms he drew his son more closely to his bosom. I turned to dash away the tears that came unbidden to my eyes dimming their light; and when I looked again, near a minute after, I beheld the father and son still locked in each others arms. As I contemplated that silent, heartfelt embrace, I felt my eyes fill again with tears, and my bosom to heave with sympathy.'

'Oh, my son,' murmered the invalid at length what good angel has brought you hither? I am no longer what I once was—but an humble miserable wretch.

Adversity has taught me a deep and honest lesson, and it is now with joy and not with pain that I asked you to forgive me—'

'Father! father!' interrupted the young man in a voice of agony, 'speak not of the past. Let us forgive and forget. Both of us may have been in fault but the days of our estrangement are passed now, and we are father and son once more.'

'God bless you, my child!' murmed the old man, God bless you.'

'I am come' resumed Edward, 'to repay the debt of gratitude I owe you.'

'The debt of gratitude?'

'Yes—for what does not a son owe to his father—especially to such a father as you were once to me? My mother was away when I was youug, and Hetty but an infant; but you filled her place—you educated me—you did everything in your power to make me happy. Now I am come to repay the debt as freely. I have a dear and happy home in New York, to which I will remove you and Hetty, as soon as you are able to leave your bed.—Till then, I will see that you are made comfortable here. I thank heaven for putting it in my heart to come back to Boston and search you out!'

The old man strove to reply to these words of kindness, but could not speak for sobbing. He wept like a child.

My situation during this interview was painful.—It was a relief to hear footsteps ascending the stairs, and to see little Hetty enter a moment after.

Seeing two strangers in the room with her father she started back surprised, for she was far from recognizing her brother. The old man saw her, and called her to his side.

Edward uttered not a word, but stood regarding her in silence.

'My child,' said the old man, 'do you remember your brother Edward?'

'Oh, yes,' replied the girl quickly. 'I remember him—he was always so kind to me. Don't you wish, he was here now, father?'

'My child, he is here!' exclaimed the old man. 'This is your brother Edward!'

The girl turned, and when she saw her brother, regarding her tenderly and kindly, open his arms to receive her, she flew to his bosom, and flung her arms wildly about his neck.

At this moment, my friend, the physician Hetty had gone for, having followed her almost immediately, rang at the door, and I hastened to conduct him, up the stairs.

He gave sick man encouragement of affording him immediate relief, and having prepared some medicines for his use, took his departure.

Thinking it best to leave the now united family alone, I shortly after rose to depart The old man and his son thanked me warmly for the interest I had taken in their affairs, and the little girl, as she conducted to the door and bade me good night, besough me with tears in her eyes to visit them again.

That night I went home a better man than when I left a few hours before. What I had learned had a peculiar effect upon my mind, teaching me as it did the folly of family pride or the pride of wealth, and the divine beauty and sweetness of forgiveness.

When I visited the house again I found a coach at the door, and being admitted by a servant, I met little Hetty in the hall dressed ready for a journey.

The little creature flew to welcome me, and fairly wept for joy.

'Where are you going?' I asked.

'Oh,' said she 'father and I are going to New York with brother Edward. Father has got almost well, so that he can travel. We are going to live with brother, and we shall be so happy!'

At this moment Edward and his father came down stairs, being ready for a start. Although the old man was leaning on the arm of his son, when he saw me he sprang forward to grasp my hand. Edward did the same, while Hetty stood by, laughing and weeping by turns, from joy.

I saw them depart; and once more I retraced my steps homeward, filled with admiration of the old man's proud, stern, but generous spirit, the candor, beauty and single-hearted ness of the child, but above all, of the young man's nobleness of soul, and of his spirit of true christian benevolence and forgiveness.

YANKEE PEDLARS.—The Knickerbocker for February tells a good story about a sheriff in Illinois who was rather "circumwented" by a Yankee pedlar. This legal functionary make it a practice to ferret out and punish all pedlars travelling through the State without a license. One day he met one, and after parleying some time with him, bought a bottle of the Balm of Columbia, "only a dollar a bottle;" and in reply to the question whether he wanted "any thing else," he said he hid—he wanted to see the Yankee's license for pedling in Illinois, that being his duty as high sheriff the State. The pedlar produced a document, which the officer pronounced "all correct;" and handing it back to the pedlar, he added, "I don't know now that I've bought this stuff, that I care anything about it. I reckon that I might as well sell it to you again. What'll you give for it?' The Yankee offered him thirty-seven and a half cents; and the sheriff handed over the bottle and received the change, when the pedlar said, "I say, yeou, guess I've a question to ask you, now, Hev yeou got a pedlar's license about your towse's?" "No; I haven't any use for the article, myself," said the sheriff. "Hain't eh? Well, I guess well see about that, poorty darned soon. Ef I understand the law, neow, its a clear case that yeou've been tradin' with me—hawkin' and peddlin' Balm o' Klumby on the highway—and I shall inform on yeou; I'll be darned if I don't!" Reaching the town, the Yankee was as good as his word, and the high sheriff was fined for peddling without a license. He was heard afterwards to say, "You might as hold a greased eel, as a live Yankee!"

Glass, which intercepts little, if any light will stop two-thirds of the heat; dark red glass, which intercepts 999-1000ths of the light, stops little more than one half of the heat.—Light of fire or candle condensed by a lens produces a slight increase heat. Thick glass intercepts more heat than thin, though it may transmit more light. Solar heat is transmitted through air without heating it and passes entirely though glass.—Scientific American.

Webster and Slavery.

We commend to the attention of our readers the following remarks from the N. Y. Tribune, reviewing Mr. Webster's speech, and commenting on the all important subject of Slavery. Although a portion of our readers may have read them they are in the main so correct, giving a condensed view of the subject, they will we think with reflection repay a second perusal.

"We do not criticise the manner of Mr. Webster's speech; we do not find fault with its details; all that is of minor consequence. It is its substance that we pronounce unequal to the ocasion and unworthy of its author.

It does not do all that Slavery has been beseeching of Mr. Webster. It does not profess to offer 36° 30′, nor any minor compromise between Slavery Extension and Freedom; but it offers one, notwithstanding. It takes the ground of Senator BELL of Tennessee. It proposes, not directly but indirectly, to ballance California with a new Slave State taken from Texas, and to abandon the Proviso for the Territories.

Mr. Webster says the Proviso is useless and nugatory, because nature has excluded Slavery from California and New-Mexico. How has she excluded it? By climate and soil, he will say. This has been said before often enough, and is none the truer for being said again. Have these advocates for natural exclusion never heard of Russia? In that country there are fifty millions of slaves distributed through every variety of climate and soil from that of North Carolina to that of Greenland. Have they never heard of Maryland nor Kentucky, States which raise neither cotton, nor rice, nor sugar, and yet employ slaves? It is absurd to say that Slavery knows any limitations of climate, or soil, or occupation. It goes wherever it can be made profitable. If the law guarantied slave property in California, can any man who knows enough to count four fail to see that thousands of slaves would in two months be digging gold there? Beside, Slavery is not a mere industrial institution in this country, and does not depend for its existence upon its profits alone. It is a great political machine, whereby the minority in the Republic has long ruled the majority. That is why it is adhered to with such fanatical persistence. That is why in Kentucky, for example, it resists every consideration which interest and sound reason urge for its removal. It is not profitable there, but it remains notwithstanding. So it would have got into California, had it dared go there; so it will now occupy New-Mexico, unless it is restrained.

Mr. Webster thinks the Proviso is originally of God's enacting, and therefore will not reaffirm it.—This is a new principle of legislation as well as a new point of rheotric. Hitherto it has been thought necessary for human laws to follow another course. The law of God is freedom, and yet by Constitutions and statutes we establish and guaranty freedom. But, does Mr. Webster mean to have us understand that God designs some portions of the earth for slavery and some for Liberty? Does he interpret any part of the divine will as ordaining any climate, any soil, any locality, for the woes and inhumanities of bondage? If God specially enacted that they shall not exist in New-Mexico, there must be some places for which he has made a different enactment. But this whole argument is puerile. Mr. Foote might have used it with propriety, but not so the man who speaks for Massachusetts.

The time was when Mr. Webster saw the Wilmot Proviso in another aspect. We do not object to his changing his sentiments, but cannot find his reasons sufficient to convert us also.

The position that Nothern States and their Citizens are morally bound to recapture fugitive Slaves may be good for a lawyer, but is not good for Man. The provision is on the face of the Constitution. True, but that does not make it the duty of Mr. Webster nor any other human being, when a panting fugitive presents himself at his door begging for shelter and the means of escape, to arrest and bind him and hand him over to the the pursuers who are hot upon his trail. In this the Constitution does not reenact the will of God, but the will of satan, and so is nugatory among freemen, though you enforce it with all possible statutes and penalties. When the public sentiment gets ahead of a law, that law loses all efficiency. Pass a law here in New-York that a man who steals a sheep shall be hanged, and does Mr. Webster suppose he could find a judge or a jury to execute it? Just so with the provision for the return of fugitive Slaves. It remains in force nominally and legally if you will but morally it is abolished in the Free States, has long been so, and so ever will, be. Public sentiments is ahead of it and cannot be dragged back again. We cannot be converted into Slave-catchers, nor can Slave-catchers operate freely among us. Every day diminishes the usefulness they may once have had to their employers. If Mr. Webster supposes that any mere legal morality can overrule that which God puts into the heart of every genuine freeman, he is much mistaken.

We have read his speech not without regret. The opportunity was and is yet a great one for a man endowed with a great mind, a great heart and courage up with the times. There was and is an opportunity for a man who should come not with a new compromise, for this is not the day of compromises, but with a calm comprehensive and impregnable assertion of the principles and policy of freedom with an utterance of what is in the heart of the People. We should rejoice had Mr. Webster taken hold of this opportunity. But he has not, and such opportunities, when rejected, seldom present themselves a second time.

—But the Union! Preserve the Union! Will you agree to no Compromise for the sake of the Union? shout in loud chorus all those whose sympathies are strong with Slavery as well as a frightened few who love freedom. No, we agree to no compromise; none is necessary; none is practicable. We agree to no compromise that perils or looks toward perilling Freedom in New-Mexico. And as for the Union we say that it is in no danger. Thank God it does not exist by the pleasure of politicians, but by an overruling necessity of things. It cannot be dissolved. It is not only the enactment of Nature and of God, but is fortified by an admirable Constitution, by the whole power of the American people and by the clear-headed, true hearted and strong handed Aministration which now guides its destinies. 'Disunion is a chimera!—And by the blessing of Heaven, Slavery Extension shall prove a chimera also."

☞ Slaves in the District of Columbia are claimed to be held under the laws of Congress, when there are no laws of Congress authorising Slavery. If Slavery can be legalized by any authority, it nevertheless cannot be by a Legislature whose powers are bounded by the Anti-Slavery Constitution of the United States. How absurd the supposition that Congress can establish Slavery at West Point, or wherever it has a fort or arsenal! And yet, if Congress have power to establish it in the District of Columbia, it has power to establish it wherever Congress has exclusive jurisdiction.

We respectfully submit that Congress is bound to put an immediate end to Slavery in the District of Columbia, and to guard against its recurrence by heavy penalties.

Adjourment of the Legislature.

The Seventy-Fourth Legislature of New-Jersey adjourned Friday Morning last, after a session of fifty-four days. The regular anual session of that body are limited to forty days; so that both houses have sat since Feb. 21st, under the dispensation of $1 50 per diem—greatly to the discomfiture of many legislators who became anxious to return. The session has been marked by little or no definite action of importance; although abundandance of material has been furnished, from week to week, to have resulted in the accomplishment of many measures of intrinsic value and universal interest.

Among the Bills which have been killed, postponed indefinitely, or otherwise disposed of,—perhaps to be resurrectionized at the next Session—are various Resolutions regarding Slavery, the Equalization of Taxes, Equal Suffrage, Household Exemption, the appointment of a State Agriculturist, and sundry others. Part of these have passed the lower House, but are carefully laid aside for further consideration in the Senate. It is cause for sincere regret that a bill for the Regulation of the House of Labor has been laid over among its fellows, and goes to the Senate's account of next year's 'unfinished busines.' We hope it may not be left to moulder four years to come.

Awful Disaster.

The steamer St. Johns was burnt to the water's edge near Bridgeport, Dallas county, Ala., on her upward trip to Montgomery, at 6 o'clock on Tuesday morning, March 5th. It is supposed that about 30 persons were burnt to death and drowned. The fire was accidental, and caught from the rear of the boilers. All the ladies on board, numbering 7 or 8, were lost. Lieut. Rice, of the U. S. A. lost some $250,000: several Californians also lost ther all The boat was insured for $20,000; she lost $40,000.

The Passaic Grand Jury have returned two bills of indictment against John Johnston—one for the murder of John S. Van Winkle, the other for the murder of Mrs. Jane Van Winkle. Upon his arraignment the prisoner pleaded, in a firm and very audiable tone, not guilty, to each charge.

Having no counsel, the Court (Judge OGDEN) assigned him WILLIAM GLEDHILL and SOCRATES TUTTLE, Esqs.

Mr. SEWARD addressed the Senate on Monday on California and Slavery for upwards of three hours in a speech that will wake up the Union. He reasoned logically, accurately, honestly. New York has at last found a voice in the senate true to freedom.

Mr. Seward goes for the admission of California for the applicatition of the Wilmot Proviso to New-Mexico, for emancipating the slaves now in the District of Columbia, and doubts whether the Constitution authorized Congress to set aside the treaty-making power, and vote foreign nations into the Union by mere resolution.

☞ Col. Fremont, U. S. Senator elect, accompanied by his wife and daughter, arrived in the steam-ship Georgia from Chagres, and have gone on to Washington. The Colonel has been quite ill, with intermittent fever for some time past, but is recovering. Mrs. Fremont has quite recovered. Lieut. Beale is with them.

THE NORTH RIRVER OPEN.—The boats Buffalo and Hudson went up to Albany on Saturday, being the first arrival of the season from New-York. The River closed on the 26th of December, and boat communication with Albany has been suspended but 72 days. This is the earliest opening since 1845.

☞ The New-Jersey Peace Convention is to meet on the 25th inst, in Newark.

EQUARIAN
CONDITION POWDERS.
The most Extraordinary medicine in the World for Horses.

It is cheaper, and warranted to possess more active, safe and beneficial properties, than any other for the cure of distemper, coughs, slobbering, preventing founders, fevers, hide bound, swelled legs, humors of the skin, mange, surfeit, obstructed urine, loss of appetite, indigestion, general debility, rough coat, and all impurities of the system, and blood, and want of condition.

The ease and safety with which they are given, renders them an invaluable and convenient medicine and one that should be kept on hand by every Farmer and horse owner. For racing or trotting horses, they are worth the purse, as they strengthen the wind, give an elasticity and fleetness to the motion, and invigorate the whole frame. They have received the acknowledgments of thousands of the best and most celebrated farriers and horsemen, as a safe and superior medicine, and are universally approved and recommended by every one that uses them. For Milch Cows they are indispensible, as they remove all obstructions in the milk veins or passages, and cause an abundauce of fine rich milk. ☞ Prepared and sold wholesale and retail, by W. H. WYATT, Proprietor, 58 Chatham street, New York, and sold at retail by Druggists, Merchants and Saddlers generally, throughout the City and the United States. Arnica LINIMENT

RHEUMATISM!

SORE THROAT, BURNS, SCALDS, PAINS IN THE LIMBS, CHEST, SIDE, AND BACK, SPRAINS, BRUISES, CRAMPS, CHILBLAINS, ETC., ETC., ETC.

Price, Twenty-Five Cents.

This newly-invented oleaginous preparation of ARNICA has been, before offering it to the public, satisfactorily tested by several of our most respectable physicians, who were also made acquainted with the ingredients of which it is composed, and the peculiar process of compounding them. So confident is the inventor of its efficacy, that he has authorized every agent—in case it does not prove itself as represented—to take back any part of the bottle and return the full price of it.

The ARNICA LINIMENT will be found more penetrating, and to relieve the most acute pain in less time, than any other external remedy; at the same time it will not irritate the skin or cause it to smart, even if badly broken, as is not unfrequently the case with Burns and Scalds, but will remove the fire and cause the injured part to heal so rapidly as seldom to leave any scar.

Most, if not all, other liniments contain some irritating ingredient, such as pepper, spirits of hartshorn, oil of vitriol, muriatic acid, (spirits of salt,) combined with oil or alcohol, which cause the skin to smart very much, and the second application to be greatly dreaded, particularly by children; and the opinion is generally entertained that the more a liniment causes the flesh to burn and smart, the more good it will do. But this we are convinced is a very great mistake, and results in doing more injury than good: as, for instance, with SPRAINS, BRUISES, BURNS, SCALDS, CHILBLAINS, or any inflammation on or near the surface of the skin. All such exciting embrocations must naturally tend to increase the disease and prolong the cure.

The ARNICA LINIMENT requires neither true nor fictitious testimonials to recommend it, after one trial.

Took place among the ladies,
Of DRY GOODS AND GROCERIES,
Where the best place to trade is!

Mrs. A. S. and Mrs. B.,
Declared they knew where was good T.
Mrs. L. and O. wished to know,
If anywhere on Earth they'd go!
For, good T. was hard to get,
They neither had had good as yet.
B. S. and A., that is the Mrs.,
Knew also where to get their dresses,
And sugar, ribbons, and molasses,
Carpets, earthenware, looking-glasses,
Muslin, over-shoes, and gloves,
Blankets, salaratus, nutmegs, cloves,
Umberellas, tin pans, and toys,
Beautiful ones for girls or boys;
In fact, everything that's eat, drank or wore,
You'll find it at D. BULLMAN'S Store!

You'll find this just as 'tis said
If 'tis not, then you need not trade;
My thanks for the past to all are due,
While a happy New Year I wish to you.
DANIEL BULLMAN.

UNDERTAKING.

COFFINS AT REDUCED PRICES.

THE subscriber would call the attention of the public to his complete assortment of Coffins, where all the different sizes are finished and ready for use at a moments warning; they are made of Mahogony, Black Walnut and Cherry, and finished in every style, so that all can be suited, also a superior style of stained ones, which he offers remarkably low; he has hitherto defered giving his prices, but as he has understood that there is some misrepresentation in regard to his prices, he deems this sufficient excuse to the public for to say that for a large size Black Walnut Coffin including hearse in attendance he has $6, Mahogany $14, Cherry $6, and small ones accordingly, tight case made in coffin style $1,75. By leaving the order with him, the sexton of either of the churches will be seen if required, and all necessary arrangements made without any extra expense.

J. W. S. MARTIN, Principal.

HE has given up the idea of Cuba being annexed this fall, consequently he has made up his mind to stay a little longer at his old stand adjoining Webstor & Marsh's store, where he offers a new and splendid assortment of Cabinet Furniture, unequalled in this or any of the neighboring towns for stability or neatness of finish, patterns being all new, and we advise all who wish to be fitted out with such articles as he offers, to make their purchases of him instead of going out of the place, do not forget the minerel and you will get a bargain as sure as the whale swallowed Jonah. It cannot, perhaps, be better described than by stating that it is in a liquid form, and is adapted to internal and external use, holding instantaneous control over all Nervous Affections, Rheumatism, Croup, Inflammations, Tooth and Ear ache, Burns, Bruises, Sprains, Sores, &c. Empire Company, No. 53 Courtland st.

Deaf Persons

Can be made to hear in almost Every case! by proper treatment, but they should remember that the organization of the Ear is the most delicate structure of the body, (except the eye,) and hence is oftener injured than benefitted by syringes. The ACOUSTIC OIL sold by the Empire Company, 53 Courtland-st. is the surest and most successful article ever known for cures.

Chemical Cleansing Fluid.

Manufactured and sold by the Empire Company, is to every person who washes or has washing done, of very great and essentiul service. It obviates more than half the ordinary labor and also the wear to clothes. It sets the color fast to fading calicoes, and answers as well for cambrics muslins, and woolen goods.

Ornamental and Useful.

The Laundry Starch Polish is used to give that peculiar polish to collars, bosoms and linens, that nothing else can give; besides, it greatly, facilitates the ironing. The genuie has the stamp of the Empire Company, No. 53 Courtland-st.

Be sure about Vermifuges!

Some kill the CHILDREN! as well as the WORMS, and the only safe article that kills, the WORMS, and not the CHILDREN, is the one made and sold by the Empire Company, at 53 courtland-st.

The Empire Company.

Is the only one of the kind incorporated by the Legislature of this state as a Stock Company, and under such legislative enactments as to make the stock always at par, and the Company clear of liabilities. IMPORTANT TO HORSEMEN.

DR. PEARSON'S BARBER'S

EMBROCATION

IS decidedly the best preparation that can be used for the cure of sprains, bruises, cuts, galls, splint, curb, ringbone. spavin, stiffness of the joints, &c. It is an article which should be in the hands of every horseman, and no stable should be without a bottle of it. Price only 25 and 50 cents per bottle.

The following is the testimony of Mr Schench, proprietor of the "Somerset House," Somerville, N. J., a gentleman well known to horsemen in New Jersey.

DR. S. A. PEARSON: Dear Sir—I feel it a duty which I owe to you and the community at large, or rather that part of the community who possess, or in any way have charge of Horses, to say, that I have used your Embrocation,' for horses. It is decidedly the best preparation that I have ever used, or have any knowledge of for the various diseases which it is recommended.

I also know a great number of my friends who have used it—and they all say, that it is the best medicine for horses that they have ever used. I would confidently recommend every person who has a horse should keep a bottle of this valuable Embrocation in his stable.

Yours respectfully, AB'M. C. SCHENCK.

GREAT AMERICAN REMEDY.

Vegetable Dyspepsia Bitters.

TO THE PUBLIC,

DR HUTCHINGS would call the attention of all afflicted with dyspepsia, and the various disorders arising from a diseased stomach, to his remedy therefor. His DYSPEPSIA BITTERS will be found, on trial, to contain every property requisite to restore the disordered stomach to a healthy action; to reproduce the lost appetite of the patient, and do away with the periodical nervous headache and general debility consequent on this afflicting disease. Thousands have tested its efficacy, and thousands more are now under treatment; and not one solitary case of failure has yet been reported to him. This is consolatory, and urges him on in his efforts to relieve poor suffering humanity. He could fill a volume with certificates of those who have been permanently cured; but he conceives the testimony of a few well-known citizens will answer every purpose. The reader will find, on looking over the following testimonials, they are not "got up" for the occasion; but bona fide letters from gentlemen who can be seen at any time at their places of business.

The following Certificate is from M. B. Brady, the Celebrated Daguerreotypist:

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness, I was advised to take Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me. I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia. M. B. BRADY,

No. 205 Broadway, N. Y.

From Luther B. Wyman, Esq., late President of the New York Musical Society, now of Brooklyn.

The undersigned was afflcted with the Dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half during a greater portion of which time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself, until he was recommended to try Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, he very soon derived benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well.

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of Hutchings' Bitters for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine.

L, B. WYMAN, 38 Burling Slip.

New York, Sept. 3. 1849.

Dear Sir—My wife having been a great sufferer from dyspepsia, low spirits, palpitation of the heart, and having been cured as I believe by your Bitters, I most cheerfully attest their efficacy; her case was a bad one. In the space of four months she lost her strength and thirty-five pounds of flesh; was compelled to abandon her household affairs; there seemed but little probability of a cure until she began to take your bitters; in one week she was greatly relieved, and in three weeks she was perfectly well, and has since gained thirty pounds. You are at liberty to use this if it will at all further your laudable purpose of circulating this valuable remedy.

With respect, NATHAN SAYRE, No 61 Fourth-st

DOCT. PEARSON'S

PULMONIC EXPECTORANT,

FOR the cure of Coughs, Colds, Consumption of the Lungs, Influenza, Bronchitis, Asthma, Pain in the Breast, spitting of Blood, Whooping Cough, Croup or Hives, Hoarseness, Difficulty of Breathing, and every other disease of the Lung and the Breast.

This invaluable medicine should be in the possession of every family. In a country where the continual and sudden changes of the atmosphere, from heat to cold, and from cold to heat, render the inhabitants extremely liable to diseases of the Lungs and Breast, it is of the most vital importance that every one should be in possession of a remedy that shall at once effectually and permanently cut short those diseases, and restore the patient to health. The first symptom of cold or influenza should be immediately attacked and reduced by some remedy that has power over the disease. The medicine which has the most complete control over these diseases, and will most speedily restore the health of the patient is

PEARSON'S PULMONIC EXPECTORANT.

The following Card of three respectable phisicians sets forth the virtues of Dr. Pearson's pulmonic Expectorant. 'Having made use of Dr. Pearson's pulmonic Expectorant, we feel it a duty to recommend it as a safe and effectual cure for the various diseases for which it is intended. We are acquainted with many persons who have been cured of Cough, Bronchitis, pain in the breast and side, spitting blood, palpitation of the heart, and incipient consumption, by its use, and many of them after all other means had failed.'

A. Fearson, M. D. U. S Navy; S. K. Leedem, M. D. Champlain Co., Ohio; W. R. Cadwallader, M. D. U. S. Navy.

Dr. Pearson's Carminative Balsam

Is decidedly the most beneficial remedy for the cure of Dysentary, Cholera Morbus and Summer complaint, that is known to man. Parents will find it the best medicine that can be used for young children and infants. And every person who is travelling in the summer months should not be without a bottle of it in their possession; as it is an infalliable remedy against thr change produced in lhe system by drinking bad water.

We annex the following certificate of Mrs. A. M. Sanford, of New York, in reference to the Carminative Balsam. We might add a long list, but consider this sufficient.

This is to certify that I have used Dr. Pearson's Carminative Balsam, and confidently believe it to be the best medicine that can be used for the various diseases for which it is recommended, and recommend it to the ladies who are travelling in summer months, and to mothers for the fretting and crying of infants for which it is a certain cure.

MRS. A. M. SANFORD,
No. 160 East Broadway N. Y.

The proprietor of the above valuable medicines, as also of Dr. Pearson's Barber's Embrocation for Horses, being himself a Physician and graduate of one of the best medical schools in the U. S. and having had the advantage of years of experience in an extensive practice, is therefore from the practical knowledge which he has acquired, well qualified to prescribe those remedies, and restore the patient to sound health.

Prepared only by S. A. Pearon M. D., and for sale wholesale and retail, at No. 106 North 4th street Philadelphia. Also, by J. R. Swallow, General Agent, No. 123 Fulton-st. N. Y,, by whom all orders for the above medicines will be promptly attended to.

For sale in Plainfield by E. Kirkpatrick, and M. F. Cushing, sold also by Druggists and country storekeepers generally throughout the United States Canadas and West Indies.

Test of Affection.

Mr. Archibald Stanhope—a groggy sentimentalist, residing in Buckley street, Philadelphia—conceiving the harrowing suspicion that his wife was not as passionately fond of him as a lady of good taste should be; and to put the matter to a fair trial, he hit on a little stratagem, which he put in practice the other day with the result hereafter to be detailed.

He took a suit of clothes and composed an effigy of himself, by stuffing the garment with a quantity of straw, which had lately been discharged from an old bed.—Having suspended the figure to a rafter in the garret by means of a piece of clothes line, he enscouced himself behind a pile of rubbish in the same garret, to watch the effect.

After awhile, his little daughter came up after a jumping rope, and caught a glimpse of the suspended figure. She ran down the stairs screaming, "Oh, mother, daddy's hung himself."

"Now for it," thought Archibald, in ambuscade;—"we shall have a touching scene presently.'

'Hung himself?' he heard Mrs. Stanhope repeat, as she walked leisurely up stairs; 'he hasn't got spunk enough for such a thing, or he would have done it long ago. Well, I do believe he has done it, however"—she continued, as she came in view of Archibald's straw representation. Molly, (to the litle girl,) I think he ought to be cut down. You had better go into the kitchen and get a knife, my dear; but don't go down too fast, or you might fall and hurt yourself. Stay;—I forgot;—there's no knife in the kitchen sharp enough. You can go around to Mr. Holmes, the shoemaker, in Sixth street he's only two squares off, and ask him to lend us his paring knife; tell him to whet it a little before he sends it. And Molly, while you are in the neighborhood, you can call at your aunt Sukey's and ask how the baby is. And Molly, you can stop at the grocery store as you come back, and get me a pound of seven cent sugar. 'Poor Archy,' sighed Mrs. S when her daughter had departed, 'I hope we'll get him cut down before the vital spark is distinct—for these buryings is very troublesome and cost money. He wants to put an end to himself, too; and I think I ought to let him have his own way for once in his life; he used to say that I was always a crossing of him. I wish he hadn't spoiled that new clothes line though—an old rope might have answered his purpose.'

Here a voice, which sounded like that of the supposed suicide, broke in on Mrs. Stanhope's soliloquy, with—'You confounded old Jezebel, I'll be the death of you.'

Mrs. S. thinking this must of coarse be a ghostly exclamation, uttered a wild scream, and attempted to escape down the narrow stair case. Archibald, starting from his place of concealment, gave chase. Mrs, S. stumbled midway on the flight of steps—and Mr. S. having reached her and made a grasp at her dishevelled hair as it streamed backward, the amiable partners were precipitated to the bottom together.

Both were badly bruised, and the cries of the lady raised the neighborhood. Archibald was arrested for making a disturbance, and practising on the tender sensibilities of his wife. He was recognised in $500, and jockularly proposed his suspended effigy as his surety—but 'straw bail,' as he found to his sorrow, is not acceptable uuder the administration of mayor Jones.—Pennyslvanian.

Medicine will never remedy bad habits. It is utterly futile to think of gluttony intemperance and every excess, and keeping the body in health by medicine. Indulgence of the appetite and indiscriminate dosing and drugin, have ruined the health and destroyed the life of more persons than famine, sword and pestilence. If you will take advice you will become regular in your habits, eat and drink wholesome things, sleep on matrasses, and retire and rise very regularly. Make a free use of water to purify the skin, when sick, take counsel of the best physician you know and follow nature.

THE OYSTER WAR.—The Cambridge (Md.) Democrat says that Capt. Painter and others of the schooner Layfayette, of Philadelphia, arrested for dredging for oysters were fined $50 and costs, and and the boat released, Capt. Pedrick, of the schooner Sally Ann, of Philidelphia, was fined $5 and each of his crew $3 and his boat forfeited to the State.

The following singular announcement of a marriage appeared in a late Baltimore Argus:

'Married, on the 12th ult. by the Rev. E. E. Allen, Mr. Charles. W. W. Armstrong, all of this city.' Hope he had a good time.

An Unfashionable Sermon.

In these times of cant, and craft, and divisions and contentions, while the world is filled with speculations and fanciful schemes, and on the right and on the left, behind and before, ignorant or designing man are crying, 'Lo, here! and Lo there is Christ! it is consolation to the sincere, honest-hearted to knw there is a sure guide to preserve from error, an infaliable criterion by which we may know the truth from falsehood, the pure religion from the spurious.

Christ sums up the fruits of pure religion in the following brief but perspicuous manner;—'I was a stranger and ye took me in, naked and ye clothed me' &c.; 'inasmuch as ye did it unto the least of these ye did it unto me.' Here we have the infaliable guide—the path pointed out so plain that 'the wayfaring man though a fool, may not err.' By this as well as by common sense we are taught that all religion which seek their own aggrandisement are false, while that which is pure seeks to elevate humanity—shelters the stranger, treats him as a brother, clothes the naked, feeds the hungry, educates the ignorant, visits the sick and the imprsoned—in short, does good wherever it goes.

Therefore ye little, halting, doubling, feeble ones, who have been lost in the fogs of cant and craft, and driven hither and thither by contending winds and currents—all ye who pant for the right way but know not where to find it, doubt and halt no more. True religion consists in love for humanity, to do good to all, as far as in your power, is to be a christian. Therefore check this panting after mystery cease looking into the clouds or to man for supernatural aid or instruction, and pursue the path of life scattering blessings as you go, on those who are in need, 'Do unto others as ye would have others do unto you.' As far as lies in your power administer to the temporal wants of the needy, and forget not to forgive the erring, pity and instruct the ignorant, strengthen the weak, encourage the timid and do good to all.—Pleasure Boat.

The Hardest Kick Yet.

There is an attorney practicing in our courts, who has attained a great notoriety among numerous other thiugs, for bullying witnesses on the opposing sides of cases when he is concerned. As it would not be polite to give his full name right out in the crowd, we will merely call him 'Wayke,' for short.

There was a horse case—a very common case upon our magistrates' dockets—trying before Esquire Snelbanker, one day, in which Wayke happened to be engaged.

A slow and easy witness had been called to the stand by the plaintiff, who in a plain straight-forward manner made the other side of the case look rather blue. The plaintiff's attorney being through Wayke commenced a regular cross examination, which was cut short in the following manner.

'Well, what do you know about a horse—you a horse doctor?' said the barbarian in his peculiar contemptuous and overbearing manner.

'No, I don't pretend to be a horse doctor, but I know a good deal of the nature of the beast.'

'That means to say that you know a horse from a jackass when you see them,' said Wayke in the same style—looking knowingly at the court, and glancing triumphantly around the crowd of spectators, with a telegraphic expression, which said, 'now I've got him on the hip.'

The intended victim, gazing intently at his legal tormentor, drawled out—

'Oh! ye-as—jest so—I'd never take you for a horse!'

The Supreme Court of the U. S. could not have preserved its gravity through the scene that followed. The lick back produced a regular stampede, and the bushel of suspender buttons that stuck to the ceiling above, brought a regular shower of plaster upon the heads below. Every body was convinced that whatever the attorney might be, the witness was a hoss!—Cin. Dispatch.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 27.

A colored man named Richard Riley fell dead last night in a colored church in Montgomery-st. while engaged in an exciting meeting. He was on his knees praying for a change of heart when he was stricken a corpse. The Coroner's Jury pronounced it an apoplexy produced by religious excitement. It caused the greatest consternation among the audience, who in their ignorance pronoumced it a judgment, and the consequence was every sinner in the place was on his knees instanter.

Mr. Moore has obtained a verdict against the Auburn and Syracuse Railroad of $2000 for being scalded when a collision took place on that road in 1848.

KEEP OUT OF DEBT.—Poverty is a bitter draught, yet may, and sometimes with advantage be gulped down. Though the drinker make wry faces, there may, after all, be wholesome goodness in the cup.—But debt, however courteously it be offered, is the cup of a siren, and the wine, spiced and delicious though it be, an eating poison. The man out of debt, though with a flaw in his jerkin, a crack in his shoeleather, a hole in his hat, is still the son of liberty, free as the singing lark above him: but the debtor, though clothed in the utmost bravery, what is he but a serf out upon a holiday—a slave to be reclaimed at any instant by his owner, the creditor? My son, if poor, se wine in the running spring; let thy mouth water at a last week's roll; think a thread-bare coat the "only wear;" and acknowledge a white-washed garret the fittest housing place for a gentlemen: do this, and flee debt. So shall thy heart be at peace, ann the sheriff be confounded.—Douglas Gerrold.

A Horse's Opinion of a Plank Road.

The N. Carolinian tells the following anecdote of an old farmer in that region, who had tried the plank road:—He was at first much opposed to the plank road, and thought it would be a waste of money to build it. But he came to Fayette with his wagon and produce, and drove on it some miles. When he got back to Chatham, our merchant friend asked him if he had seen the plank road?

'Yes,' said he, 'I have seen it.'

'Well, did you drive on it?'

'Yes.'

'Well, don't yo think you can carry four times as much weight on it, with your four-horse team, as on a common road?'

'Oh, yes,' says he, 'it is first-rate; and it's a fact, that when the wagon got to the end of the planks and the heavy dirt road, every horse stopped and looked round.

"What is your Name?"

——Three wild mudlarks, were recently captured by a young divine and brought into Sunday School in New York

'What is your name, my boy?'

'Dan,' replied the untaught one, who was first interrogated.

'Oh, no, your name is Daniel, say it now.'

'Daniel.'

'Yes: well, Daniel take that seat.'

'And what is your name?' was interrogated of number two.

'Sam,' ejaculated the urchin.

'Oh dear, no, it is Samuel; sit down, Samuel, and let us hear what your name is, my bringht little fellow?' said he, turning to the third.

With a grin of self stisfaction, and a shake of the head that would have done honor to the Lord Burleigh, the young catechumen, boldly replied: 'Jim-ual, be Jabers!'—N. Y. Spirit of the Times.

Cure for Burns and Scalds.

We take the following account of hospital treatment of burns, scalds &c., from a highly interesting paper in the last number of the American Journal of the Medical Science, being the 'Notes of Hospital Practice at Bellevue,' by D. M. Resse, M. D., resident physician:

Among the numerous cases brought into the surgical wards of charity hospitals, everywhere, may be reconed the injuries received by burns and scalds, which, when extensive, are too often fatal In the treatment of these injuries we have had great experience and uniform success, when the patients were brought in soon after the injury. No fatal case of recent burn or scald has occurred in the hospital, although several have been extensive and severe. The universal treatment of all such cases is to cover the parts with wheaten flour, thrown over the wounds by a dredging-box, which, if thoroughly done so as to exclude the air, and prevent its temperature from reaching the suffering tissues, will afford instant relief from pain, and allay all that nervous irritation which is the chief source of immediate danger in all cases of extensive burns. We have had opportunity to test this practice in terrible burns occasioned by the explosion of gunpowder, in scalds from the bursting of steam-boilers, in examples of persons while drunk, falling into the fire, and others in which the clothes were burnt off the body by the combustion of spirit gas, &c. In these cases, and in some of them scarcely any portion of the body had escaped—and, in a few of them, the integuments were literally baked, so that extensive and, deep-seated suppuration and sloughing were inevitable, and had afterwards to be endured—the external application of the flour was in the first instance our only remedy, and this was continued for one or more days, while the acute effects of the injury demanded it. The superficial portions of the burn or scald would often heal under this application alone; and the solutions of continuity, more or less deep, which remained open and discharging were then dressed with lime water and oil, by means of a feather, to which creosote was added if the granulations were slow, or the sloughs tardy in becoming loose. Under this dressings the most formidable burns have been healed; and even when the face has been envolved, there has been scarcely any considerable deformity. In one of our patients, the face being horrible buined by an accidental explosion of powder, the grains of powder having been imbedded in the skin, very great apprehensions were indulged that the discoloration thus produced would permanently disfigure and deform the countenance. But after the persisted application of the flour for three successive days, and until the tumefaction of the face and head had subsided, it was found that, with a few applications of the lime water dressing, the cicitrization was complete, and even the discoloration was removed.

If this simple remedy were resorted to in the severe scalds sometimes occurring from explosions of steamboat boilers, &c., there can be little doubt that the fatility of such burns would be very rare; while the popular and mischievous methods of applying raw cotton, oil, molasses, salt, alcohol, spirits of turpentine, sugar of lead water, ice, &c., to extensive and deep burns, are all of them injurous and often destructive.

So perfect were the Egyptians in the manufacture of perfumes, that some of their ancient ointment, preserved in an alabaster vase in the museum in Alnwick still retains a very powerful odor, though it must be between 2,000 and 3,000 years old.

GREAT HYDRAULIC PRESS.—The greatest Bramah press that ever was constructed was made and used for the elevation of the tubular bridge over the Menal Straits. The cylinder of it is eleven inches thick, its pistions is 20 inches in diameter. Its weight is 16 tons, and the whole press 40 tons. Its power of lift is equal to 30,000 men, and it can spout water 20,000 feet high. Water is called 'weak,' but science has chosen it to overcome the mighty, for by two streams of water the mighty tubes, weighing as much as some of our finest ships, (1,300 tons), were lifted 100 feet high, and placed firm on their foundations.—Scientific American.

THE COLD IN THE ARTIC REGIONS.—In the inside of one of Capt. Parry's ships, when on his voyage to the artic Regions, 600, galls. of ice were formed on its sides in the course of four weeks, just from the breath of the men, and the steam that was evaporated in cooking. What a region to expend so much money and valuable lives upon, in the search of a North West passage.

New-Jersey Legislation.

Governments are instituted among men, says the Declaration of Independence, for their protection; for the security of life and liberty; to enable men to pursue that course in life which each may conceive best adapted to secure their happiness, without any to molest or make them afraid; each individual guaranteeing as security for his own protection the security and protection of all. This being the sole object for which governments are established, it follows as a matter of course, that whenever any government fails to accomplish this object, it is the RIGHT as it is the DUTY of the people to alter or abolish it; as from their CONSENT only can the powers of government be derived-

These principles, which our forefathers established as the basis of our government, are the inherent right of ALL men; as all men acknowledge save tyrants and slaves, and should be kept constantly in view by the people; as it is by a conssant recurrence to first principles that we best preserve our rights; as it is by a costant accumulation of laws, of repeals and reenactments, covering up these principles, that the people are imperceptably cheated out of their liberties.

It does appear to us, when we look back at the past, at the present, and from this anticipate our future prospects, and compare them with the more liberal and enlightened policy of many of our sister States, that if there ever was a people doomed to be oppressed by unequal, illiberal, unjust and tyranical laws, it is the people of New Jersey. For years the people of New Jersey have labored under this species of tyranny, although they have repeatedly demanded more liberal and enlightened laws; laws guaranteeing alike to all equal protection and equal privileges; but as yet have demanded them in vain.

The members of our last legislature particularly, were elected with special reference to this object, and with fervent hope and full confidence by the people that they would effect a reform. They were chosen without reference to their party politics, that they might do away with SPECIAL PRIVILEGES by the enactment of GENERAL LAWS. But alas! what has been the result? After the loudest protestations of their abhorence of monopolies and special privileges, and repeated asseverations in favor of reform, out of a list of 132 acts passed, we have only one or two of a general character! The great majority of them are of a special character, operating unequally on the rights of the people, and enacted, many of them, on purpose to enable those who hold, to retain power; and this to in defiance of the peoples repeated remonstrance and in contempt of their rights. All laws of a general character, save one or two, were given the go-by. Thus fared the bills for a general Railroad Law, Equalization of Taxes, a general Free School law, Household Exemption, and many others; and in their places they retain the Property Qualification for jurors, township and county officers; and others of a similar character; while they have passed among others the following acts; which are a fair sample of the whole; thus have they again defeated the objects for which they were elected. We commend their labors to the especial attention of every man who is in favor of equal laws.

3 Repealing part of an act to authorize inhabitants of Plainfield to vote by ballot.

33 Incorporating Evergreen Cemetry,

34 For the better sovernment of Amicable Meadow Company,

35 Supplement to act authorizing School District No 1 in Plainfield, Essex, to raise money.

62 To prevent swine from running at large in Lamberton.

63 Incorporaiing Mount Holly Summer House association.

101 Repealing the act authorizing the township of Ocean to vote by ballot.

102 Incorporating Passaic Silk Manufacturing Company.

103 To protect fish in Swartwout Pond, Sussex.

110 To authorize inhabitants of Hopewell, in Mercer, to vote by ballot at town meetings.

112 To prevent Swine from running at large in the village of Carpenters Landing, Bridgeport, Sweedsboro' and Woodbury, in Gloucester; Columbus and Moorestown, in Burlin gton; Van Vorst in Hudson: Freehold, Turkey and New Egypt, in Monmouth; Gloucester city in Camden; Woodstown, in Salem; and Morristown, in Morris.

115 To incorporate the Mercer Mutual Pursuing and Detecting Society.

120 To repeal act authorizing voting by ballot in township of Chester, in Morris; Hope and Knowlton in Warren.

121 Authorizing voting by ballot in townships of Pompton, Passaic; and townships of Franklin, Harrison, and Woolwich in Gloucester, at town meetings.

This is a fair sample of of New Jeriey legislation; and if any member of the legislature by whose vote these acts were passed, will read publicly the list of acts passed, with the bills rejected, with the yeas and nays by which such bills were rejected, and such acts passed, before the people assembled at our next annual town meeting in this Village, we will give to such person for such service the—we would have named a sum, but men that are ashamed to have the laws published in the newspapers, we are convinced could not be induced to read them before the people.

If voting by ballot is just and equal, and best secures to the poor as well as to the rich the inalienable and inestimable privilege of a freeman, uncontroled by the frowns or threats of any, why not make it a general law? Is it because ucontroled by sinister influences he would soon elect men who would give him equnl rights? If it is proper that swine be prevented running at large, when liable to do damage, in one township, why not in all? If it is necessary and beneficial that one school district should raise money to support schools why not pass a general law that all may enjoy the privilege who choose to do so? Is it because ignorance is more easily oppressed than knowledge; and because its general diffusion among the people would do away with oppression by electing other men who would enable ALL to partake of its blessings and enjoyments, and thus diminish misery and crime? Is it even so, that for fear men would appreciate their rights knowing them, and would spurn with contempt those who would thus keep them in ignorance, —valuing the rich man's land as of more consequence than the poor man's soul,—that they dare not trust him with knowledge; and when he acquires it under all these disadvantages that they dare not permit him to use it?

If it is necessary and proper that one man or company of men should have a charter to enable them to build railroads, canals, bridges or turnpikes; or to carry on banking or baking; to cultivate flowers; to bury the dead; to manufacture silk or sausages, patent medicines or pumpkin seeds; to pursue and detect small rogues who dare rob only a hen-roost, or to enable an aristocratic special-chartered bank president to esape from justice; why not give to all the same privileges under general laws? Is it because special legislation is necessary, and the only legislation that will enable those who make politics their trade, to live at the expense of those who toil? Aye, indeed! this it is which upholds spec privileges, which enables the few to live in splendor and idleness at the expense and degradation of the many.

Think of this ye working men; ye farmers, tailors, hatters, shoemakers, blacksmiths, carpenters, masons, painters, saddlers, and so on through the whole round of those who live by their daily toil; do ye ask for special priviliges? No; you would despise and contemn any privileges which are not the equal and imprescrpitible right of all. None but tyrants ask special priviliges; none but slaves submit to them. But for special priviliges, they who now enjoy power would be the cringing slaves which they now endeavor to make others, being too proud and too lazy to work, they despise those who do so, while they enjoy through special privileges the fruits of their labors.

A HEN TROT.—The New Jersey legislature specially adjourned week before last, in order "that the members might attend a hen trot." What a "hen trot" is, we have not been able to ascertain. It appears to be a Jersey diversion altogether. That it is a very important affair, may be supposed, from the fact that the representatives of a powerful state determined unanimously to attend it.

Answer.—Because every body shold be provided with one of his own and not borrow his neighbor's.

Parental Responsibility.

There is not, in the list of human duties, one more sacredly binding than that of a parent towards the helpless beings to whom he has given existence. It is a responsibility voluntarily incurred; and one which, once incurred, no man has a RIGHT to lay down, until he who has given life has done what in him lies to give happiness also.

A parent OWES it to his child to furnish to it all the means of physical, moral and mental cultivation and improvement.—The parent who witholds these, neglects an imperative duty. The parent who suffers his child to acquire one bad habit which he might prevent, one evil disposition which he might control, or one vicious practice from which he might have secured him, neglects a crying duty; trifles with a helpless being's, rights, and entails vice and misery where he is bound to bestow (to the utmost extent of his ability) virtue and happiness.

A child's claim on a parent is in virtue of its existence. It is a debt deliberately incurred, and which an upright man will pay to the last farthing. He who pays it not, is a bankrupt in virtue. It being the duty of parents to bestow what intelligence and happiness they can on their children, it follows, that they have no right to suffer selfish affection to weigh against their offspring's real interests. They have to ask, not what is most pleasant to themselves, but what is most beneficial for their children. They have to regard their children not as playthings to be petted, but as human beings to be trained to virtue and thus led to happiness.

The parental responsibility is not the less sacred, because it is often shamefully violated. No violation of a single human right can modify or annul it. It remains, violated indeed, but inalienable; neglected, but never destroyed.

Every upright parent virtually puts this question to himself; "How can I best promote my children's happiness? not my own comfort, not my own selfishness impulses—but my children's virtue and happiners." Does he conceive that happiness to be best promoted by keeping his children under the paternal roof? he keeps them there. Does he believe that it is better promoted by sending them elsewhere? he sends them elsewhere—if his means permit; and, if his means permit not, and if he is able, he labors late and early to obtain the necessary means. How many a fond parent has struggled through a life of toil, to save sufficient at least for a few years "finishing education" for his children, and if these children have often returned from some fashionable boarding school to neglect or despise those who stinted themselves to support them there —the error was in the aristocracy of the school, not in the self-denial of the parents.

Does a parent conceive that children can be no where so effectually trained to be at once useful and enlightened, as in State schools, where instruction in the practical arts shall mingle with an initiation into the abstract science? Is he convinced, that in republican schools, whence all inequality is banished, and where the son of the banker and the son of poverty meet upon a level, are trained without partiality and made to read the page of science without respect of persons—is he convinced, that in such state institutions alone can his child grow up, an equal among equals, and an enlightened citizen among his equally enlightened fellows—he bends his efforts to obtain such a system. In the political meeting—at the ballot box, he thinks of it When he reads the daily legislative records of bank-chartering and corporation-granting, and looks in vain, in the long list, for something more worthy of republican representatives—he thinks of it. Thus they who never thought of politics before, are warmest politicians now. The measure agitated is practical, national. It comes home to the feeling of every disinterested parent, and every honest citizen who knows what human nature might be, and who sees what it is.

The rich parent pays hundreds a year to locate his child in some privileged college or academy. The poor parent keeps his child at home to labor. He can neither support him at college, nor pay the college fees. It is not, that the poor parent is more selfish than the rich. It is not, that the one will part with his offspring for the sake of its permanent welfare, while the other will not. It is, that the one CAN and the other CANNOT.

Let all have the POSSIBILITY of doing so. Let the poor man, equally with his wealthy fellow citizen, have the POWER to choose between an education of a day-school and of hard labor at home, or an education in National Institutions where he may have the privilege of placing his child, of watching, year by year, its progress towards intelligence, practical knowledge and happiness—let him know, that there no distinction of class is felt, no pride nurtured, no servility fostered, no TWO-CLASS notions instilled—let him know all this, and feel that his child will return, after a youth spent among his equals, to the paternal roof, and shall have heard of no nobility but virtue, and no plebianism but vice—let but the people know all this, and have the power to choose for their children—and we shall see whether it is the rich only who can sacrifice feeling to principle, and the happiness of the child to the egotism of the parent.

We want no COMPULSION, and our opponents know it. But we want, for all, the POWER OF CHOOSING. And that, too, our opponents know. Nor are they slow to see its consequences. They perceive, clearly enough, that such a privelege WOULD BE EAGERLY EMBRACED BY THE BODY OF THE PEOPLE; and that the gradual, peaceful result, in one generation, would be, the establishment of PRACTICAL EQUALITY throughout the entire Union. This is the real secret of their opposition, and I hope the people have discovered it to be so.

JOS. B. TOOMBS.

"GADDIS WHIGGERY"—HOW IT WORKS.—An incident occurred during the present Term of the Mercer Court which forcibly illustrates the absurdity of the Property Qualificotion law of this State, which the Gaddis Whig Legislature of the late session refused to repeal. The case is this;—a juror was chalenged, and the objection of his not being a property holder was urged. Upon inquiry it appeared that the man had lately purchased property, but the deed had not yet been executed to him. The Judge informed him that he was disqualified, but that if he had the deed for the property, though he had not paid a single farthing upon it he would have had the right to sit as Juror in the case! And this is "democratic Whig" doctrine! 'Gaddis Whiggery" classes the white men of New Jersey into the free, and the partially free citizens. The landowner, though he be an ignorant dolt, and in debt five times the amount of his property, is placed high up in the scale of civil and political priviliege above the head of the intelligent and landlesss mechanic or laboring man! This odious law, which brands honest poverty as a crime, and virtually disfranchises a large class of worthy citizers, the "Democratic Whig" party of New Jersey have from year to year refused to repeal. Is there a white landless Jerseyman, with dog enough in his crouching nature, to follow such masters any further?—Trentonian.

TEMPERANCE MEETING.—On Tuesday evening, the Methodist Church of this town was crowded by a respectable audience, to hear a lecture on temperance by Rev. Mr. Rogers The clergyman of the town also attended, and the enthusiasm was worthy of the palmest days of the cause. The discourse was masterly eloquent, and delivered in the Rev. gentleman's forcible and happy manner. At the conclusion of the lecture, a movement was made to revive the cause in our town by signing the pledge publicly—a large number affixed their signatures: and a committee was appointed to draft a Constitution for the government of a new society—both sexes to be allowed membership.—Salem Sunbeam.

☞ In the State of New Hampshire the Democrats have elected their State Officers, and a majority in the Legislature by a larger vote than at the last election. The Free Soil vote is not as large.

☞ The Newark daily Advertiser is down bitterly upon the conduct of the late 'Gaddis Whig' Legislature. The Jersey City Telegraph is also down upon the same beautiful body. The State printer is the only Editor that has yet volunteered a word in their defence. The days of Gaddis Whiggery are numbered. —Trentonian.

☞ What sublime statesmen and nursery teachers the world has had! the following are specimens:

'We are at peace with all the world and seek to maintain our cherished relations with the rest of mankind.'

[Z. Taylor.

"Three little boys a sliding went,
All on a summer day;
The ice grew thin, they ALL fell in,
The REST, they ran away.'

We don't wonder that this is a great country, with such illustrious characters in all departments of society, from the nursery of babies in private dwellings to the nurseries of vice in the capital.

EQUARIAN

CONDITION POWDERS.

The most Extraordinary medicine in the World for Horses.

It is cheaper, and warranted to possess more active, safe and beneficial properties, than any other for the cure of distemper, coughs, slobbering, preventing founders, fevers, hide bound, swelled legs, humors of the skin, mange, surfeit, obstructed urine, loss of appetite, indigestion, general debility, rough coat, and all impurities of the system, and blood, and want of condition.

The ease and safety with which they are given, renders them an invaluable and convenient medicine and one that should be kept on hand by every Farmer and horse owner. For racing or trotting horses, they are worth the purse, as they strengthen the wind, give an elasticity and fleetness to the motion, and invigorate the whole frame. They have received the acknowledgments of thousands of the best and most celebrated farriers and horsemen, as a safe and superior medicine, and are universally approved and recommended by every one that uses them. For Milch Cows they are indispensible, as they remove all obstructions in the milk veins or passages, and cause an abundance of fine rich milk. ☞ Prepared and sold wholesale and retail, by W. H. WYATT, Proprietor, 58 Chatham-street, New York, and sold at retail by Druggists, Merchants and Saddlers generally, throughout the City and the United States. Price per Package of 1 doz Powders 50 cents, one-half dozen packages $2 50, one doz. $4.

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

A curious dialogue, 'tis said,
Took place among the ladies,
Of DRY GOODS AND GROCERIES,
Where the best place to trade is!

Mrs. A. S. and Mrs. B.,
Declared they knew where was good T.
Mrs. L. and O. wished to know,
If anywhere on Earth they'd go!
For, good T. was hard to get,
They neither had had good as yet.
B. S. and A., that is the Mrs.,
Knew also where to get their dresses,
And sugar, ribbons, and molasses,
Carpets, earthenware, looking-glasses,
Muslin, over-shoes, and gloves,
Blankets, salaratus, nutmegs, cloves,
Umberellas, tin pans, and toys,
Beautiful ones for girls or boys;
In fact, everything that's eat, drank or wore,
You'l find it at D. BULLMAN'S Store!

You'l find this just as 'tis said
If 'tis not, then you need not trade;
My thanks for the past to all are due,
While a happy New Year I wish to you.

DANIEL BULLMAN.

Arnica LINIMENT

A CERTAIN CURE FOR

RHEUMATISM!

SORE THROAT, BURNS, SCALDS, PAINS IN THE LIMBS, CHEST, SIDE, AND BACK, SPRAINS, BRUISES, CRAMPS, CHILBLAINS, ETC., ETC., ETC.

Price, Twenty-Five Cents.

This newly-invented oleaginous preparation of ARNICA has been, before offering it to the public, satisfactorily tested by several of our most respectable physicians, who were also made acquainted with the ingredients of which it is composed, and the peculiar process of compounding them. So confident is the inventor of its efficacy, that he has authorized every agent—in case it does not prove itself as represented—to take back any part of the bottle and return the full price of it.

The ARNICA LINIMENT will be found more penetrating, and to relieve the most acute pain in less time, than any other external remedy; at the same time it will not irritate the skin or cause it to smart, even if badly broken, as is not unfrequently the case with Burns and Scalds, but will remove the fire and cause the injured part to heal so rapidly as seldom to leave any scar.

Most, if not all, other liniments contain some irritating ingredient, such as pepper, spirits of hartshorn, oil of vitriol, muriatic acid, (spirits of salt,) combined with oil or alcohol, which cause the skin to smart very much, and the second application to be greatly dreaded, particularly by children; and the opinion is generally entertained that the more a liniment causes the flesh to burn and smart, the more good it will do. But this we are convinced is a very great mistake, and results in doing more injury than good: as, for instance, with SPRAINS, BRUISES, BURNS, SCALDS, CHILBLAINS, or any inflammation on or near the surface of the skin. All such exciting embrocations must naturally tend to increase the disease and prolong the cure.

The ARNICA LINIMENT requires neither true nor fictitious testimonials to recommend it, after one trial.

IMPORTANT TO HORSEMEN.

DR. PEARSON'S BARBER'S

EMBROCATION

IS decidedly the best preparation that can be used for the cure of sprains, bruises, cuts, galls, splint, curb, ringbone. spavin, stiffness of the joints, &c. It is an article which should be in the hands of every horseman, and no stable should be without a bottle of it. Price only 25 and 50 cents per bottle.

The following is the testimony of Mr Schench, proprietor of the "Somerset House," Somerville, N. J.. a gentleman well known to horsemen in New Jersey.

DR, S. A. PEARSON: Dear Sir—I feel it a duty which I owe to you and the community at large, or rather that part of the community who possess, or in any way have charge of Horses, to say, that I have used your Embrocation,' for horses. It is decidedly the best preparation that I have ever used, or have any knowledge of for the various diseases which it is recommended.

I also know a great number of my friends who have used it—and they all say, that it is the best medicine for horses that they have ever used. I would confidently recommend every person who has a horse should keep a bottle of this valuable Embrocation in his stable.

Yours respectfully, AB'M. C. SCHENCK.

UNDERTAKING.

COFFINS AT REDUCED PRICES.

THE subscriber would call the attention of the public to his complete assortment of Coffins, where all the different sizes are finished and ready for use at a moments warning; they are made of Mahogony, Black Walnut and Cherry, and finished in every style, so that all can be suited, also a superior style of stained ones, which he offers remarkably low; he has hitherto defered giving his prices, but as he has understood that there is some misrepresentation in regard to his prices, he deems this sufficient excuse to the public for to say that for a large size Black Walnut Coffin including hearse in attendance he has $6, Mahogany $14, Cherry $6, and small ones accordingly, tight case made in coffin style $1,75. By leaving the order with him, the sexton of either of the churches will be seen if required, and all necessary arrangements made without any extra expense.

J. W. S. MARTIN, Principal.

HE has given up the idea of Cuba being annexed this fall, consequently he has made up his mind to stay a little longer at his old stand adjoining Webstor & Marsh's store, where he offers a new and splendid assortment of Cabinet Furniture, unequalled in this or any of the neighboring towns for stability or neatness of finish, patterns being all new, and we advise all who wish to be fitted out with such articles as he offers, to make their purchases of him instead of going out of the place, do not forget the minerel and you will get a bargain as sure as the whale swallowed Jonah. GREAT AMERICAN REMEDY.

Vegetable Dyspepsia Bitters.

TO THE PUBLIC,

DR HUTCHINGS would call the attention of all afflicted with dyspepsia, and the various disorders arising from a diseased stomach, to his remedy therefor. His DYSPEPSIA BITTERS will be found, on trial, to contain every property requisite to restore the disordered stomach to a healthy action; to reproduce the lost appetite of the patient, and do away with the periodical nervous headache and general debility consequent on this afflicting disease. Thousands have tested its efficacy, and thousands more are now under treatment; and not one solitary case of failure has yet been reported to him. This is consolatory, and urges him on in his efforts to relieve poor suffering humanity. He could fill a volume with certificates of those who have been permanently cured; but he conceives the testimony of a few well-known citizens will answer every purpose. The reader will find, on looking over the following testimonials, they are not "got up" for the occasion; but bona fide letters from gentlemen who can be seen at any time at their places of business.

The following Certificate is from M. B. Brady, the Celebrated Daguerreotypist:

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness, I was advised to take Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me. I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia. M. B. BRADY,

No. 205 Broadway, N. Y.

From Luther B. Wyman, Esq., late President of the New York Musical Society, now of Brooklyn.

The undersigned was afflicted with the Dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half during a greater portion of which time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself, until he was recommended to try Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, he very soon derived benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well.

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of Hutchings' Bitters for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine.

L. B. WYMAN, 38 Burling Slip.

New York, Sept. 3. 1849.

Dear Sir—My wife having been a great sufferer from dyspepsia, low spirits, palpitation of the heart, and having been cured as I believe by your Bitters, I most cheerfully attest their efficacy; her case was a bad one. In the space of four months she lost her strength and thirty-five pounds of flesh; was compelled to abandon her household affairs; there seemed but little probability of a cure until she began to take your bitters; in one week she was greatly relieved, and in three weeks she was perfectly well, and has since gained thirty pounds. You are at liberty to use this if it will at all further your laudable purpose of circulating this valuable remedy.

With respect, NATHAN SAYRE, No 61 Fourth-st

DOCT. PEARSON'S

PULMONIC EXPECTORANT,

FOR the cure of Coughs, Colds, Consumption of the Lungs, Influenza, Bronchitis, Asthma, Pain in the Breast, spitting of Blood, Whooping Cough, Croup or Hives, Hoarseness, Difficulty of Breathing, and every other disease of the Lung and the Breast.

This invaluable medicine should be in the possession of every family. In a country where the continual and sudden changes of the atmosphere, from heat to cold, and from cold to heat, render the inhabitants extremely liable to diseases of the Lungs and Breast, it is of the most vital importance that every one should be in possession of a remedy that shall at once effectually and permanently cut short those diseases, and restore the patient to health. The first symptom of cold or influenza should be immediately attacked and reduced by some remedy that has power over the disease. The medicine which has the most complete control over these diseases, and will most speedily restore the health of the patient is

PEARSON'S PULMONIC EXPECTORANT.

The following Card of three respectable phisicians sets forth the virtues of Dr. Pearson's pulmonic Expectorant. 'Having made use of Dr. Pearson's pulmonic Expectorant, we feel it a duty to recommend it as a safe and effectnal cure for the various diseases for which it is intended. We are acquainted with many persons who have been cured of Cough, Bronchitis, pain in the breast and side, spitting blood, palpitation of the heart, and incipient consumption, by its use, and many of them after all other means had failed.'

A. Fearson, M. D. U. S Navy; S. K. Leedem, M. D. Champlain Co., Ohio; W. R. Cadwallader, M. D. U. S. Navy.

Dr. Pearson's Carminative Balsam

Is decidedly the most beneficial remedy for the cure of Dysentary, Cholera Morbus and Summer complaint, that is known to man. Parents will find it the best medicine that can be used for young children and infants. And every person who is travelling in the summer months should not be without a bottle of it in their possession; as it is an infalliable remedy against thr change produced in lhe system by drinking bad water.

We annex the following certificate of Mrs. A. M. Sanford, of New York, in reference to the Carminative Balsam. We might add a long list, but consider this sufficient.

This is to certify that I have used Dr. Pearson's Carminative Balsam, and confidently believe it to be the best medicine that can be used for the various diseases for which it is recommended, and recommend it to the ladies who are travelling in summer months, and to mothers for the fretting and crying of infants for which it is a certain cure.

MRS. A. M. SANFORD,
No. 160 East Broadway N. Y.

The proprietor of the above valuable medicines, as also of Dr. Pearson's Barber's Embrocation for Horses, being himself a Physician and graduate of one of the best medical schools in the U. S. and having had the advantage of years of experience in an extensive practice, is therefore from the practical knowledge which he has acquired, well qualified to prescribe those remedies, and restore the patient to sound health.

Prepared only by S. A. Pearon M. D., and for sale wholesale and retail, at No. 106 North 4th street Philadelphia. Also, by J. R. Swallow, General Agent, No. 123 Fulton-st. N. Y,, by whom all orders for the above medicines will be promptly attended to.

To a Child.

Go forth, sweet child, and cull the flowers,
That deck, with pride, the blooming spring,
While gladness revels in thy bowes,
Triumphant on its joyous wing,

Thy gentle bosom's peaceful calm
Yet scarcely knows a clouded ray,
Thy mother's kiss like healing balm,
Dispels each little grief away.

Thy happy moments sweetly flow,
On wings of bliss like those above,
As pure as heaven's own spotlesss snow,
Made up of innocence and love.

'Tis in thy simple, artless smile,
Which innocence doth sweetly leaven,
I read a heart that knows no guile,
I see the attributes of heaven.

This world thou see'st a paradise,
Where joys on joys successive grow,
But riper years will ope thine eyes,
To read the tales of care and woe.

Go forth, sweet child, in rosy glee,
Without a care without a pain,—
I'll doat on thy simplicity,
And dream myself a child again. D. D. M.

Was it Providence?

Take for example, a young girl, bred delicately in town, shut up in a nursery in her childhood in a boarding house through her youth, never accustomed to either air or exercise, two things that the law of God makes essential to health. She marries; her strength is not adequate to the demands upon it. Her beauty fades away She languishes through her hard offices of giving birth to children, suckling and watching over them, and dies early. "What a strange Providence, that a mother should be taken in the midst of life, from her children?" Was it Providence? No. Providence had assigned her three score years and ten; a term long enough to rear her children, and see her children's children, but she did not obey the laws on which life depends, and of course, she lost it.

A father, too, was cut off in the midst of his days. He is a useful and distinguished citizen, and eminent in his profession. A general buzz rises on every side, of "What a striking Providence!" This man has been in the habit of studying half the night, of passing his days in his office and the courts, of eating luxurious dinners and drinking various wines. He has every day violated the laws on which health depends. Did Providence cut him off? The evil never ends here. The diseases of the father are often transmitted; and a feeble mother rarely leaves behind her vigorous children.

It has been customary in some of our cities, for young ladies to walk in thin shoes, and delicate stockings in mid-winter. A healthy, blooming young girl, thus dressed in violation of Heaven'slaws, pays the penalty: a checked circulation, cold, fever and death. "What a sad Providence!" exclaimed her friends. Was it Providence, or her own folly? A beautiful young bride goes night after night to parties made in honor of her marriage. She has a slightly sore throat, perhaps, and the weather is inclement; but she must wear her neck and arms bare; for who ever saw a bride in a close evening dress? She is consequently seized with an inflammation of the lungs, and the grave receives her before her bridal days are over. "What a Providence!" exclaims the world. "Cut off in the midst of happiness and hope!" Alas! did she not cut the thread of her life herself?

A girl in the country, exposed to our changeful climate, gets a new bonnet, instead of getting a flannel garment. A rheumatism is the consequence. Should the girl sit down tranquilly with the idea that Providence has sent the rheumatism upon her, or should she charge it to her vanity, and avoid the folly in future!

Look, my young friends, at the mass of diseases that are incurred by intemperance in eating or in drinking, or in study, or in business; also being caused often by neglect of exercise, cleanliness, pure air; by indiscreet dressing, tight lacing etc.: and all is quietly imputed to Providence! Is there not impiety as well as ignorance in this? Were the physical laws strictly observed from generation to generation there would be an end to the frightful diseases that cut life short, and of the long list of maladies that make life a torment or a trial. It is those who best understand the physical system, that this wonderful machine, the body, this "goodly temper," would gradually decay, and men would die as if falling asleep.—Miss Sedgwick.

Hints on Honesty and Truth.

What is there or what can there be of more value to a young man than honesty and truth?—All the treasures in the universe cannot compare in value, with these virtues. Happy is he who can say, 'I never uttered a falsehood, never performed a dishonest act.'

Wicked as the world is, such a character must and will command respect. Even those who envy him and who, through envy would reduce him to their own level, because they are not willing to perform the requisite labor to attain to the same exalted eminence cannot but respect him secretly, even while laboring to draw him down to their level.

A young man with such virtues would be richer in rags, than he would be with all the treasures of earth in his coffers, but wanting in honesty and truth.

We can safely confide in his word, and trust him without fear. Though he may commence the world in friendless poverty and at first be compelled to struggle hard for a bare subsistence, and the tide of adversity may threaten his ruin, if he maintains his integrity, he will eventually triumph in the end, and call forth friends that endure.

After writing thus far this morning I came to a pause; something is wanting said I to myself; I want a practical illustration of the truth of what I have written to impress these remarks on the minds of the young to whom I am writing. At that very moment a young man with a frank, open honest countenance entered my office and inquired if my name was Jeremiah Hacker, and when I answered in the affirmative, 'Do you know me?' he inquired I told him I did not remember that I had ever seen him before;—whereupon he told me his name, and then I recognized in his looks, a boy that I had not seen for some fixe years. I had several times stopped at his father's, when travelling to proclaim what I apprehended to be required of me, and had ever remembered the family with feelings of sincere respect; having in my short acquaintance with them, been led to regard them with uncommon interest, on occount of their good will and kindness to each other. The kindness of this young man—who was then some sixteen years of age—to the other members of the family had claimed my attention; he was a boy of honesty and truth, and though I had not seen him for five or six years until this morning his countenance and language satisfied me that he was honest and truthful still. He had been from home some time in another state, and is now on his way to his home: some rogue has pilfered his pocket yesterday, in a crowd at or near the depot in Boston, leaving him without money. He had purchased a ticket for this city, before losing his money, and arrived here expecting to remain till he could write to his friends and obtain funds to proceed. He did not ask for any assistance, but merely stated to me his loss; and knowing him to be honest and truthful, it came into my heart to loan him the sum needed, as I could spare it a few days for which he appeared very thankful and proceeded on his way.

Thus, my young friends, you see how honesty and truth came along at the very time I had stopped my pen to look for a practical illustration, I thought there could be no harm in mentioning it.

Thus it will be all through life with those who love honesty and truth. It will make friends as will prove true, who cannot be influenced against them by the love of gold, and will thus open a way for them to prosperity and peace.—Portland Pleasure Boat.

A FOX STORY.—Not long since in the town of Newbury, Vt., a fox hunter with two hounds, got upon the track of the poor fox, which was pursued until the close of the day. Fox found matters were drawing to a desperate crisis with him, and just at this time the whistle of the railroad train was heard, when he struck of in the direction, and approached the track just as the train came up, and leaped it immediately preceeding the engine, and the two hounds close in pursuit. Eeach hound was caught by the wheels of the engine—the foremost lost about a foot of his tail, and the one in the rear was cut off just behind his hips—and off went the Fox 'alone in his glory.' However improbable this may appear, we are assured by a Dirtecor of the road that it is a fact.

Sermon Against Vanity.

I am going to give you a part of a negro sermon which was preached by a good man in Jamaica. Hundreds of the people hear this minister; and some of them have been made wiser and better by what they have heard. The words are spelt just as he spoke them; but they were sounded in such a strange tones as made the people attend to what he said, and feel it too. He thus began:

'Fust Timoty, six chapter, seventeen verse. 'Charge dem dat be rich in dis world, dat dem be not highminded.''

Then he stopped, and looked about upon the congregation; and after this, in a complaining tone, as if sombody was finding fault with him he said, 'What for him say, 'charge dem dat be rich, dad dem be no high-minded?' We no rich. We poor nigger. De buckra (white man) him rich. Nigger make de shugar; buckra take de money; what for him say charge dem dat be rich?'

Then changing his voice, he thus answered the supposed objector: 'You no rich, eh? Make I shew you, rich. You free nigger now. So you say, 'me no like round jacket again.' Den you go to one 'tore (store.) You put him on. You look yourself in glass. You like him. Den you go to one toder 'tore. You buy one black trowser. You no want wash trowser. 'Wash trowsers,' you say, 'him good for slave nigger. De free nigger him must hab black trowser, like buckra. Den you go to one todder 'tore. You buy one smart shirt. Now you no like check shirt. Him good for de work nigger but free nigger, must have smart shirt. Den you go to one toder 'tore You buy one black hat. 'De straw hat,' you say, 'no good for free nigger.' Den you go to one todder 'tore. You buy one boot. De slave nigger, him go barefoot. De free nigger him most hab boots like buckra. Den you wait till Sunday come! You put 'em on. You 'tay till de people all come. Den sit quite quiet. No make no noise. De minister him come. Him sit down. De people den wait for de minister to begin. Him begin. Den you come! You walk up de aisle. Creak—creak—creak! What for you make dat noise, eh? Creak—creak—creak! Dont day say, 'See my new tail coat! See my new black hat! See my fine shirt!—See my good trowsers! Hear my new boots! Dont me one fine gentleman? Dont me rich? Dont dat pride? 'Charge dem dat be rich, dat dem be not high-minded.''

A TOUCH OF SOUTH CAR'LINA.—The St. Louis Organ tells that a fine, likely, fashionable-dressed slave, who had been through the wars with General Worth, was sent to the Poliece office by his master, for being drunk. According to custom Lieutenant, Cozzens asked his name upon which the dusky exquisite, with all the airs of a fop of upper-tendom, handed out his wallet, and, with a courteous bow presented his card.

'Well,' exclaimed the Lieutenant with intense astonishment, 'you are some, and no mistake, for a darkey.'

The first-family African smiled.

'It's the way we always do, sir, in South Car'lina,'

The officer handed over his hat.

Cure for Colds.

Three cents' worth of liquorice, three cents' worth of gum arabic; put them in a quart of warm water, simmer them till thoroughly dissolved; then add three cents' worth of paragoric, and a like quantity of antimonial wine. Let it cool, and sip whenever the cough is troublesome It is pleasant infalliable, cheap and good. Its cost is fifteen cents.—Scientific American.

Grafting Grape Vines.

Mr. Curtis stated at one of the agricultural meetings in Albany, that he had been successful in grafting the Isabella on the wild grape. He takes about fifteen to eighteen inches of the root of the wild vine and inserts in it a clift or 'split' grafting. The vine is planted so that the connection of the stock and scion will be just below the surface of the ground. The operation is performed in the spring before the vines come into leaf.—Scientific American.

ALL IN DANGER IS NOT LOST.—An awkward man in attempting to carve a goose, dropped it on the floor. 'There now,' exclaimed his wife, 'we have lost our diner.'

'Oh, no, my dear,' answered he, it is safe, for I have got my foot on it.'

Courage consists not in hazarding without fears but in being resolutely minded in a just cause.

There is this paradox in pride, it makes some ridiculous, but prevents others from becoming so.

Medical Uuse of Salt.

In many cases of disordered stomach, a tea-spoonful of salt is a certain cure. In the violent internal aching, termed cholic, add a tea-spoonful of salt to a pint of cold water—drink it, and go to bed; it is one of the speediest remedies known. The same will revive a person who seems almost dead from receiving a very heavy fall, &c.

In an appoplectic fit, no time should be lost in pouring down salt and water, if sufficient sensibility remain to allow of swallowing; if not, the head must be sponged with cold water until the sense return, when salt will completely restore the patient from the lethargy.

In a fit, the feet should be placed in warm water, with mustard added; and the legs briskly rubbed, all bandages removed from the neck and a cool apartment procured if possible. In many cases of severe bleeding at the lungs, and when other remedies fail, Dr. Rush found two teaspoonfuls of salt completely stayed the blood.

In cases of bite from a mad dog, wash the part with strong brine for an hour, then bind on some salt with a rag.

In toothache, warm salt and water held to the part, and renewed two or three times, will relieve in most cases. If the gums be affected, wash the mouth with brine; if the teeth be covered with tartar, wash them twice a day with salt and water

In swelled neck, wash the part with brine and drink it also twice a day until cured.

Salt will expel worms, if used in the food in a moderate degree, and aids digestion; but salt meat is injurous if used much.

INCONSISTENCY.—It is strange, says the Albany Knickerbocker, how iconsistent men are. We saw a fellow who should have known better walloping his son yesterday, for "chawing terbakker," when he himself used the article and had done so for the last twenty years. Children will follow the example of their parent, and to punish them for so doing is very wrong. People will correct their children when they find them swearing, or using indecent language, yet they themselves know that the little blackguards learned the bad practice from profane and improper words issuing from the lips of their fathers daily and hourly on the most trivail occasions. To bring up a child decently and respectably he must have the good and virtuous example of his parents before him.

There are forty grains of salt in one thousand grains of water in the Gulf of Suez, and upwards of thirty-nine grains in all the specimens down to Bombay. The water of the Atlantic, off the Canaries, was found to contain forty-four grains in every thousand. Dr. Buist has constructed a simple apparatus for acertaining the temperature of the ocean at all depths which also may be used for bringing up water.

Some forty years ago when a man's respectability depended much on his taking a newspaper, a certain shrewd old fellow, was enjoying the luxury of perusing his paper (although he labored under the great disadvantage of not knowing a single letter of the alphabet,) when a more knowing neighbor of his happening in—perhaps to borrow his paper—observed to him that he had his paper wrong end up. The old gentleman, drawing himself up in all the pompostiy of affronted dignity, exclaimed—I would have you know, sir, that I take a paper and pay for it. I have a right to read it which end up I please.

'I thought the wise men came from the east,' said a western man to a yankee. 'And the further you go west the more you'l think so I rather guess,' he replied.

PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Thursday, March 28, 1850.

☞ Mr Albert D. Drake is our authorised agent to receive subscriptions and advertisments.

Plainfield Lyceum.

The members of the Plainfield Lyceum will meet in Mr. W. W. Davison's school house on Tuesday evening next at 1-4 of 7 o'clock. The question for discussiou will be:

☞ The Ladies and the public generally are respectfully invited to attend.

E. M. DUNN, Sec'y.

☞ With the next number of our paper we shall issue some three hundred extra copies, with a view to extend our circulation; although we have received a more liberal patronage from our fellow citizens at this date than we ever anticipated, we shall endeavor to merit a more extended one—our steadily increasing advertising patronage also deserves our best efforts to extend it.—Those therefore who send in their advertisements in time for our next issue will enable us to bestow on them this additional benefit. These copies of course will fall into hands which have not heretofore taken our paper. We trust by extra exertions on our part in printing a neat and interesting paper, to advance the interests of the community in which we live, and also of our advertising patrons generally, as thereby we shall best secure our own.

All our citizens are interested in having a good paper published in our Village, we should like to supply every family with it. Those who are able should subscribe immediately, those who are not, if any such there be, we will gladly furnish gratis upon application at the office; no family under a republican government should be without at least one newspaper.

Messrs Editors:—As the time of our annual election is rapidly approaching, and the important question whether our Free School shall be sustained or not is again to be decided, it is the duty of every citizen to give the subject that careful consideration its importance demands. It is not our intention here to urge the claims of popular education: the time when argument was necessary to prove and enforce these claims has long since gone by—In every enlightened country at least no truth is better established or more universally acknowledged than, that upon the intellectual and moral elevation of the masses depend mainly if not solely the prosperity and happiness of a people.

The question then and the only question is HOW, and WHEN shall the masses be educated? Certainly not in our Colleges and higher Institutions of learning. They have neither the time or the means to devote to the expensive and protracted course of study pursued in those institutions, and if they had, we doubt much whether a collegiate or academical education would be desirable—something more practical, more solid and substantial is needed by the great body of the people. Nor can they be instructed in our private schools. A large portion of the community find their rescources inadequate even to the comfortable maintenance of their families, without being burdened with the additional expense of educating their children, while there are a few abundently able but too penurious to avail themselves of the private school as a means of instruction. To the Free Schools then of our land must we look for the best and only means of successfully educating a whole people, from them if established upon the right foundation and judiciously conducted may we expect to flow forth a purer morality, a more vigorous and enlightened public sentiment. Shall we then give up the work, we have so nobly commenced in our village, of placing within the reach of every individual whether rich or poor, black or white the means of acquiring a thorough practical education? Shall it be said that Plainfield was first among the townships of New Jersey to adopt the Free School system and the first to abandon it? Never—must be the response of every citizen who cherishes the best interests of the community to which he belongs. Who would not rather see planted in our midst the seeds of virtue, intelligence, and social order, instead of vice, ignorance and disorder—Let us see to it then that a liberal appropriation be made at the coming election, for the support of our school the ensuing year, that officers be chosen to look after its interests, who know their duty and dare do it. x

Congress.

The week's talk was opened yesterday in the Houses by speeches from Mr. Thurston of Oregon and Mr. Breck of Kentucky. The former defended California against the charge of having formed her State Constitution under the influence of the Federal Government. Mr. Breck's was a first-rate Southern speech.

The senate was occupied by a passage between Mr. Webster and Mr. Hale, after which a bill was reported for the admission of California, and the organization of the territories of Utah, and New-Mexico, Utah we undertand to be the country between New-Mexico and California; its appelation is derived from the Utah Indians, a fierce and warlike tribe living on the Great Basin and about the head waters of the Rio Grande; they have already given their appellation to Utah Lake, about a hundred miles south of the Salt Lake. The proposed territory we presume includes the Mormon community of Deseret. We protest against mixing up the admission of California with the Territorial Question. Let California come by herself—she is able to stand alone—and then take up the organization of the Territories afterward.—[Tribune.

☞ Our paper will be found to contain many new advertisments, and we bespeak for them an attentive perusal. Plainfield Lodge No 44. I. O. O. F. New Jersey.

At a regular meeting of Plainfield Lodge No. 44. held at the Lodge Room, in Plainfield, on Monday Evening, March 25th 1850, the following Preamble and Resolutions were unanimously adopted;

WHEREAS, it has pleased Him who controls the destinies of nations and holds at his sovereign disposal the life of every individual, to take from us our worthy and well beloved brother, George S. Coon, a V. G. of this Lodge; and whereas, by this afflicting dispensation of Divine Providence, we are again prevented from extending to him the hand of fellowship, or of hearing his voice in our councils, and are forever debarred from holding communion with him on earth, be it therefore

Resolved, That in the death of our beloved brother, our Order has lost one of its most useful members, society a good citizen, and a large circle of relatives and acquaintences a dutiful son, an affectionate brother, and firm friend.

Resolved, That we offer our heartfelt sympathies to the bereaved family and relatives of the deceased in this their great affliction, trusting they will mourn, not as those without hope, but believing their loss his gain—comforting themselves with the assurance that he has gone to that "bourne from which no traveller returns" with an unsullied name, and a character unblemished.

Resolved, That as testimony of our respect for our departed brother, our Lodge shall be clothed in mourning, and the members wear the customary badge the remainder of the term.

Resolved, That a copy of the foregoing preamble and resolutions be presented to the family of the deceased and be spread upon the minutes of the Lodge.

A SUPPLEMENT to an act entitled 'An Act to authorized tne inhabitants of school district Number One, in the township of Plainfield, in the county of Essex, to raise money to build school houses,' approved March ninth, eighteen hundred and forty-eight.

1. BE IT ENACTED by the Senate and General Assembly of the state of New Jersey, That Robert Anderson, William P. Williamson, Elston Marsh, William Dunn and Zachariah Webster, the Trustees of School District Number One, in the township of Plainfield, elected on the first Monday in April, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and forty-nine, pursuant to the provisions of the act entitled 'An act to establish public schools,' and their successors in office, shall be and hereby are constituted a body politic, and incorporated by the name of 'The Trustees of School District Number One, in the Township of Plainfield.'

2. And be it enacted, That the real estate heretofore purchased by the Trustees of said School District Number One, in their official capacity, pursuant to the provisions contained in the said second section of said act, and upon which they have erected a public school house, be and is hereby vested in the corporation hereby created, as fully, to all intents and purposes, as if the Trustees of said district had been incorporated by the act to which this is a supplement, and the conveyance had been made to them in their corporate name.

3. And be it enacted, That said corporation may purchase and hold such real estate (including the lands purchased as aforesaid) as may be necessary for the purposes of public school houses, not exceeding in the whole five acres of land; and may sell exchange or mortgage the lands by this act vested in the corporation, and such other lands as they may purchase, as may be most for the benefit of said School District Number One, and to apply the money arising therefrom to the purposes mentioned in the act to which this is a supplement.

4. And be it enacted, That the provisions contained in the act to which this is a supplement, relating to the official acts and duties of said Trustees are extended to the Trustees hereby incorporated and their successors in the same manner and to the same effect as if they had been incorporated by the said act.

5. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 20, 1850.

☞ The improvements recently made by Mr. Jessee Vail, and Mr. Daniel Bullman, to their property, adds as much to the comforts as well as to the appearance of our Village as to the convenience and beauty of their own property. These gentlemen certainly deserve the thanks and encouragement of our citizens for the example they have set; they are both enterprising, honorable, and accommodating merchants and will doubtless secure as they deserve, a liberal share of the public patronage. Mr. Vail has not yet completed his establishment, when he does we bespeak for him a liberal trade. Mr. Bullman's establishment being finished, he will be found as ever, ready to accommodate with a penny worth o' matches or a splendid new dress—all will meet with prompt and polite attention. While on this subject we would also inform the public that Mr. Birt has laid out his property in Lots, with a view to accommodate the increasing demand for desirable locations for private dwellings or business purposes—as there have been a large number of applications for dwellings, which their present crowded state has been unable to accommodate, we hope soon to see this property all occupied. A more desirable situation than is here offered, in consideration with the largely increasing business of the Village cannot be found in New Jersey. Most places can be set forth on a map or on canvass, equal to and beyond their merits, not so Plainfield; no artist can adequately portray any idea of its exceeding lovliness; it needs a residence of a season to properly appreciate it. Plainfield for salubrity of climate,—produced by the invigorating breezes of pure mountain air, pure soft water, and entire absance from these causes of epidemic and malignant disases, and for its general healthfulness is unsurpassed by any other place in our out of the United States. See advertisments of these gentlemen in another column.

☞ Avoid borrowing and lending, especially newspapers; he who is without one of his own is an enemy to liberty

Dr. Webster's Trial.

The trial has been more painfully interesting this sixth day than any of the previous ones. The Pecuniary transactions of Prof. Webster have been raked open in a way to show there was no truth in him; that he could not have had the money which he says he paid Dr. Parkman; that he asserted he had already settled with Dr. Parkman before the time he afterward pretends to have done so; that he could not have had the money at the time he said he paid Dr. Parkman is a fact which sent a shudder through the Court room. His council will have to work a miracle to do it away. The details of the arrest by officer Clapp, and the interview with Rev. Francis Parkman, the brother of the deceased, as related by that clergyman, produced a deep impression. The tameness of the cross-examination was very alarming. Dr. Webster has seemed sinking as the confidence in his favor has ebbed away; still we have not heard the other side. The industry and patience of the Court seems inexhaustible. Judge Shaw seems as fresh as his own big natural wig. He drives through his eight and a half hours a day without losing a moment—very little time is occupied by discussing points of the law of evidence. The Government has got a round score of witnesses yet to come but of course the bulk of the testimony on that side is in—what comes must be chiefly corroborative.—When handcuffs were put upon the prisoner this evening, and he staggered out of the Court with his keeper, many a sad eye rested on him, but I noticed no one speaking to him. I am yet to read or hear of a man who ever rose from such a damning load of proof.

THE SMITH FAMILY.

Everybody is acquainted with the Smith family. From Maine to Georgia there is not a village or neighborhood but has one or more citizens who glory in this name. If you should take a day's journey into the country in any direction, and get lost in some out-of-the-way place, ten to one but the first man you could find would be Mr. Smith—Mr. John Smith. If you enter a court of law, in all probability they will be engaged with the case of Smith vs Jones. Do you ask whose funeral procession is approaching? It is Mr. Smiths. Pick up the first newspaper you can find to-morrow morning, and if you cast your eye to the head 'Married," you will read, "I this town, by the Rev. Mr. Smith, John Smith and Arabella Wilhelmina Johnson." If you stop a tailor's shop-boy and enquire whose new coat he is taking home, he replies, "It is Mr. Smith's."

I have been acquainted with many of the Smith family since I first began to like bread and butter When I was "knee-high to a grasshopper" John Smith was one of my constant playmates. Many a time have we been flogged—(not half as hard as we deserved, though)—for soiling our trowsers in constructing works of internal improvement; i. e. making mud dams in the street gutters. Ah, those were happy days when John and I were young! There were no notes falling due in a week to distract or disturb—no false friends to rob us in our unguarded momants—no loved ones with hearts breaking from hope deferred, or struggling against the approaches of death in a frightful form. I will not pretend that we did not have our moments of uneasiness—but they were as very light and thin clouds which obscure the sun's rays for a moment only. Occasionally there would be no West Indian vessel discharging at the wharves, ane therefore we could not alwaps "lick 'lasses." We again and again and again were seized with unpleasant sensations at the stomach in consequence of gormandizing on damaged pineapples, and often "threw them up" as suddenly as a dog would drop a hot potato. One of the most unpleasant occurrences took place when we were about ten years old. We had been swimming at the upper part of the city (New York) and on coming out of the water, judge of our consternation when we could no-where find our clothes! Long and anxious was our search, but without avail. Of course, when we reached home—which we did after procuring a couple of pair of pants at a house near the river—we received but little supper and a small birch, well applied.

It is many years since John Smith and myself took our last game of marbles, and sucked molasses on the wharves through bright wheat straws. But as long as memory is faithful to its office, I shall never forget the many happy hours we enjoyed together when life's bright morning sun shone forth without cloud or shadow! Since that time the Battle of Life has, to me, been one of active effort, and although sometimes nearly overcome by enemies, I have ever contended for the right. Mr. Smith—the John Smith of my early youth—occupies an honerable position in society, and richly deserves the reward due to a well-spent life.

These thoughts are suggested by a note I received a day or two since from Mr. Smith in which—among other matters—he gives an account of a fellow who assumed the honorable name of John Smith, and urged my friend to lend him ten pence to drink his (my friend's) health! Now, many men would have kicked the loafer from their door—but not so my friend. He told the fellow that he ought to be ashamed to disgrace the name of Smith by such conduct; and, after giving him some good advice, sent him into his kitchen to get some dinner, (which the fellow really needed,) and he left the Smith mansion thanking my friend for his kindness and advice.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.—The terms of all the justices of the Peace in this State expire on the 1st of May next. Their successors must therefore be elected at the township elections this Spring. Each township or ward, which had 2,000 inhabitants or less, at the last census is entitled to elect two justices; if the township had 4,000 inhabitants it may elect four justces; and if more than 4,000, it may elect five Justices.

In the lower Counties and several townships of Sussex and Warren, the town meetings have already been held.

In the Counties north and east of Monmouth and Burlington, the election will take place on the second Monday in April.

At the Circuit Court, recently held at Albany, N. Y., Mrs. Tarbell obtained a verdict of $1000 against the Albany and Troy McAdam Turnpike Co for an accident resulting in the death of her husband. Owing to a heavy embankment of snow and ice, running across the road, the stage in which her husband was a passenger was overset. At the same Court James Collins obtained a verdict of $11,000 against the Mohawk and Hudson R. R. Company, for injuries received in collusion of two trains of cars, in one of which he was a passenger.—His foot was crushed and he was made a cripple for life.

DIED.

In this place, on Wednesday March 20th of Consumption, Mr. GEORGE S. COON, eldest son of David Coon, aged 24 years.

A very promising young man, of an upriget, moral and christian character, with whom we have had the happiness of intimate acquaintance since his childhood.

At the residence of her parents, Factoryville, New York, of Consumption, Julia H. Ball daughter of Rev. Henry Ball aged 25 years.

Calm on the bosom of thy God,
Fair spirit rest thee now;
E'en while this earth was thine abode,
His seal was on thy brow.

Dust, to its narrow house beneath,
Soul, to its home on high—
Who that hath seen thy look in death,
But counts it gain to die?

WE FULLY AGREE

WITH others in the opinion that advertising of Cheap Groceries and Provisions is a Humbug—and we are becoming more satisfied of it every day—particularly when we see many articles advertised at cost prices, and in some instances less than cost, we shall therefore suspect there may be two qualities of the same article, and will request the public to call and examine our Stock, and prices, and judge for themselves—we also wish it distinctly understood, that we are bound to follow the downward course of prices—always keeping in view the quality of the Goods, and shall also endeavor by all honorable means to sustain our reputation for selling Goods at fair prices. Arnica LINIMENT

A CERTAIN CURE FOR

RHEUMATISM!

SORE THROAT, BURNS, SCALDS, PAINS IN THE LIMBS, CHEST, SIDE, AND BACK, SPRAINS, BRUISES, CRAMPS, CHILBLAINS, ETC., ETC., ETC.

Price, Twenty-Five Cents.

This newly-invented oleaginous preparation of ARNICA has been, before offering it to the public, satisfactorily tested by several of our most respectable physicians, who were also made acquainted with the ingredients of which it is composed, and the peculiar process of compounding them. So confident is the inventor of its efficacy, that he has authorized every agent—in case it does not prove itself as represented—to take back any part of the bottle and return the full price of it.

The ARNICA LINIMENT will be found more penetrating, and to relieve the most acute pain in less time, than any other external remedy; at the same time it will not irritate the skin or cause it to smart, even if badly broken, as is not unfrequently the case with Burns and Scalds, but will remove the fire and cause the injured part to heal so rapidly as seldom to leave any scar.

Most, if not all, other liniments contain some irritating ingredient, such as pepper, spirits of hartshorn, oil of vitriol, muriatic acid, (spirits of salt,) combined with oil or alcohol, which cause the skin to smart very much, and the second application to be greatly dreaded, particularly by children; and the opinion is generally entertained that the more a liniment causes the flesh to burn and smart, the more good it will do. But this we are convinced is a very great mistake, and results in doing more injury than good: as, for instance, with SPRAINS, BRUISES, BURNS, SCALDS, CHILBLAINS, or any inflammation on or near the surface of the skin. All such exciting embrocations must naturally tend to increase the disease and prolong the cure.

The ARNICA LINIMENT requires neither true nor fictitious testimonials to recommend it, after one trial.

Prepared only by J. R. BURDSALL.

IMPORTANT TO HORSEMEN.

DR. PEARSON'S BARBER'S

EMBROCATION

IS decidedly the best preparation that can be used for the cure of sprains, bruises, cuts, galls, splint, curb, ringbone. spavin, stiffness of the joints, &c. It is an article which should be in the hands of every horseman, and no stable should be without a bottle of it. Price only 25 and 50 cents per bottle.

The following is the testimony of Mr Schench, proprietor of the "Somerset House," Somerville, N. J., a gentleman well known to horsemen in New Jersey.

DR, S. A. PEARSON: Dear Sir—I feel it a duty which I owe to you and the community at large, or rather that part of the community who possess, or in any way have charge of Horses, to say, that I have used your Embrocation,' for horses. It is decidedly the best preparation that I have ever used, or have any knowledge of for the various diseases which it is recommended.

I also know a great number of my friends who have used it—and they all say, that it is the best medicine for horses that they have ever used. I would confidently recommend every person who has a horse should keep a bottle of this valuable Embrocation in his stable.

Yours respectfully, AB'M. C. SCHENCK.

Prepared only by S. A. PEARSON, M. D. and for sale wholesale and retail at No. 106 North 4th street, Philadelphia; also by J. R. Swallow, General agent 123 Fulton-st. New York.

For sale in Plainfield by E. Kirkpatrick, and M. F. Cushing, also by Druggists and country store keepers generally, throughout the United States, Canadas ane West Indies. [77.

UNDERTAKING.

COFFINS AT REDUCED PRICES.

THE subscriber would call the attention of the public to his complete assortment of Coffins, where all the different sizes are finished and ready for use at a moments warning; they are made of Mahogony, Black Walnut and Cherry, and finished in every style, so that all can be suited, also a superior style of stained ones, which he offers remarkably low; he has hitherto defered giving his prices, but as he has understood that there is some misrepresentation in regard to his prices, he deems this sufficient excuse to the public for to say that for a large size Black Walnut Coffin including hearse in attendance he has $6, Mahogany $14, Cherry $6, and small ones accordingly, tight case made in coffin style $1,75. By leaving the order with him, the sexton of either of the churches will be seen if required, and all necessary arrangements made without any extra expense.

J. W. S. MARTIN, Principal.

HE has given up the idea of Cuba being annexed this fall, consequently he has made up his mind to stay a little longer at his old stand adjoining Webstor & Marsh's store, where he offers a new and splendid assortment of Cabinet Furniture, unequalled in this or any of the neighboring towns for stability or neatness of finish, patterns being all new, and we advise all who wish to be fitted out with such articles as he offers, to make their purchases of him instead of going out of the place, do not forget the minerel and you will get a bargain as sure as the whale swallowed Jonah. GREAT AMERICAN REMEDY.

Vegetable Dyspepsia Bitters.

TO THE PUBLIC,

DR HUTCHINGS would call the attention of all afflicted with dyspepsia, and the various disorders arising from a diseased stomach, to his remedy therefor. His DYSPEPSIA BITTERS will be found, on trial, to contain every property requisite to restore the disordered stomach to a healthy action; to reproduce the lost appetite of the patient, and do away with the periodical nervous headache and general debility consequent on this afflicting disease. Thousands have tested its efficacy, and thousands more are now under treatment; and not one solitary case of failure has yet been reported to him. This is consolatory, and urges him on in his efforts to relieve poor suffering humanity. He could fill a volume with certificates of those who have been permanently cured; but he conceives the testimony of a few well-known citizens will answer every purpose. The reader will find, on looking over the following testimonials, they are not "got up" for the occasion; but bona fide letters from gentlemen who can be seen at any time at their places of business.

The following Certificate is from M. B. Brady, the Celebrated Daguerreotypist:

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness, I was advised to take Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me. I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia. M. B. BRADY,

No. 205 Broadway, N. Y.

From Luther B. Wyman, Esq., late President of the New York Musical Society, now of Brooklyn.

The undersigned was afflicted with the Dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half during a greater portion of which time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself, until he was recommended to try Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, he very soon derived benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well.

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of Hutchings' Bitters for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine.

L. B. WYMAN, 38 Burling Slip.

New York, Sept. 3. 1849.

Dear Sir—My wife having been a great sufferer from dyspepsia, low spirits, palpitation of the heart, and having been cured as I believe by your Bitters, I most cheerfully attest their efficacy; her case was a bad one. In the space of four months she lost her strength and thirty-five pounds of flesh; was compelled to abandon her household affairs; there seemed but little probability of a cure until she began to take your bitters; in one week she was greatly relieved, and in three weeks she was perfectly well, and has since gained thirty pounds. You are at liberty to use this if it will at all further your laudable purpose of circulating this valuable remedy.

With respect, NATHAN SAYRE, No 61 Fourth-st

DOCT. PEARSON'S

PULMONIC EXPECTORANT,

FOR the cure of Coughs, Colds, Consumption of the Lungs, Influenza, Bronchitis, Asthma, Pain in the Breast, spitting of Blood, Whooping Cough, Croup or Hives, Hoarseness, Difficulty of Breathing, and every other disease of the Lung and the Breast.

This invaluable medicine should be in the possession of every family. In a country where the continual and sudden changes of the atmosphere, from heat to cold, and from cold to heat, render the inhabitants extremely liable to diseases of the Lungs and Breast, it is of the most vital importance that every one should be in possession of a remedy that shall at once effectually and permanently cut short those diseases, and restore the patient to health. The first symptom of cold or influenza should be immediately attacked and reduced by some remedy that has power over the disease. The medicine which has the most complete control over these diseases, and will most speedily restore the health of the patient is

PEARSON'S PULMONIC EXPECTORANT.

The following Card of three respectable phisicians sets forth the virtues of Dr. Pearson's pulmonic Expectorant. 'Having made use of Dr. Pearson's pulmonic Expectorant, we feel it a duty to recommend it as a safe and effectual cure for the various diseases for which it is intended. We are acquainted with many persons who have been cured of Cough, Bronchitis, pain in the breast and side, spitting blood, palpitation of the heart, and incipient consumption, by its use, and many of them after all other means had failed.'

A. Fearson, M. D. U. S Navy; S. K. Leedem, M. D. Champlain Co, Ohio; W. R. Cadwallader, M. D. U. S. Navy.

Dr. Pearson's Carminative Balsam

Is decidedly the most beneficial remedy for the cure of Dysentary, Cholera Morbus and Summer complaint, that is known to man. Parents will find it the best medicine that can be used for young children and infants. And every person who is travelling in the summer months should not be without a bottle of it in their possession; as it is an infalliable remedy against thr change produced in lhe system by drinking bad water.

We annex the following certificate of Mrs. A. M. Sanford, of New York, in reference to the Carminative Balsam. We might add a long list, but consider this sufficient.

This is to certify that I have used Dr. Pearson's Carminative Balsam, and confidently believe it to be the best medicine that can be used for the various diseases for which it is recommended, and recommend it to the ladies who are travelling in summer months, and to mothers for the fretting and crying of infants for which it is a certain cure.

MRS. A. M. SANFORD,
No. 160 East Broadway N. Y.

The proprietor of the above valuable medicines, as also of Dr. Pearson's Barber's Embrocation for Horses, being himself a Physician and graduate of one of the best medical schools in the U. S. and having had the advantage of years of experience in an extensive practice, is therefore from the practical knowledge which he has acquired, well qualified to prescribe those remedies, and restore the patient to sound health.

Prepared only by S. A. Pearon M. D., and for sale wholesale and retail, at No. 106 North 4th street Philadelphia. Also, by J. R. Swallow, General Agent, No. 123 Fulton-st. N. Y., by whom all orders for the above medicines will be promptly attended to.

The great object of this publication is, to place before practical men and students such an amount of theoretical and scientific knowledge, in a condensed form, as shall enable them to work to the best advantage, and to avoid those mistakes which they might otherwise commit. The amount of useful information thus brought together is almost beyond precedent in such works. Indeed, there is hardly any subject within its range which is not treated with such clearness and precision, that even a man of the most ordinary capacity cannot fail of understanding it, and thus learning from it much which it is important for him to know.

From the annexed list of the principal authors and subjects comprised in this work, it is self-evident that all citizens engaged in the practical and useful arts, etc. may derive essential advantages from the possession and study of this publication; the following may be especially designated:

Millwrights.
Moulders and boiler makers.
Artificers in brass, copper and tin.
Cutlers and workers of steel in general.
Carpenters.
Brickmakers.
Workers in ivory, bone, and horn.
Civil engineers, railway contractors, and contractors for earth-work and masonry of every description.
Architects and bridge builders.
Builders, master masons, and brick layers.
Ship builders, masters of vessels, ship carpenters, and others connected with building and docking ships.
Block and pump makers.
Hemp dressers and rope makers.
Manufacturers of linen and cotton fabrics.
Manufacturers of spinning machines, roving machines, card breakers and finishers, drawing frames, willows and pickers, etc. connected with cotton, flax, and wool machinery.
Calenderers, bleachers and calico printers.
Cloth folders and measurers, and persons interested in sewing machinery.
Anchor and chain cable manufacturers.
Cutting and turning tool makers.
Pin and needle makers.
Nail and rivet makers.
Bolt and screw-bolt makers.
Nail cutters.
Coiners.
Leather dressers and curriers.
Manufacturers of great guns and small arms.
Candle makers.
Biscuit and cracker makers.
Lace makers.
Ribbon weavers.
Stone cutters and marble masons.
Dyers, cloth washers and scourers.
Coopers.
Cider and cheese manufacturers.
Crown, crystal, and plate glass makers.
Sugar boilers and refiners, with proprietors of sugar plantations.
Manufacturers of railway, bar, round, ribbon and rod iron.
Wheel, axle and spring makers.
Engine drivers and persons connected with the locomotive generally.
Engineers and captains of steam vessels.
Managers of stationary engines.
Lumber dealers and owners of saw mills.
Veneer cutters.
Owners of planing machinery.
Corn millers, and persons connected with bolting and bran-separating machinery.
Farmers, and persons using grain-shelling and threshing machinery.
Buhl workers, carvers, engravers, and ornament makers in general.
Persons employed in the manufacture of gas.
Makers of copper and lead tubing.
Linen and straw paper makers.
Ship owners, harbor masters, and others interested in dredging machinery.
Well sinkers.
Astronomers, philosophers, and others using philosophical apparatus and instruments.
Miners, engineers, and others interested in pumping engines.
Persons interested in canals and aqueducts.
Warehousemen, and others using hydraulic presses, dynanometric cranes, jack screws, common and feed cranes.
Workers in metals and alloys.
Tin plate workers.
Spring manufacturers.
Wheelwrights, clock makers and horologists.
Etc. etc. etc.

The publishers have expended a large sum of money to get original drawings of machinery in practical use in this country, and have procured almost every work on the subject, whether published in England, France, or Germany, the most essential parts of which being comprised in this Dictionary, render it as perfect and comprehensive as possible. The publishers have endeavored to use great economy in type, so that each page of the work contains at least four times the number of words found in ordinary pages of the same size. This has also secured to each plate working-drawings of ample size and clearness, so that a mechanic may construct accurately any machine described.

The publishers are, in short, determined, regardless of cost, to make the work as complete as possible; and it is hoped every one desirous to obtain the work will procure it as issued in numbers, and thus encourage the enterprise.

The work will be issued in semi-monthly numbers, commencing in January, 1850, and will progress with great regularity.

The whole work will be published in 40 numbers, at 25 cents per number, and completed within the current year, 1850. A liberal discount will be made to agents.

Any one remitting the publishers $10 in advance, shall receive the work through the post-office free of expense.

The Power of Music.

A TEMPERANCE STORY.

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

"Dear father," said Mary Edwards, "don't go out this evening;" and the young girl, who had scarcely numbered fourteen years, laid her hand upon the arm of her parent.

But Mr. Edwards shook her off impatiently, muttered as he did so—

"Can't I go where I please?"

"Oh, yes, father," urged Mary, drawing up to him again, notwithstanding her repulse. "But there is going to be a storm, and I wouldn't go out.

"Storm! Nonsense! That's only your pretence. But I'll be home soon—long before the rain, if it comes at all.'

And saying this, Mr. Edwards turned from his daughter, and left the house. As soon as she was alone, Mary sat down and commenced weeping. There had been sad changes since she was ten years old. In that time her father had fallen into habits of intemperance, and not only wasted his substance, but abused his family; and sadder still, her mother had died broken-hearted, leaving her alone in the world with a drunken father.

The young girl's trials, under these painful circumstances, were great. Night after night her father would come home intoxicated, and it was so rare a thing to get a kind word from him, that a tone of affection from his lips would move her instantly to tears. Daily the work of declension went on. Drunkenness led to idlensss, and gradually Mr. Edwards and his child sunk lower and lower in the scale of comfort. The pleasant home where they had lived for years was given up, and in small, poorly furnished rooms they hid themselves from observation. After this change Mr. Edwards moved along his downward way more rapidly; earning less, and drinking more.

Mary grew old fast. Under severe trials and afflictions, her mind rapidly matured; and her affections for her father grew stronger and stronger, as she realized more and more fully the dreadful nature and ultimate tendency of the infatuation by which he was led.

At last, in the anguish of her concern, she ventured upon remonstrance. This brought only angry repulse, adding bitterness to her cup of sorrow. The appearance to which we have alluded, gave Mary an excuse for urging her father not to go out. How her remonstrance was received has been seen. While the poor girl sat weeping, the distant rolling of thunder indicated the approach of the storm to which she had referred. But she cared little for it now. Her father had gone out. She had spoken of it only with the hope that he might have been induced to remain with her. Now that he was away, the agitation within was too great to have any concern for the turbulent elements without.

On leaving his home, Mr. Edwards, who had not taken any liquor for three or four hours, and whose appetite was sharpened for the accustomed stimulus, walked quickly in the direction of a drinking house where he usually spent his evenings. On entering he found that there was a little commotion in the barroom. A certain individual not over friendly to landlords, had introduced himself; and his character being known, the inmates were disposed to have a little sport with him.

"Come now, my good fellow!" said one, just as Edwards came in. "Mount this table and make a first rate temperance speech."

"Do, and I'll treat you to the stiffest glass of whiskey toddy the landlord can mix," added another.—

"Or perhaps you would like a mint julep or gin cocktail better? Anything you please. Make a speech and call for the liquor. I'll stand the treat."

"What d'ye say landlord? Shall he make the speech" said another who was eager for sport.

"Please yourselves," replied the landlord, "and you'll please me."

"Very well. Now for the speech, old fellow!—Here, mount this table." And two or three of the most forward took hold of his arms.

"I'm not in the humor for making a speech," said the temperance man, "but, if it will please you as well, I'll sing you a song."

"Give us a song then. Anything to accommodate. But come, let's liquor first."

"No," said the other firmly, "I must sing the song first, if I sing it at all."

"Don't you think your pipes will be clearer for a little drink of some kind or other?"

"Perhaps they would," was replied. "So provided you have no objection, I'll take a glass of cold water—if such a thing is known in this place."

The glass of water was presented, and then the man, who was somewhat advanced in years, prepared to give the promised song. All stood listening attentively, Edwards among the rest. The voice of the old man was low and tremulous, yet every word was uttered distinctly and with a pathos which showed that the meaning was felt. The following well written temperance song was the one he sang; and while his voice filled the room every other sound was hushed:

"Where are the friends that to me where so dear,
Long, long ago—long, long ago?
Where are the hopes that my heart used to cheer,
Long, long ago—long, ago?
Friends that I loved in the grave are laid low,
Hopes that I cherished are fled from me now,
I am degraded, for rum was my foe—
Long, long ago—long ago!
"Sadly my wife bowed her beautiful head—
Long, long ago—long, long ago.
Oh, how I wept when I found she was dead!
Long, long ago—long ago.
She was an angel—my love and my guide—
Vainly to save me from ruin she tried.
Poor broken-hearted! 'twas well that she died,
Long, long ago—long ago.
"Let me look back on the days of my youth—
Long, long ago—long ago.
I was no stranger to virtue and truth,
Long, long ago—long ago.
Oh, for the hopes that were pure as the day!
Oh, for the joys that were purer than they!
Oh, for the hours that I've squandered away—
Long, long ago—long ago!"

The silence that prevaded the room when the old man's voice died, or might rather be said, sobbed away, was the silence of death. His own heart was touched, for he wiped his eyes, from which the tears had started. Pausing scarcely a moment, he moved slowly from the room, and left his audience to their own reflections. There was not one of them who was not more or less affected, but the deepest impression had been made on the heart of Edwards. The song seemed as if it had been made for him. The second verse, particularly, went thrilling to the very centre of his feelings:

"Sadly my wife bowed her beautiful head!"

How suddenly arose before him the sorrow-stricken form of the wife of his youth at those words! and when the old man's voice faltered on the line—

"Poor broken hearted! 'twas well that she died!"

The anguish of his spirit was so great, that he only kept himself from sobbing aloud by a strong effort at self-control. Ere the spell was broken, or a word uttered by any one, he arose and left the house.

For many minutes after her father's departure, Mary sat weeping bitterly. She felt hopeless and deserted. Tenderly did she love her parent, but this love was only a source of the keenest anguish, for she saw him swiftly passing along the road to destruction without the power to save him.

Grief wastes itself by its own violence. So it was in this instance. The tears of Mary were at length dried; her sobs were hushed, and she was about rising from her chair, when a blinding flash of lightning glared into the room, followed instantly by a deafening jar of thunder.

"Oh, if father were home!" she murmured, clasping her hands together.

Even while she stood in this attitude, the door opened quietly and Mr. Edwards entered.

"I thought you would be afraid Mary, and so I came home," said he in a kind voice.

Mary looked at him with surprise. This was soon changed to joy as she perceived that he was perfectly sober.

"Oh, father!" she sobbed, unable to control her feelings, and leaning her face on his breast as she spoke—"if you would never go away!"

Tenderly did the father draw his arm round his weeping child, and kissed her pure forehead.

"Mary," said he, as calmly as he could speak, "For your mother's sake"—but he could not finish the sentence. His voice quivered, and became inarticulate.

Solemnly in the silenc of his own heart, did the father, as he stood thus with his child in his arms, repeat the vows he had already taken. And he kept his vows.

Wonderful is the power of music! It is the heart's own language, and speaks to it in a voice of irresistible persuasion. It is a good gift from heaven, and shonld ever be used in a good cause.—[Temperance Recorder.

TO GET RICH.—Getting rich is usually thought to be a hard, up hill task—especially in these times. A modern philosopher, however, has shown that nothing is easier, provided one will only take the right steps:

"It is only to trust nobody belonging to us—to be the friend of no man—have no friend—to heap interest upon interest, cent upon cent—to be mean, miserable, and despised, for some twenty or thirty years, and riches will come as sure as disease and disappointment. And when pretty nearly enough wealth is collected by a disregard of all the charities of the human heart, and at the expence of every enjoyment, death comes to finish the work; the body is buried in a hole, the heirs dance over it, and the spirit goes—where?"

APPORTIONMENT OF THE SCHOOL FUND.—The Trustees of the School Fund met on Wednesday, March 20. the Governoor, Secretary of State, President of the Senate, Speaker of the Assembly, and Attorney General being present.

The legislature at its late session have made an additional appropriation of $10,000 for School purposes; the whole sum to be distributed this year was $40,000, and it was apportioned among the Counties as follows:

Bergen $1,333, Hudson $820, Essex $3,552, Passaic $1,024, Morris $3,136, Sussex $2,025, Warren $2,185, Hunterdon $3,103, Somerset $2,510, Middlesex $2,732, Monmouth and Ocean $3,724, Burlington $3,810, Gloucester $1,362, Camden $1,550, Cumberland $1,386, Salem $2,156, Cape May $646 Atlantic $466, Mercer $2,280.

The above sums are one-third greatr than were apportioned last year to each county.

Rich and Poor.

Alas! that MAN, to be a man,
Must prove his title by his land,
Or build a monument of worth
With piles of gold or titles of earth.
His voice may ring with vilest curse—
How sweet it soundeth through his purse;
And honor waits from gaping crowds
That flocks around like morning clouds.

His may be deeds that would fall with shame
Upon the humble toiler's name;
But Mammon charms the poison'd tongue,
That darkest deeds be loudest sung—
While slander seeks the low-thatched cot,
So frailty shall not be forgot.
Oh! would that man to win his part,
Might earn the title with his heart!

A Highwayman's Confession.

Some twenty years ago two young men were hung at Baltimore for robbing the great Southern mail, and killing the driver. One of the highwaymen was a boy nineteen years of age, the son of a respectable physician at Utica, in the State of New York. The following is an extract from the confession of the latter, which was published at the time in a pamphlet:

My first exploit on the highway was to rob an old Scotchman I had perceived in the afternoon, from my lurking- place, driving a fatted cow to a neighboring market. As he was returning, (a little in liquor,) I placed myself in his way and saluted him with "Good morning, old dad."

"How do ye, how do ye," said he.

"Sold your cow, ah?

"Y-e-a-s," (hiccup.)

"How much?"

"Too leetle, too leetle; only twenty siller dollars."

"Well, shell out; and do it quickly too, or I'll make daylight shine through you with an ounce ball."

"Oh! for God's sake, you wadna rob me?"

"No, but for my own sake—to be brief—I am a gentleman in distress, and will take your money as a loan from you."

"Weel, aweel, dinna hurt me," he said, apparently sobered, and I will count it out til ye."

"So saying, he put his hand in his coat pocket behind, and drawing forth a large pistol, ready cocked, he presented it at me, observing very coolly:

"I hae hearit o' sic borrowin' as he afore now and sae I hae gone provided wi' the ready plank doun."

Such a novice was I in this new business that I had not taken my pistols from my belt, where they were confined under a buttoned coat; besides, if I had, it would not have availed me, for I had neglected to provide flints for them.

"But," continued he, "as ye say ye are a peur gentleman, (and peur enough, Gude kens,) just stap off a few yards further, and dance a Scotch jeg, or a hornpipe, and make the music wi' yere ain whustle, too, or ye're a deed mon."

"Oh! my friend, impossible! surely you do not insist on my dancing a jig in sand half way up to my knees.

"Gif ye dinn at it we' a' yere might, it less time than I can snap my fingers three times, by the son of Elihu, (wha I'm fond to thenk theo ca'd Mosey,) wi the help o' a guid load o' buckshot, Ill make as mony holes through ye as ye could count in an auld ten lanthrone—and I'll make het led run through ye, for a' the world like queek silver through the reddle o' a Scotch fan, an, ye dinna dance right aff the reel, 'like a hen upon a hot griddle.' Noo, then."

What could I do? Feeling it was no time to trifle, and almost fancying the buckshot were already perforating me, I bethought me of a waltz, and whistling it, in less than three minutes belabored myself into a perfect foam of perspiration, in the deep sand. Tired to death, I paused to breathe and asked the old tyrant if that would not do.

"Na, na, dinna flash yoursel', doar. I am na tired o'lukin on, gif ye are na tired o' scollopin. Sa gaie us twa or three jerks more, and whon ye ha'e dune I'll reward ye wi' twa or three o' the siller dollars."

I renewed the dreadful feat, and when I stopped again out of wind, he pitched the silver at me, and recommending an honester mode of borrowing, made me clear myself—which, it is needless to say, I did.

☞ "For my part," said Mrs. Partington, "I can't deceive what on airth eddication is comin' to. When I was young, if a gall only understood the rules of distraction, provision, multiplying, replenishing, and the common dominator, and knew all about the rivers and their obituaries, the covenants and domitories, the provinces and umpires, they had edication enough. But now they have to study bottomy, algierbay, and have to demonstate suppositions about sycophants of circuses, tangents, and diagonies of parallelograms, to say nothing about the oxides, assheads, cowsticks, and apstruce triangles." And the old lady was so confused with the tecknicle names that she was forced to stop.

☞ "Is that clock right over there?" asked a visitor the other day.

"Right over there?" said the boy, "taint any where else."

PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Thursday; April 4, 1850.

☞ Mr Albert D. Drake is our authorised agent to receive subscriptions and advertisments.

☞ Our subscribers who have changed their residence will please give notice where they may be found.

☞ We this day present our paper in an entire new dress. This we are enabled and compelled to do by our constantly increasing patronage. Although we have labored under many disadvantages, by persevering industry we have been enabled to overcome many of them, and while a discriminating public continues to bestow upon us its favors, we shall by corresponding efforts on our part endeavor to merit their continuance.

In nothing, in our estimation, is the interst of the individual and the public more closely allied, than between it and the publisher of a newspaper. This is especially the case with the Village newspaper.—Where ignorance, superstition, vice and crime abound, there the newspaper, although the most needed are nowhere sought—but as knowledge and virtue are promoted in a community by its efforts, so does that knowledge and virtue appreciate and reward it by extending its influence over a wider field.

With this idea of the identity of interest constantly in our mind, we shall endeavor to promote its best interest; not by a cringing sycophancy to the exclusive interest of this party or that sect, as parties or sects, but by the independent advocacy of the equal rights of all men—always permiting, and INVITING strictures on whatever may appear in our columns; believing this course best calculated—and the only one to be tolerated by men who think for themselves—to promote the cause of truth, virtue and happines among the people. Those who appreciate the value of such a newspaper, published in their midst, to the prosperity of a thriving town like our own, will generally be found among the most intelligent and enterprising of the community; to them we confidently look for support until through their aid and influence seconded by our efforts, the whole community shall look upon the newspaper as one of the most economical and efficient means whereby knowledge is promoted among the people, and their rights and liberties are made known and sustained. With these remarks reminding those interested of the benefits arising to them individually and collectively as citizens of a thriving town, and as explanatory of our course, we leave the subject where it most properly belongs, in the hands of an intelligent community.

Town Meeting.

Ere another week shall have rolled round, our readers will be called upon to exercise that inestimable right and most sacred duty for which our forefathers contended, and which they declared was the inalienable right of all men—a duty which every man should conscientiously discharge to the best of his judgment for the good of his country, and especially with an eye to the extensien of these his privileges, as the boon of freedom to the whole human race—as upon no other ground can he claim these privileges as his own; as thus only can he fulfil the whole duty as a republican citizen.

With these few remarks, and a commendation of a communication on this subject, in another column, to the attention of our readers, we leave the subject to their reflection and decision.

ACCIDENT ON THE CENTRAL R. ROAD OF N. J.—We learn by a passenger that as the up train from Elizabeth Port was proceeding towards the White House on Friday last at about 11 o'clock A. M., the locomotive came in contact with the stage from New Brunswick as it was crossing the railroad near Boundbrook, in which there was only one passenger, a woman, who escaped unhurt; the driver had his arm broken and was otherwise bruised, one horse was instantly killed and the stage was litterly torn to pieces, having been carried some distance before the train could be stopped. The accident was the result of a foolish temerity on the part of the Stage driver, as his passenger gave him notice in time that the cars were coming, which he disregarded by attempting to cross before it—a broken arm is but poor satisfaction for his heedless attempt, and a sufficient warning to all not to make a similar one.

All those who may receive our paper this week who are not already our subscribers, we should like to add to our list as such—surely ten shillings (the yearly subscription) could not be better applied—will they inform the carrier or hand in their names in time for our next?

☞ Farmers Attention! If you intend to plow any this spring, it will be necessary to prepare yourselves with that indispensible article to its accomplishment, a good Plow. A first rate article of the different kinds, as also any other farming implement can be had of Benjamin Myer, 61 Broad-st. corner of Division-st Newark N. J. See Advertisement.

☞ S. R. is informed that it is so long since the article was published upon which his strictures are made, that unless it were republished they would not be understood, therefore not appreciated; for which we have not room this week but will probably give it in our next.

☞ The Democrats in Connecticut claim the election of Seymour their Governor, and a majority of the Legislature.

☞ James Hamilton and James Ackerman were instantly killed and Michael Dennehy had his right leg broken while engaged in excavating the back wall of the Rochester Hotel 31 Cortland st. N. Y. on Monday afternoon, the wall fell and buried them in the ruins.

Death of John C. Calhoun.

Hon. John C. Calhoun, United States Senator, from South Carolina, breathed his last in Washington City at a quarter past seven o'clock, on Sunday morning last.

John C. Calhoun, was, emphatically, one of the great men of his country and age—great by virtue of his talents, genius and accomplishments, and great in the purity and integrity of his life, as a citizen and a man. To be judged fairly, he must not be judged by politicians or partizans, but by those who, rising above prejudice and passion, appreciate lofty intellect, and honor unswerving patriotism and truth. With the right or wrong of his political creed, as parties would decide, the just biographer will have nothing to do. It is enough on that point, that his enemies acknowledged his sincerity in believing always that he had chosen the right, and his consistency and honesty in adhering to his choice, though he sacrificed the fairest prospects of personal fortune and preferment. It was his distinct, bold and inflexible character, in whatever he did that made him inevery respect the idol of his own community and State, and the political leader of a section of the Union.

Mr. Calhoun was born in Abbeville District, South Carolina, in the year 1782. His father was Irish by birth, his mother a Virginian. The father battled nobly through the revolution for American Independence, and when it was secured, settled in South Carolina, on an estate which his family retain to this day, and where his greatly distinguished son was born. Mr. Calhoun was educated, and graduated at Yale College.—]N. Y. Sun

FOR THE PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.

GENTLEMEN: As the period is at hand when our citizens are called on to choose township officers, permit me to offer a few remarks for the consideration of those who have at heart the best interests of their country.

I would urge my fellow citizens to vote for no man whom they have not good reason to believe is of irreprochable character. Listen not, I beseech you, to the voice of party leaders. If they offer for your suffrages intelligent, honest, patriotic men, by all means vote for them. But if you do not KNOW them to be such, inquire of your friends as to their character. Many of those who control the machinery of party are, unfortunately, unprincipled men; and they will laugh in secret at the verdancy of those whom they can deceive.

The selection of proper men as township officers is a matter of great importance. I am aware that many think differntly, but I imagine this is because they have not given the subject much attention. Take the case of "overseer of the poor," for instance: where is the person who is acquainted with the duties which devolve on this officer who will say that he should not be a man of good judgment—one who can sympathize with the sons and daughters of sorrow—a man capable of speaking a kind word to the heart-broken and encouraging them to hope—one who can kindly enquire into the distresses of the widow and fatherles, and bid them take courage and wait with patience for "the good time" which will certainly and speedily arrive.

How often is the philanthropist grieved by witnessing the conduct of those who SHOULD BE ministers of mercy, but WHO ARE, in fact if not in name, ministers of evil! It is a great mistake, even in an economical point of view, to have a man of hard heart and unpitying eye to discharge the duties of this office. Such a man will frequently grant aid to the undeserving. He is like the unjust judge, who, although he feared not God nor regarded man yet granted the widow's prayer because of her importunity. Her continued demands for justice wearied his patience, and, without any examination of her claims, he gave a decision in her favor. "Lest by her continual coming she weary me" was the motive which actuated the unjust judge; and such is often the ground on which the unjust "overseer" administers relief. He has no sympathy with his poor brother—he cares not for the miseries which he suffers—he has no word of advice, no whisper of better days for the consolation of the helpless. He has accepted office—not that he might have an opportunity of beconiug a blessing to him who was ready to perish—but that he may be able to add to his own wealth. What is it to him if others suffer, has HE not all that heart can wish? God help the poor, when SUCH men are chosen by a CHRISTIAN community to fill an office to which none but the wise and good should aspire.

Let every right-minded man so vote that "his hand will not believe his heart." If improper persons ARE elected for justices, constables, overseers of the poor, &c. do not say that YOU are not responsible, unless you have done your utmost to prevent such a result. The fact is, a few determined, upright men, who are willing to discharge their WHOLE duty to society, can generally prevent an improper person from obtaining office. But whether successful or not, they are bound by their obligations as good citizens to DO RIGHT The concientious man will ACT right, and VOTE right though he stands alone. He knows that a good act, or a vote for the right, is never lost; and though he may be called on to endure the taunts of the thoughtless, and combat error single-handed for a season, he will eventually be sustained by all good men, as he is now cheered and animated by an approving conscience and the smiles of his God.

NEWARK DAILY MERCURY.—This well edited and sprightly journal comes to us considerably enlarged and much improved in appearance—it is hereafter to be edited by Wm. E Robinson Esq., the recent correspondent of the New York Tribune, whose letters from Washington over the signature of Richelieu, display talents for the editorial chair of a high order. A discriminating public will undoubtedly appreciate its efforts for their benefit.

☞ If the reader wishes to buy to advantge, always purchase of those who advertise, they court competition and always expect to sell at small profits—make this an invariable rule and you will save money thereby.

The Great Trial---Dr. Webster Convicted!

Never before, we venture to affirm, was there a trial involving no political considerations no party passions which was hung over with such intense interest by so many hundreds of thousands as have watched the trial of Prof. John W. Webster for the murder of Dr. George Parkman. The professional and social standing of the defendant—born to wealth nurtured in luxury, educated in the oldest and most eminent American University, whereof he in due time became a Professor, after travelling extensively in foreign lands and bringing home a wife lovely and accomplished beyond most women—holding oistinguished ability or briliant reputation, for many years past, and rearing up a family of beautiful and admired daughters, who for some years have rendered his house one of the most agreeable centers of social attraction in Cambridge—he always maintained an unclouded reputation and an enviable position, until the former was blasted by this terrible accusation of Murder, and he torn from that sumptuous dwelling to be incarcerated among felons, and finally to take his trial for the revolting crime of murdering one who had been his creditor, friend and benefactor, and, after a fair and pains-taking investigation, he is convicted of the atrocious, fiendish deed. Here is a transformation, a tragedy, a concatenation of horrors such as History has rarely recorded and Imagination has seldom transcended.—[Tribune.

DELIBERATION OF THE JURY.

It is understood that the Jury, after going out on Saturday night, at first deliberated in silence for ten minutes. They then voted on the question whether the remains were those of Dr. George Parkman. There was a unanimous "YEA."

On the the second question, whether Dr. Webster murdered him, there were eleven yeas and one nay. The nay came from Mr. Benjamin H. Greene. He stated his point of doubt, and after some discussion he declared it removed.

INCIDENTS, &c.

The family of Dr. Webster was not informed of the verdict the night it was rendered. Friends, however, undertook the task of preparing their minds for it. The awful disclosures were made to them on Sunday morning by Mrs. Wm. H. Prescott. The scene was most heart-rending, and the wails and shrieks could not be concealed from the passers-by.

Every effort has been made by these friends to assuage the grief of the afflicted wife and daughers, who up to a late hour confidently expected an acquittal.

A letter of condolence was presented them on Sunday afternoon, signed by the heads of all the principal families of Cambrige, including Hon. Edward Everett, Jared Sparks, Professor Norton, Judge Fay, etc.

It is now ascertained that Dr. Webster did take strichnine on the night of his arrest, he having confessed it to his physician, Clark.

So far as we can learn, the verdict, however unexpected, is now considered a righteous and true one.

PUBLISHING THE LAWS.—Notwithstanding the general voice of the people of New Jersey, that the laws passed by their Legislature should be published in the newspapers of the State, nothing was done in the matter at the late session. Private privileges monopolized the attention which should have been given to measures of a public character—personal aggrandizement was thought more worthy of legislation than the wants of the people. It is true, the laws are republished in pamphlet form: but who are put in possession of them? About a half-dozen individuals in each county, and the great mass of the people are kept in total ignorance of their bearing on their interests until action is had in our courts. Now in the absence of official authority the newspapers furnish extracts from such acts as bear upon the community In which they circulate; and with this the people must be satisfied.—[Salem Sunbeam.

NEW HAMPSHIRE ELECTION.—Two hundred and eight towns give Dinsmoor, Dem., 29,786; Chamberlain, Whig, 18,146; Berry (Soil) and scattering 6,640. Last year the same towns gave Dinsmoor 29,087, Chamberlain 18,341, Berry &c. 7081. Sixteen towns to be heard from. Dinsmoor's majority in the State will be about 5500, being the largest majority given in the State since 1842.

If it is folly to judge of a building by a single brick, it is equal folly to judge of a newspaper by a single article. The general structure of the edifice, and the general tone of the journal, must in each case be the standard of estimate.

A great many people like an "independent press,' which always chimes exactly with their own opinions; but a truly honest press must differ from somebody.

THE ERA.—This large and neatly printed paper gives the most piquant and ably written editorials of any weekly journal with which we are acquainted; its miscellany is also of a superior order—in addition to its former able editors, Thos. Picton and Jos. Pierce Bradley, Esqs., they have recently associated with them Henry Wm. Herbert, (Frank Forester) with whose talents as a writer most of our readers are well acquainted. Published at 22 Spruce-st. by Picton, Atwood & Larkin.

☞ The attention of the public is requested to the eminent work on the Arts and Sciences, advertised on our first page, by D. Appleton & Co. N Y.—At least every person directly interested in the subject—and if carefully read over there will be but few who are not—should not fail to procure a copy.

A Supplement to the act entitled "An act to regulate fees."

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That hereafter every constable shall be allowed the sum of one dollar per day for every day he shall attend at the supreme Court, Circuit Court, Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery, Court of Common Pleas in his county, to be ascertained and paid in manner and subject to the like restrictions as is now provided by law.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 6, 1850.

☞ Col. Fremont is said to be the richest man in the world. His gold mine in California, will probably be saleable in a few years at six millions of dollars an acre, and will produce from ten to twenty per cent a year on that sum.

Counterfeit half dollars, so accurately executed as to exhibit no perceptible difference from the genuine coin, are in circulation in New-Orleans. They are said to be of domestic manufacture, and can only be detected by ringing them.

PROTECTION LEVEE.—We understand a bill to appropriate the sum of eighty thousand dollars to purchase one hundred negroes, who shall be employed for a year in the construction of a protection levee around New Orleans, the city to feed them at its own expense during the year, has been agreed upon between the country and city members of the Legislature, and will undoubtedly pass both houses. The lower line, the only one which affords security to the city, has been adopted for the levee.—[N. O. True Delta.

What a useless expurse incurred to feed them why not oblige them to find their own provisions; surely it may be done by the same right that they are required to porform the labor?

☞ Private advices from New-Orleans state that the cholera has again broken out in that city and it was feared it would assume an epidemic form.

The amount of treasury notes outstanding on the 1st of April is $740, 600.

☞ No business was transacted in Congress yesterday. Mr. Butler of S. C. announced the death ef his colleague, Mr. Calhoun, and paid a handsome tribute to his memory. He was followed by Messrs. Clay and Webster, who bore eloquent testimony to the exalted talents, patriotism and virtues of the llustrious dead.

Messrs. Holmes and Venable made appropriate addreses in the house.

☞ Nicholas Low, of Boston, aged 40 years, is missing. He had on his person $250 at the time of his disappearance.

"S—, is your customer, R—, a man to be trusted?" "I know of none more so. He is to be trustep forever, for he never pays."

Theodore F. King has been re-appointed State Superintendent of the Common Schools by the Trustees of the School Fund.

☞ There are 180 churches in the city of Philadelphia. Twenty three years since it only contained 80

☞ Oats are reported "a cent a-piece" in California. A great many young men are busily engaged there sowing wild ones.

☞ How apt men are to condemn in others what they practice themselves without scruple! Plutarch tells of a wolf, who, peeping into a hut where a company of shepherds were regaling themselves with a joint of mutton exclaimed, "What a clamor would these men have raised if they had caught ME at such a banquet?"

Smithers says he can't say that fresh air does him any good. For the last month he had slept outdoors regularly every night, and yet his cough is just as bad as it ever was. Smithers begins to look upon ventilotion as a humbug, notwithstanding it is so lauded by learned doctors.

EQUARIAN

CONDITION POWDERS.

The most Extraordinary medicine in the World for Horses.

It is cheaper, and warranted to possess more active, safe and beneficial properties, than any other for the cure of distemper, coughs, slobbering, preventing founders, fevers, hide bound, swelled legs, humors of the skin, mange, surfeit, obstructed urine, loss of appetite, indigestion, general debility, rough coat, and all impurities of the system, and blood, and want of condition.

The ease and safety with which they are given, renders them an invaluable and convenient medicine and one that should be kept on hand by every Farmer and horse owner. For racing or trotting horses, they are worth the purse, as they strengthen the wind, give an elasticity and fleetness to the motion, and invigorate the whole frame. They have received the acknowledgments of thousands of the best and most celebrated farriers and horsemen, as a safe and superior medicine, and are universally approved and recommended by every one that uses them. For Milch Cows they are indispensible, as they remove all obstructions in the milk veins or passages, and cause an abundance of fine rich milk. ☞ Prepared and sold wholesale and retail, by W. H. WYATT, Proprietor, cor. Chrystie & Bayard sts. New York, and sold at retail by Druggists, Merchants and Saddlers generally, throughout the City and the United States. Price per Package of 1 doz Powders 50 cents, one-half dozen packages $2 50, one doz. $4.

UNDERTAKING.
COFFINS AT REDUCED PRICES.

THE subscriber would call the attention of the public to his complete assortment of Coffins, where all the different sizes are finished and ready for use at a moments warning; they are made of Mahogony, Black Walnut and Cherry, and finished in every style, so that all can be suited, also a superior style of stained ones, which he offers remarkably low; he has hitherto defered giving his prices, but as he has understood that there is some misrepresentation in regard to his prices, he deems this sufficient excuse to the public for to say that for a large size Black Walnut Coffin including hearse in attendance he has $6, Mahogany $14, Cherry $6, and small ones accordingly, tight ease made in coffin style $1,75. By leaving the order with him, the sexton of either of the churches will be seen if required, and all necessary arrangements made without any extra expense.

J. W. S. MARTIN, Principal.

HE has given up the idea of Cuba being annexed this fall, consequently he has made up his mind to stay a little longer at his old stand adjoining Webstor & Marsh's store, where he offers a new and splendid assortment of Cabinet Furniture, unequalled in this or any of the neighboring towns for stability or neatness of finish, patterns being all new, and we advise all who wish to be fitted out with such articles as he offers, to make their purchases of him instead of going out of the place, do not forget the minerel and you will get a bargain as sure as the whale swallowed Jonah. Arnica LINIMENT

A CERTAIN CURE FOR

RHEUMATISM!

SORE THROAT, BURNS, SCALDS, PAINS IN THE LIMBS, CHEST, SIDE, AND BACK, SPRAINS, BRUISES, CRAMPS, CHILBLAINS, ETC., ETC., ETC.

Price, Twenty-Five Cents.

This newly-invented oleaginous preparation of ARNICA has been, before offering it to the public, satisfactorily tested by several of our most respectable physicians, who were also made acquainted with the ingredients of which it is composed, and the peculiar process of compounding them. So confident is the inventor of its efficacy, that he has authorized every agent—in case it does not prove itself as represented—to take back any part of the bottle and return the full price of it.

The ARNICA LINIMENT will be found more penetrating, and to relieve the most acute pain in less time, than any other external remedy; at the same time it will not irritate the skin or cause it to smart, even if badly broken, as is not unfrequently the case with Burns and Scalds, but will remove the fire and cause the injured part to heal so rapidly as seldom to leave any scar.

Most, if not all, other liniments contain some irritating ingredient, such as pepper, spirits of hartshorn, oil of vitriol, muriatic acid, (spirits of salt,) combined with oil or alcohol, which cause the skin to smart very much, and the second application to be greatly dreaded, particularly by children; and the opinion is generally entertained that the more a liniment causes the flesh to burn and smart, the more good it will do. But this we are convinced is a very great mistake, and results in doing more injury than good: as, for instance, with SPRAINS, BRUISES, BURNS, SCALDS, CHILBLAINS, or any inflammation on or near the surface of the skin. All such exciting embrocations must naturally tend to increase the disease and prolong the cure.

The ARNICA LINIMENT requires neither true nor fictitious testimonials to recommend it, after one trial.

GREAT AMERICAN REMEDY.

Vegetable Dyspepsia Bitters.

TO THE PUBLIC,

DR HUTCHINGS would call the attention of all afflicted with dyspepsia, and the various disorders arising from a diseased stomach, to his remedy therefor. His DYSPEPSIA BITTERS will be found, on trial, to contain every property requisite to restore the disordered stomach to a healthy action; to reproduce the lost appetite of the patient, and do away with the periodical nervous headache and general debility consequent on this afflicting disease. Thousands have tested its efficacy, and thousands more are now under treatment; and not one solitary case of failure has yet been reported to him. This is consolatory, and urges him on in his efforts to relieve poor suffering humanity. He could fill a volume with certificates of those who have been permanently cured; but he conceives the testimony of a few well-known citizens will answer every purpose. The reader will find, on looking over the following testimonials, they are not "got up" for the occasion; but bona fide letters from gentlemen who can be seen at any time at their places of business.

The following Certificate is from M. B. Brady, the Celebrated Daguerreotypist:

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness, I was advised to take Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me. I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia. M. B. BRADY,
No. 205 Broadway, N. Y.

From Luther B. Wyman, Esq., late President of the New York Musical Society, now of Brooklyn.

The undersigned was afflicted with the Dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half during a greater portion of which time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself, until he was recommended to try Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, he very soon derived benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well.

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of Hutchings' Bitters for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine.

L. B. WYMAN, 38 Burling Slip.

New York, Sept. 3. 1849.

66. Mechanical Principia. [Leonard.]

The great object of this publication is, to place before practical men and students such an amount of theoretical and scientific knowledge, in a condensed form, as shall enable them to work to the best advantage, and to avoid those mistakes which they might otherwise commit. The amount of useful information thus brought together is almost beyond precedent in such works. Indeed, there is hardly any subject within its range which is not treated with such clearness and precision, that even a man of the most ordinary capacity cannot fail of understanding it, and thus learning from it much which it is important for him to know.

From the annexed list of the principal authors and subjects comprised in this work, it is self-evident that all citizens engaged in the practical and useful arts, etc. may derive essential advantages from the possession and study of this publication; the following may be especially designated:

Millwrights.
Moulders and boiler makers.
Artificers in brass, copper and tin.
Cutlers and workers of steel in general.
Carpenters.
Brickmakers.
Workers in ivory, bone, and horn.
Civil engineers, railway contractors, and contractors for earth-work and masonry of every description.
Architects and bridge builders.
Builders, master masons, and brick layers.
Ship builders, masters of vessels, ship carpenters, and others connected with building and docking ships.
Block and pump makers.
Hemp dressers and rope makers.
Manufacturers of linen and cotton fabrics.
Manufacturers of spinning machines, roving machines, card breakers and finishers, drawing frames, willows and pickers, etc. connected with cotton, flax, and wool machinery.
Calenderers, bleachers and calico printers.
Cloth folders and measurers, and persons interested in sewing machinery.
Anchor and chain cable manufacturers.
Cutting and turning tool makers.
Pin and needle makers.
Nail and rivet makers.
Bolt and screw-bolt makers.
Nail cutters.
Coiners.
Leather dressers and curriers.
Manufacturers of great guns and small arms.
Candle makers.
Biscuit and cracker makers.
Lace makers.
Ribbon weavers.
Stone cutters and marble masons.
Dyers, cloth washers and scourers.
Coopers.
Cider and cheese manufacturers.
Crown, crystal, and plate glass makers.
Sugar boilers and refiners, with proprietors of sugar plantations.
Manufacturers of railway, bar, round, ribbon and rod iron.
Wheel, axle and spring makers.
Engine drivers and persons connected with the locomotive generally.
Engineers and captains of steam vessels.
Managers of stationary engines.
Lumber dealers and owners of saw mills.
Veneer cutters.
Owners of planing machinery.
Corn millers, and persons connected with bolting and bran-separating machinery.
Farmers, and persons using grain-shelling and threshing machinery.
Buhl workers, carvers, engravers, and ornament makers in general.
Persons employed in the manufacture of gas.
Makers of copper and lead tubing.
Linen and straw paper makers.
Ship owners, harbor masters, and others interested in dredging machinery.
Well sinkers.
Astronomers, philosophers, and others using philosophical apparatus and instruments.
Miners, engineers, and others interested in pumping engines.
Persons interested in canals and aqueducts.
Warehousemen, and others using hydraulic presses, hydraulic jib cranes, [illegible] feed cranes.
Workers in metals and alloys.
Tin plate workers.
Spring manufacturers.
Wheelwrights, clock makers and horologists.
Etc. etc. etc.

The publishers have expended a large sum of money to get original drawings of machinery in practical use in this country, and have procured almost every work on the subject, whether published in England, France, or Germany, the most essential parts of which being comprised in this Dictionary, render it as perfect and comprehensive as possible. The publishers have endeavored to use great economy in type, so that each page of the work contains at least four times the number of words found in ordinary pages of the same size. This has also secured to each plate working-drawings of ample size and clearness, so that a mechanic may construct accurately any machine described.

The publishers are, in short, determined, regardless of cost, to make the work as complete as possible; and it is hoped every one desirous to obtain the work will procure it as issued in numbers, and thus encourage the enterprise.

The work will be issued in semi-monthly numbers, commencing in January, 1850, and will progress with great regularity.

The whole work will be published in 40 numbers, at 25 cents per number, and completed within the current year, 1850. A liberal discount will be made to agents.

Any one remitting the publishers $10 in advance, shall receive the work through the post-office free of expense.

FROM THE PLEASURE BOAT.

Gentlemen, what helpless Creatures.

What miserable helpless creatures gentlemen are when without funds—almost as helpless as infants. A year or two since a tall well-formed and rather clever-looking young man called on me, and desired me to assist him in obtainining some sort of a situation in which he might earn his living. He was a stranger in the place and was without funds. I asked him what he could do. "O, almost anything," said he. I asked him if he could saw wood, or if he was willing to enter a carpenter's shop and saw boards or shove a fore plane. "O, no," said he, "I was brought up a gentleman—never performed a day's work in my life." Well, thought I, this is a hard customer—call on me to assist him in finding employment and at the same time refuse to work! A Gentleman, indeed! I eyed him from head to foot; he had a frame which, had it been strung with muscles inured to labor, would have performed the labor of a young giant, but being the frame of a gentleman it was worthless. After viewing the helpless creature with feelings of pity for him, mingled with something almost indescribable toward parents that would suffer a child to grow up so helpless, I inquired what he could do.

He answered that he could write, had some knowledge of book-keeping, and would accept a clerkship in a bank or would go as supercargo in some ship. As these situations were not to be had here, I could see no way in which I could assist him and so we parted.

What a lesson, thought I, for parents who undertake to make GENTLEMEN of their children, and suffer them to grow up in ignorance of all useful occupations. What a pity that rich men cannot have the benefit of such instruction, before their children are sunk in helpless poverty.

A few weeks since a young man called at my office and inquired where he could get something to drink stronger than beer. I told him I had a plenty of it at the house and if he would go in with me he should be welcome to as much as he wished to drink. I told him he was evidently just recovering from a drunken fit, and the drink that I would give him was just what he wanted to cool and invigorate the system. "What is it?" said he eagerly.

"O that isn't what I want," said he; "I want something strong that will blunt my sensibilities and drown my feelings."

I asked him why he wished to make a fool of himself?—why he would drink spirit when he knew it was his greatest enemy?

"Why," said he, "the truth is I am what you may call a broken-down gentleman. I have lost my property—am without money or friends—am among strangers, and have nothing to pay my expenses to my native town, and I want to drown my feelings. destroy my faculties so that I shall not be sensible of suffering."

I tried to encourage him—told him he was yet a young man and might by temperance and industry, yet see better days. I offered to get some kind of employment for him, and asked him if he was willing to work.

'Work?" said he, "how can I work? I never did a day's work in my life. My father was rich, he permitted me to grow up in idleness; he lost his property and died leaving me penniless, and I am miserable.

Turning round, he saw a basket of cakes and some pies on the counter. "I am hungry," said he, "and without money; what can I do.'

"Eat said I, the profit made on these little articles is for the hungry that have not money to buy, it is for that purpose I keop them, eat.

He helped himself to what he wanted, and when he was done he called for water, which he appeared to drink with a good relish.

There, said I, is not that food and water better than strong drink.

"Yes, but I do not always have it, all do not treat me as you do, and when I am hungry I can beg strong drink easier than I can food, and one glass drowns my sufferings, so I resort to it.

As his body began to feel comfortable, his mind began to rally, and I had a long conversation with him. He departed promising me that he would try to be steady and learn to work.

I thought at the time, that if parents who are trying to make useless, helpless gentleman of their sons, had seen and heard him, they would have discovered their own folly and begun to teach them to provide for themselves by some honest and productive employment. It is for their good that I have written this.

Better would it be for their children, to teach them to labor honestly for a living, and then turn them peniless into the street, than to permit them to grow up in ignorance and then bestow millions upon them. I say IGNORANCE because, if one has all the book-learning in the world, and knows not how to perform any useful labor with his hands he is ignorant indeed.

The children of rich men who are brought up in luxury and idleness seldom become distinguished in any thing great and good. If we study the early history of all the great and good men that have arisen in this nation, we shall find that not less than seven in every ten were once poor boys, and arose by the force of their own industry, while thousands of the sons of the rich, who enjoyed all the means of becoming great and good, have sunk in the ruinous gulf of vice.

Miserable helpless things! thes modern gentlemen, when they have not funds enough to swindle their living from the hands of honest industry!

FROM THE PORTLAND PLEASURE BOAT.

"Ye worship ye know not what."

Such was the language addressed by an ancient preacher to a people who were very righteous in their own estimation, and very zealous in the performance of what they regarded as worship. And this language may with all propriety be addressed to a large majority of the most zealous worshipers in the present age. Very many worship the creatures of their own imaginations; they picture to themselves some sort of a personage in the form of man, seated on a throne beyond the clouds, and worship that from childhood to old age, while trampling goodness the true God under foot. All their prayers are addressed to this picture; they have no idea of any other God, and though they zealously attend church from childhood to old age, they are never once told of their error, for their teachers themselves know no better way. The blind lead the blind, all fall in the ditch of error together, and "worship they know not what."

Others entertain no definite ideas of the form and size of the supreme. But have only a confused idea of his character. They see no form nor comeliness in him, nothing desirable, but have been taught that he is a dreadful angry, wicked being, and if they do not in some way appease his wrath, he will finally cast them down to the bottomless pit; so they perform such unmeaning ceremonies as their leaders require them to, for the purpose of escaping the dreadful suffering; the fear of hell is the main spring of all their religious acts. They are generally selfish, have little love for goodnes, see no beauty in their religion, and were it not for the fear of that angry being, that bug-bear of priest craft, they would never trouble themselves about religion. Such "worship they know not what."

There are others again who have no definite ideas of either the form or character of the supreme power; but have attended the idolatrous meetings from childhood, and witnessed the ceremonies. These delight in the sound of the church music, take pleasure in seeing and being seen at the religious gatherings and never learn that these acts are not the sum and substance of devotion. These too, "worship they know not what."

so join with the unmeaning rich to be popular and mones; there are others who desire employment or custom in their occupations or trades, and attend church to gain favor with the people. All these "worship they know not what." There are some who have sincere haukerings for pure happiness, but have been taught that these desires can be satisfied only after death, and that, on condition that they follow the directions of their priests who burden them with forms and ceremonies that mean nothing. These also worship they knw not what.

We might continue the discription of false worshipers to almost any length, for very few know what they worship, but the above must suffice.

Now the sincere inquirer may desire to know what is the true worship, how it is acceptably performed, &c., that he may come to know what he worships. To this I answer, let the sincere love goodness and be directed by this love in all their doings. Let them live to do good and every act will be an act of worship. He who gives but a cup of cold water to the thirsty from a love to good, performs a more acceptible act of worship than he who dabbles out bread and wine to his flock for form's sake, or as a religious ceremony. Everything which true worsip requires is useful—is designed in some way to benefit man or beast, and add to the sum of happiness. He who is kind to his brute from a love of kindness or a principle of goodness, though an infidel in profession, performs a more acceptable act of worship than he who prays in the temple while his poor brute is suffering from cold or hunger at the door. Nothing is true worship unless it does good. If a man goes into the water from a love of cleanliness, and purifies his body he performs an act of acceptable worship, but if he enters the water and is immersed regarding the act merely as religious, performed to bring him into favor with God, it is only an act of idolatry, though it is true, the washing may benefit the body, but as the thing was done not to purify the body, but only blindly as a religious ceremony, there is no more worship in it than there would be in bowing down to a wooden god.

If a man cheerfully feeds the hungry simply because they hunger expecting no reward, he performs an act of acceptable worship, but if he gives to the hungry with the expectation that it will assist him in escapeing divine punishment, or in obtaining mercy the mind performs no true worship.

These simple hints, hastily writtten, without premeditation, or time to review them, may, perhaps enable some to discover whether they are worshiping goodness, the true God, or bestowing their acts on "they know not what."

FOR THE PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.

MESSRS EDITORS:—In looking over the columns of your paper dated Nov. 22, 1849. I saw an article headed, "Ye worship ye no not what;" purporting to be from the Portland Plesure Boat. I regret that the author or publisher of the article would think best to spread such sentiments before an enlightened public, they are evidently fraught with infidelity and directly opposed to the direction in the bible. There are two ideas in the article which lead me to think the author skeptical in sentiment. They are these.

1. That goodness performed by mankind constitutes the true God.

2. That the assembling ourselves together for public worship is fraught with deception, superstition, interest, popular opinion. &c.

To the first I would say, that revelation and reason unite in asserting the existence of a Supreme Being independent of any act of his creatures. In Revelation the very first verse confutes the idea sugest-in the article. In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth, and so on to the creation of man from the dust. See Genesis 1. Reason is alike forcible when we reflect that we exist, and we are not the author of our existence, we are led back to a first cause; and can we then say that goodness performed by creatures is the only true God? Such ideas only go to show the depraved state of the heart, and under a wrong influence we call evil good and good evil, light darknes and darkness light, sweet bitter and bitter sweet &c. And there have been men in all ages of the world who have set themselves up as guides, have nevertheless been a scourge to the world and to the church.

Secondly, that public worship is recognised in the bible, I think no one will pretend to deny. Paul in one of his Epistles exhorts them not to forsake the assembling of themselves together as the manner of some was, evidently showing it a virtue to meet.—The custom of the apostles meeting another evidence. And it is wrong in my opinion to take one passage of scripture to nulify another, as in the article in question. Not content at attempting to sap the fundamental principles of our holy religion but to charge upon the advocates of public worship, duplicty and deception. The motives which prompts individuals to meet in the public assemblies is alike concealed from the author of the article alluded to as well as myself. We have no authority to judge motives, the tree is known by its fruit, and as far as results are to be relied on the advocates of public worship is decidedly preferable; the influence on the community of order and decorum is felt and ascribed to that class even by their opposers.

Another point wich I wish to state is, the unsparing hand with which he deals his blows on the living teacher, whose character above all others should be carfully assailed. That some of them as well as laymen have proved themselves unworthy we pretend not to deny, but this is no reason for condemning them all, but on the contrary strengthens the evidence of the real existence of faithful men; for there must be genuine where there is counterfeit. There which I have no desire to to condemn, such as doing good to our fellow men; but these are externals and partake of the same nature as the religion of the people to whom the expression of our Saviour was directed—"Ye worship ye kown not what."

A Huckster Outdone.

Away down in the smart village of Cincinnati, there vegitates a certain hotel keeper, who for cuteness is "some" you may depend. Having frequently been imposed upon while supplying his bountiful larder with article of geese, by the wide awake "buckeye" hucksters, he deemed it high time to try if cheating was not a game that two could play at. So one morning bright and early, he presented himself before one of the numerous farmers' wagons surrounding the market square with a—

"I s-s-ay friend, g-got any g-g-eese?' (the poor fellow has got Charles lamb's defect of speech.)

Yes, fine lot—'

'W-well, I've g-ot up at my h-h-ouse the all fird-est set of b-b-hoys for g-geese you ever did see, and I want to head 'em off a few w-with some tough ones—can't you pick me out some old h-he-fellows?"

"Well, I don't know but I might find one or two," and so, turning over his pile of poultry, he collected some eight or ten geese, whose claim to the title of "old he-follows" needed no corroborative fact, but might be pronounced clear and unquestionable.

'Mine host,' eyed the progress of segregation with evident satisfaction.

'Are those all the tough ones you've got?'

'Yes and I vow I did not know I had so many.'

'Well,' was the reply, 'I g-guess I'll take the o-other lot.'

ANECDOTE OF A LAWYER.—An attorney on the marriage of his son gave $500, and handed him over a chancery suit with some common law actions.—About two years after, the son asked his father for more business.

"Why, I gave you that capital chancery suit, and then you have got a great many new clients; what more do you want?"

"Yes, sir," replied the son, "but I have wound up that suit, and given my client great satisfaction."

"What! you improvident fool," rejoined the father indignantly, "that suit was in my family for twenty-five years, and would have continued as many years longer, if I had kept it. I shall not encourage such a fellow."

"JUST HIS LUCK."—Snooks was advised to get his life insured. "Won't do it," said he—"it would be just my luck to live forever, if I should." Mrs. Snooks very meekly said—"Well I wouldn't, my dear.,,

MECHANICAL ARTS AND SCIENCES.

D. APPLETON & Co. NEW-YORK, have in course of publication, in parts, price twenty-five cents each, a DICTIONARY OF MACHINES, MECHANICS, ENGINE-WORK, AND ENGINEERING; designed for practical working men and those intended for the engineering profession.—Edited by OLIVER BYRNE, formerly professor of mathematics college of civil engineers, London, author and inventor of "The Calculus of Form," "The New and Improved System of Logarithms," "The Elements of Euclid by Colors," etc. etc. etc.

This work is of large size, containing nearly two thousand pages, upwards of fifteen hundred plates, and six thousand wood-cuts. It will present working drawings and descriptions of the most important machines in the United States. Independent of the results of American ingenuity, it will contain complete practical treatises on mechanics, machinery, engine-work, and engineering; with all that is useful in more than one thousand dollars' worth of folio volumes, magazines, and other books, among which may be mentioned the following—

1. Bibliotheque des Arts Industriels. (Masson, Paris.)
2. Civil Engineer and Architect's Journal. (London)
3. Engineer and Machinist's Assistant. (Blackie, Glasgow.)
4. Publication Industrielle. (Armengaud Aine, Paris.)
5. Jamieson's Mechanics of Fluids.
6. Treatise on Mechanics. (Poisson.)
7. Allgemeine Bauzeitung mit Abbildungen. (Forster, Wien.)
8. Organ fur die Fortschritte des Eisenbahnwesens in technischer Beziehung. (Von Waldegg, Wiesbaden.)
9. Sherwin's Logarithms.

66. Mechanical Principia. [Leonard.]

The great object of this publication is, to place before practical men and students such an amount of theoretical and scientific knowledge, in a condensed form, as shall enable them to work to the best advantage, and to avoid those mistakes which they might otherwise commit. The amount of useful information thus brought together is almost beyond precedent in such works. Indeed, there is hardly any subject within its range which is not treated with such clearness and precision, that even a man of the most ordinary capacity cannot fail of understanding it, and thus learning from it much which it is important for him to know.

From the annexed list of the principal authors and subjects comprised in this work, it is self-evident that all citizens engaged in the practical and useful arts, etc. may derive essential advantages from the possession and study of this publication; the following may be especially designated:

Millwrights.
Moulders and boiler makers.
Artificers in brass, copper and tin.
Cutlers and workers of steel in general.
Carpenters.
Brickmakers.
Workers in ivory, bone, and horn.
Civil engineers, railway contractors, and contractors for earth-work and masonry of every description.
Architects and bridge builders.
Builders, master masons, and brick layers.
Ship builders, masters of vessels, ship carpenters, and others connected with building and docking ships.
Block and pump makers.
Hemp dressers and rope makers.
Manufacturers of linen and cotton fabrics.
Manufacturers of spinning machines, roving machines, card breakers and finishers, drawing frames, willows and pickers, etc. connected with cotton, flax, and wool machinery.
Calenderers, bleachers and calico printers.
Cloth folders and measurers, and persons interested in sewing machinery.
Anchor and chain cable manufacturers.
Cutting and turning tool makers.
Pin and needle makers.
Nail and rivet makers.
Bolt and screw-bolt makers.
Nail cutters.
Coiners.
Leather dressers and curriers.
Manufacturers of great guns and small arms.
Candle makers.
Biscuit and cracker makers.
Lace makers.
Ribbon weavers.
Stone cutters and marble masons.
Dyers, cloth washers and scourers.
Coopers.
Cider and cheese manufacturers.
Crown, crystal, and plate glass makers.
Sugar boilers and refiners, with proprietors of sugar plantations.
Manufacturers of railway, bar, round, ribbon and rod iron.
Wheel, axle and spring makers.
Engine drivers and persons connected with the locomotive generally.
Engineers and captains of steam vessels.
Managers of stationary engines.
Lumber dealers and owners of saw mills.
Veneer cutters.
Owners of planing machinery.
Corn millers, and persons connected with bolting and bran-separating machinery.
Farmers, and persons using grain-shelling and threshing machinery.
Buhl workers, carvers, engravers, and ornament makers in general.
Persons employed in the manufacture of gas.
Makers of copper and lead tubing.
Linen and straw paper makers.
Ship owners, harbor masters, and others interested in dredging machinery.
Well sinkers.
Astronomers, philosophers, and others using philosophical apparatus and instruments.
Miners, engineers, and others interested in pumping engines.
Persons interested in canals and aqueducts.
Warehousemen, and others using hydranlic presses, dynanometric cranes, jack screws, common and feed cranes.
Workers in metals and alloys.
Tin plate workers.
Spring manufacturers.
Wheelwrights, clock makers and horologists.
Etc. etc. etc.

The publishers have expended a large sum of money to get original drawings of machinery in practical use in this country, and have procured almost every work on the subject, whether published in England, France, or Germany, the most essential parts of which being comprised in this Dictionary, render it as perfect and comprehensive as possible. The publishers have endeavored to use great economy in type, so that each page of the work contains at least four times the number of words found in ordinary pages of the same size. This has also secured to each plate working-drawings of ample size and clearness, so that a mechanic may construct accurately any machine described.

The publishers are, in short, determined, regardless of cost, to make the work as complete as possible; and it is hoped every one desirous to obtain the work will procure it as issued in numbers, and thus encourage the enterprise.

The work will be issued in semi-monthly numbers, commencing in January, 1850, and will progress with great regularity.

The whole work will be published in 40 numbers, at 25 cents per number, and completed within the current year, 1850. A liberal discount will be made to agents.

Any one remitting the publishers $10 in advance, shall receive the work through the post-office free of expense.

FROM THE PLEASURE BOAT.

Gentlemen, what helpless Creatures.

What miserable helpless creatures gentlemen are when without funds—almost as helpless as infants. A year or two since a tall well-formed and rather clever-looking young man called on me, and desired me to assist him in obtainining some sort of a situation in which he might earn his living. He was a stranger in the place and was without funds. I asked him what he could do. "O, almost anything," said he. I asked him if he could saw wood, or if he was willing to enter a carpenter's shop and saw boards or shove a fore plane. "O, no," said he, "I was brought up a gentleman—never performed a day's work in my life." Well, thought I, this is a hard customer—call on me to assist him in finding employment and at the same time refuse to work! A Gentleman, indeed! I eyed him from head to foot; he had a frame which, had it been strung with muscles inured to labor, would have performed the labor of a young giant, but being the frame of a gentleman it was worthless. After viewimg the helpless creature with feelings of pity for him, mingled with something almost indescribable toward parents that would suffer a child to grow up so helpless, I inquired what he could do.

He answered that he could write, had some knowledge of book-keeping, and would accept a clerkship in a bank or would go as supercargo in some ship. As these situations were not to be had here, I could see no way in which I could assist him and so we parted.

What a lesson, thought I, for parents who undertake to make GENTLEMEN of their children, and suffer them to grow up in ignorance of all useful occupations, What a pity that rich men cannot have the benefit of such instruction, before their children are sunk in helpless poverty.

A few weeks since a young man called at my office and inquired where he could get something to drink stronger than beer. I told him I had a plenty of it at the house and if he would go in with me he should be welcome to as much as he wished to drink. I told him he was evidently just recovering from a drunken fit, and the drink that I would give him was just what he wanted to cool and invigorate the system, "What is it?" said he eagerly.

Cold water.

"O that isn't what I want," said he; "I want something strong that will blunt my sensibilities and drown my feelings."

I asked him why he wished to make a fool of himself?—why he would drink spirit when he knew it was his greatest enemy?

"Why," said he, "the truth is I am what you may call a broken-down gentleman. I have lost my property—am without money or friends—am among strangers, and have nothing to pay my expenses to my native town, and I want to drown my feelings. destroy my faculties so that I shall not be sensible of suffering."

I tried to encourage him—told him he was yet a young man and might by temperance and industry, yet see better days. I offered to get some kind of employment for him, and asked him if he was willing to work.

'Work?" said he, "how can I work? I never did a day's work in my life. My father was rich, he permitted me to grow up in idleness; he lost his property and died leaving me penniless, and I am miserable.

Turning round, he saw a basket of cakes and some pies on the counter. "I am hungry," said he, "and without money; what can I do.'

"Eat said I, the profit made on these little articles is for the hungry that have not money to buy, it is for that purpose I keop them, eat.

He helped himself to what he wanted, and when he was done he called for water, which he appeared to drink with a good relish.

There, said I, is not that food and water better than strong drink.

"Yes, but I do not always have it, all do not treat me as you do, and when I am hungry I can beg strong drink easier than I can food, and one glass drowns my sufferings, so I resort to it.

As his body began to feel comfortable, his mind began to rally, and I had a long conversation with him. He departed promising me that he would try to be steady and learn to work.

I thought at the time, that if parents who are trying to make useless, helpless gentleman of their sons, had seen and heard him, they would have discovered their own folly and begun to teach them to provide for themselves by some honest and productive employment. It is for their good that I have written this.

Better would it be for their children, to teach them to labor honestly for a living, and then turn them peniless into the street, than to permit them to grow up in ignorance and then bestow millions upon them. I say IGNORANCE because, if one has all the book-learning in the world, and knows not how to perform any useful labor with his hands he is ignorant indeed.

The children of rich men who are brought up in luxury and idleness seldom become distinguished in any thing great and good. If we study the early history of all the great and good men that have arisen in this nation, we shall find that not less than seven in every ten were once poor boys, and arose by the force of their own industry, while thousands of the sons of the rich, who enjoyed all the means of becoming great and good, have sunk in the ruinous gulf of vice.

Miserable helpless things! thes modern gentlemen, when they have not funds enough to swindle their living from the hands of honest industry!

FROM THE PORTLAND PLEASURE BOAT.

"Ye worship ye know not what."

Such was the language addressed by an ancient preacher to a people who were very righteous in their own estimation, and very zealous in the performance of what they regarded as worship. And this language may with all propriety be addressed to a large majority of the most zealous worshipers in the present age. Very many worship the creatures of their own imaginations; they picture to themselves some sort of a personage in the form of man, seated on a throne beyond the clouds, and worship that from childhood to old age, while trampling goodness the true God under foot. All their prayers are addressed to this picture; they have no idea of any other God, and though they zealously attend church from childhood to old age, they are never once told of their error, for their teachers themselves know no better way. The blind lead the blind, all fall in the ditch of error together, and "worship they know not what."

Others entertain no definite ideas of the form and size of the supreme, but have only a confused idea of his character. They see no form nor comeliness in him, nothing desirable, but have been taught that he is a dreadful angry, wicked being, and if they do not in some way appease his wrath, he will finally cast them down to the bottomless pit; so they perform such unmeaning ceremoncies as their leaders require them to, for the purpose of escaping the dreadful suffering; the fear of hell is the main spring of all their religious acts. They are generally selfish, have little love for goodnes, see no beauty in their religion, and were it not for the fear of that angry being, that bug-bear of priest craft, they would never trouble themselves about religion. Such "worship they know not what."

There are others again who have no definite ideas of either the form or character of the supreme power; but have attended the idolatrous meetings from childhood, and witnessed the ceremonies. These delight in the sound of the church music, take pleasure in seeing and being seen at the religious gatherings and never learn that these acts are not the sum and substance of devotion. These too, "worship they know not what."

There are some who wish to be popular, and so join with the multitude in their worthless ceremones; there are others who desire employment or custom in their occupations or trades, and attend church to gain favor with the people. All these "worship they know not what." There are some who have sincere hankerings for pure happiness, but have been taught that these desires can be satisfied only after death, and that, on condition that they follow the directions of their priests who burden them with forms and ceremonies that mean nothing. These also worship they knw not what.

We might continue the discription of false worshipers to almost any length, for very few know what they worship, but the above must suffice.

Now the sincere inquirer may desire to know what is the true worship, how it is acceptably performed, &c., that he may come to know what he worships. To this I answer, let the sincere love goodness and be directed by this love in all their doings. Let them live to do good and every act will be an act of worship. He who gives but a cup of cold water to the thirsty from a love to good, performs a more acceptible act of worship than he who dabbles out bread and wine to his flock for form's sake, or as a religious ceremony. Everything which true worsip requires is useful—is designed in some way to benefit man or beast, and add to the sum of happiness. He who is kind to his brute from a love of kindness or a principle of goodness, though an infidel in profession, performs a more acceptable act of worship than he who prays in the temple while his poor brute is suffering from cold or hunger at the door. Nothing is true worship unless it does good. If a man goes into the water from a love of cleanliness, and purifies his body he performs an act of acceptable worship, but if he enters the water and is immersed regarding the act merely as religious, performed to bring him into favor with God, it is only an act of idolatry, though it is true, the washing may benefit the body, but as the thing was done not to purify the body, but only blindly as a religious ceremony, there is no more worship in it than there would be in bowing down to a wooden god.

If a man cheerfully feeds the hungry simply because they hunger expecting no reward, he performs an act of acceptable worship, but if he gives to the hungry with the expectation that it will assist him in escapeing divine punishment, or in obtaining mercy the mind performs no true worship.

These simple hints, hastily writtten, without premeditation, or time to review them, may, perhaps enable some to discover whether they are worshiping goodness, the true God, or bestowing their acts on "they know not what."

FOR THE PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.

MESSRS EDITORS:—In looking over the columns of your paper dated Nov. 22, 1849. I saw an article headed, "Ye worship ye no not what;" purporting to be from the Portland Plesure Boat. I regret that the author or publisher of the article would think best to spread such sentiments before an enlightened public, they are evidently fraught with infidelity and directly opposed to the direction in the bible. There are two ideas in the article which lead me to think the author skeptical in sentiment. They are these.

1. That goodness performed by mankind constitutes the true God.

2. That the assembling ourselves together for public worship is fraught with deception, superstition, interest, popular opinion. &c.

To the first I would say, that revelation and reason unite in asserting the existence of a Supreme Being independent of any act of his creatures. In Revelation the very first verse confutes the idea sugest-in the article. In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth, and so on to the creation of man from the dust. See Genesis 1. Reason is alike forcible when we reflect that we exist, and we are not the author of our existence, we are led back to a first cause; and can we then say that goodness performed by creatures is the only true God? Such ideas only go to show the depraved state of the heart, and under a wrong influence we call evil good and good evil, light darknes and darkness light, sweet bitter and bitter sweet &c. And there have been men in all ages of the world who have set themselves up as guides, have nevertheless been a scourge to the world and to the church.

Secondly, that public worship is recognised in the bible, I think no one will pretend to deny. Paul in one of his Epistles exhorts them not to forsake the assembling of themselves together as the manner of some was, evidently showing it a virtue to meet.—The custom of the apostles meeting another evidence. Not content at attempting to sap the fundamental principles of our holy religion but to charge upon the advocates of public worship, duplicty and deception. The motives which prompts individuals to meet in the public assemblies is alike concealed from the author of the article alluded to as well as myself. We have no authority to judge motives, the tree is known by its fruit, and as far as results are to be relied on the advocates of public worship is decidedly preferable; the influence on the community of order and decorum is felt and ascribed to that class even by their opposers.

Another point wich I wish to state is, the unsparing hand with which he deals his blows on the living teacher, whose character above all others should be carfully assailed. That some of them as well as laymen have proved themselves unworthy we pretend not to deny, but this is no reason for condemning them all, but on the contrary strengthens the evidence of the real existence of faithful men; for there must be genuine where there is counterfeit. There are some ideas advanced by the author of the article which I have no desire to to condemn, such as doing good to our fellow men; but these are externals and partake of the same nature as the religion of the people to whom the expression of our Saviour was directed—"Ye worship ye kown not what."

A Huckster Outdone.

Away down in the smart village of Cincinnati, there vegitates a certain hotel keeper, who for cuteness is "some" you may depend. Having frequently been imposed upon while supplying his bountiful larder with article of geese, by the wide awake "buckeye" hucksters, he deemed it high time to try if cheating was not a game that two could play at. So one morning bright and early, he presented himself before one of the numerous farmers' wagons surrounding the market square with a—

"I s-s-ay friend, g-got any g-g-eese?' (the poor fellow has got Charles lamb's defect of speech.)

Yes, fine lot—'

'W-well, I've g-ot up at my h-h-ouse the all firdest set of b-b-hoys for g-geese you ever did see, and I want to head 'em off a few w-with some tough ones—can't you pick me out some old h-he fellows?"

"Well, I don't know but I might find one or two," and so, turning over his pile of poultry, he collected some eight or ten geese, whose claim to the title of "old he-follows" needed no corroborative fact, but might be pronounced clear and unquestionable.

'Mine host,' eyed the progress of segregation with evident satisfaction.

'Are those all the tough ones you've got?'

'Yes and I vow I did not know I had so many.'

'Well,' was the reply, 'I g-guess I'll take the o-other lot.'

ANECDOTE OF A LAWYER.—An attorney on the marriage of his son gave $500, and handed him over a chancery suit with some common law actions.—About two years after, the son asked his father for more business.

"Why, I gave you that capital chancery suit, and then you have got a great many new clients; what more do you want?"

"Yes, sir," replied the son, "but I have wound up that suit, and given my client great satisfaction."

"What! you improvident fool," rejoined the father indignantly, "that suit was in my family for twenty-five years, and would have continued as many years longer, if I had kept it. I shall not encourage such a fellow."

"JUST HIS LUCK."—Snooks was advised to get his life insured. "Won't do it," said he—"it would be just my luck to live forever, if I should." Mrs. Snooks very meekly said—"Well I wouldn't, my dear.,,

PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Thursday; April 11, 1850.

☞ Mr Albert D. Drake is our authorised agent to receive subscriptions and advertisments.

☞ Our subscribers who have changed their residence will please give notice where they may be found.

THE ELECTIONS.—But little interest appears to have been taken in the town Elections in this county so far as we hear. In this town there were only 80 votes polled which elects the entire Whig ticket, as there were no opposition. In Westfield there were only 40 votes polled. In the four Wards in Newark only 856 as we learn by the Advertiser. In warren Township Somerset Co. a part of both tickets were elected.

The great mass of the people are interested in the cause of liberty—in having liberal, enlightened, humane, just and equal laws. The common sense of mankind is all-sufficient to teach them that under such laws only can they be prosperous contented and happy; yet how wide of common sense they wander in accomplishing this all important object.

Although our government is professedly founded on the equal imprescriptible and inalienable rights of all men; although all admit that the people are the only source of political power, and that in the adoption of the Constitution or organization of the government, no man was or can be deprived of his equal rights, yet what is the result of this knowledge in this boasted land of liberty, in this 74th year of our Independence, and how nearly do the people enjoy equal rights? Is not their present condition a burlesque, a mockery of these sacred rights, and do not the people's representatives, even under a solemn oath to the contrary, violate their letter and spirit by the enactment of laws which confer special privileges on the few at the expense of the equal rights and by the oppression of the many? Review the acts of our recent legislature and discover if you can what they have done towards promoting liberal, enlightened, humane, just and equal laws.

Was it by enacting that this township should vote by ballot and repealing it in that? Was it by enacting that the people of one township should have the privilege (!) of raising what money they choose to educate their own children while other townships were not given such power? Was it by forcing a charter on a people (of Camden) who repudiated it as tyranical in its provisions, while they were denied that of their choice? Was it by retaining that absurd and anti republican distinction of the rights and privileges of a citizen. a property qualification--a distinction which gives to the rich rights and privileges which it denies to the poor? Was it by retaining that system of taxation which taxes the poor widow's cow while the bonds and mortgages held by the rich are suffered to go free? To sum up the whole, was it by passing the special acts which they did pass while those of a general character, which confered only equal rights, and which the people everywhere demanded were denied? What is a constitution for if not to protect all in their equal rights; and if it does so protect them whence comes the power to confer special privileges; and if it does confer special privileges what interest can the mass of the people have to support that which deprives them of that which it declares them inalienably entitled to?

Thus also does Congress act. With a professed recognition by it of the equal inalienable right of all men to form a government which will best secure their happiness, as asserted in the Declararion of Independence, and as adopted by all the States as the the fundamental basis of their Constitutions; yet now forsooth because California has seen fit to carry out this principle in the formation of her Constitution by interdicting Slavery, she shall not be admited into the Union. Thus, although the people of California have done nothing but what they had an undoubted right to do, and which every State in the Union has done before her, yet grave Senators are gravely arguing the point, on this ground too, of her admisibility into the Union! Even the great expounder of the Constitution (!) the godlike Daniel! the representative of the free State of Massachusetts, gravely arguing and compromising with Slavery! An ex-POUNDER of the Constitution indeed! Can it be possible that such men would sell themselves to the devil! (Slavery) to gratify their ambition! What other conclusion can be drawn when the Senator of a free State, and the expounder of the Constitution par excellence, gravely proposes to divide Texas into four Slave States and admit them into the Union to preserve the ballance of power! What a proposition from an expounder of the Constitution!—Preserve the ballance of power indeed! We trust the people of these United States—the bone and sinew of the country, the farmers mechanics and laboring men—those who raise our bread, clothe our bodies, build our houses, ships and railroads—those by whose labor our taxes are paid, therefore those who sustain the government and in whom the power of creating altering or abolishing it is inherent, WILL preserve its ballance and preserve it too on the side of LIBERTY.

If we understand the signs of the times, all the political capital that can be made by the bluster and threats to divide the Union, and all that can be made by a proposition to divide and admit Texas to preserve the ballance of power in favor of Slavery, we think the expounder of the Constitution, or others who may desert the natural and inaliedable rights of their fellow men—the cause of Liberty for that of Slavery—to play the same game, will be welcome to all they can make.

On our first page will be found an article entitled, "Ye worship ye know not what," which we republish in order that some stristures made thereon may be better understood; they will also be found on the first page signhed S. R., who says:—

There are two ideas in the article which lead me to think the author skeptical in sentiment viz:

1. That goodness performed by mankind constitutes the true God.

2. That assembling ourselves together for public worship is fraught with deception, superstition, interest, popular opinion &c.

On these inferences and charges we would make the following remarks:

If the arguments formed on the text "Ye worship ye know not what" are true, and are applied as they were applied by their author, as we conceive them to be, then it matters not what may be the authors sentiments, neither do those sentiments if skeptical alter the truth of what is advanced. We notice this inference of S. R. and condemn it, because it is a very easy and therefore a very common mode of reply to whatever may be advanced against the popular errors of the day, either religious or political, and as there is no argument in it we dismiss it with this bare allusion to it.

S. R. also argues the existence of God and refers to the first Chap. Gen. for proof; here to he infers too much, the article nowhere denies the existence of God but the reverse, as it goes to show what is his character—"God is Love." Christ did truly scourge the world and the church, as both were and still are the reverse of Love, and therefore the text still applies.

He also argues and refers to Paul's Epistles for proof, that mankind should assemble together for worship. Here to we conceive he has infered too much, as the article nowhere condemns worship, but proves that also by showing in what true worships consists. It is only false, improper and superstitions worship which the article condemns, and surely no one will contend that there is no false worship, no superstition, no hypocracy, which alone the article condemns—therefore it does not condemn all but only those who who worship they know not what.

He also asks; "does one passage of scripture nulify another?" As the article nowhere makes this assertion, and as it is a question of his own asking we will leave him to answer it.

Therefore, we trust that S. R. will again read the article, and more especially as he professes to agree with what the author does advance—"doing good to our fellow men"—and be ne more frightened by a sheaf of straw of his own raking and binding.

Congress.

In the Senate, on Monday, Mr. Benton made a strong speech in favor of taking California by herself without taking in any other subject. To this Mr. Clay rejoined; Mr. Foote then spoke in favor of his Compromise Committee, and after some further discussion by Messrs. Cass, Hale, Douglas and Smith, a motion to postpone the reference of Mr. Bell's motion was carried.

In the House Mr. Vinton attempted to get through a resolution authorizing the President to detail thirty seamen and such officers as he may think proper to join Mr. Grinnell's exepedition in search of Sir John Franklin, but the attempt was unsuccessful.—The Slavery question was then taken up' and Mr. Wallace of S. C. freed his mind on that subject.—The burden of his discource was that the non-Extension of Slavery is abolition in disguise. Mr. Johnson of Ky. followed in a speech against seperating the admission of California from the Territorial question, and pledging Kentucky to fight if she is dishonered by Nothern fanatics.

Mr. Kaufman tried to get a vote of the House against the movements in New-Mexico for an organization of that Territory independent of Texas, but failed. Finally a motion was made by Mr. Conger of N. Y. to cut down postage to a uniform rate of 2 cents on paid and 5 on unpaid letters and to abolish the Franking Privilege. The Post Office Committee promised soon to introduce a bill to the same purport, and the subject was then dropped.

[Tribune.

☞ Col. Fremont in a letter to the Pacific Rail-Road Convention in speaking of its practicability says:

A party of 300 men, skillfully directed, with the assistance of three or four practical road engineers, would be sufficient to lay out the whole routes, and clear and open a common road in the course of the next Spring and Summer, so as to be passable for wagons and carriages, and as rapidly traversed as any of the common roads in the United States.

The weather in these high mountains and deep vallies is of a character adapted to such localities—extremely cold on the mountains, while temperate in the valleys. I have seen it storming for days together on the mountains in a way to be destructive to all animal life exposed to it, while in the valley there would be pleasant sunshine, and the animals feeding on nutritious grass. Beyond the Rocky Mountains, the cold is less and the snows become a less and more transient obstacle.

These are my views of a route for the road or roads, (a common one is first wanted,) from the Mississippi to the Pacific. It fulfills in my opinion all the conditions of a route for a national thoroughfare.

1. It is direct. The course is almost a straight line from end to end. St Louis is beeween 38—39; San Francisco is about the same; the route is between these paralells, or nearly between them, the whole way.

2. It is central to territory. It is through the territorial center west of the Mississippi, and its protongation to the Atlantic ocean, would be central to the States east of that river. It is also central to business and population, and unites the greatest commercial point in the Valley of the Mississippi with the greatest commercial point on the coast of the Pacific.

3. It combines the advantages for making and preserving the road, wood, water and soil, for inhabitation and cultivation.

4 It is a healthy route. No disease of any kind upon it; and the valetudinarian might travel it in his own vehicle, on horse, or even on foot, for the mere restoration of health and recovery of spirits

In conclusion, I have to say that I believe in the practicability of this work, and that every national consideration requires it to be done and to be done at once, and as a national work, by the United States.

LATER FROM CALIFORNIA.

Arrival of the Cherokee and Empire City.

The Cherokee has been absent from New York 20 days, and has sailed during that time 4,200 miles, and laid in port at Chagres and Kingston nearly 2 1-2 days. This is making the voyage in quicker time than it has ever before been done in.

The Legislature of California is in session, but proceeds slowly with the business before it. Several of its members have resigned, finding Legislation more honorable than pleasant or profitable. The Inaugural of Governor Burnet, is a rigorous and intelligent document. A Pacific Steam Navigation Company, of which T. O. Larkin, Esq., Consul under the Mexican rule, is principal, has been organized at San Francisco, and $700,000 subscribed by Californians. Its design is to connect at Panama with the Howard and Son's Empire City Chagres line. Mr. Larkin has been deputed to purchase, or contract for the building of four steamers of 2,000 tons each at New York. The inducement to the formation of this company, is the dissatisfaction felt by the Californians towards already existing lines.

The California Journals were discussing the President's Message, the Parkman murder, and a prospective duel between Colonels Bissel and Davis. The Congressional discussion upon the California question, had not reached them. The President's Message was liked. To give a little insight to the amount of gold and silver crossing the Isthmus of Panama, we take the transportation of three months from the first of October to the beginning of the present year. Allowing less than one fourth of the carriage to private individuals, the sum reaches $9,362,844, whice is probably less than the actual amount. Of this sum about four millions came from South America. The difficulty with the Chilians has passed over.

In the election for Senator for the District of San Francisco, held Feb. 2d. to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Hon. G. B. Post, Elcan Heydenfeldt, Esq. the whig nominee, was chosen by a plurality of 245 over the highest Democratic candidate.

The following are the salaries fixed upon by the General Assembly for the State Officers of California, viz:—

Governor	$10,000	Chief Justice and each Associate Jus's	$10,000
Secretary of State,	7,000	Each Dist. Att'y	2,000
Controller of State,	8,000	State Translator,	8,000
Treasurer	8,000	Governor's Private Secretar.	1,000
Attorney Geceral	7,000
Surveyor,	7,000

☞ We perceive by the papers that Andrew M. Webster, Esq, of Plainfield, was admitted by the Supreme Court at Trenton last week, as Attorney at Law. He intends, we understand, to locate himself at Newark.

The reading of a good and well conducted newspaper, even for the short space of one quarter of the year brings more sound instruction, and leaves a deeper impression, than would be acquired, probably, at the best school in twelve months.

PORTLAND (Me.) PLEASURE BOAT.—On our first page will be found two articles from this independent paper which we commend to the attention ot our readers. We would also take this occasion to say that this is one of the very few papers which has an opinion of its own, or at least that DARE express it; therefore one of the very few which are of any real benefit to mankind.

☞ The city debt of Newark is $61,500. The citizens are about retrenching their expenses by refusing to light the city at night. In Trenton it is proposed to reduce expenses by withdrawing the moral and intellectual light from the minds of our children!—[Trentonian.

THE PARKMAN MURDER—THE REWARD PAID LITTLEFIELD.—The family of the late Dr. Parkman, to-day, April 6, paid, voluntarily, to Mr. Littlefield, the $3,000 reward offered by them, soon after Mr Parkman's disappearance.

OHIO STATE CONSTITUTION.—The convention for revising the State constitution will be democratic by a considerable majority.

Abbott Lawrence is stated to have taken the elegant mansion of Lord Cadogan, opposite green park in London, at a rent of $10,000 per annum—being $1000 more than his whole salary.

PROVIDE FOR WIDOWS AND ORPHANS.—A law passed the Georgia Legislature, at its last session giving to the widow and child, or children, of any person dying insolvent, $100 worth of the property of said insolvent, free and clear of all claims for debts due by him.

Of all hallucinations that of the rich man living in dread of coming to want is the most pitiful and humiliating. The present Superintendent of the Massachusetts Hospital for the Insane, says that in all the cases of insanity that have come under his notice, produced by a fear of coming to want, the patients have been rich men! In no case has the man of humble means been visited by this form of insanity.—Ponder that, ye who hug your gold!—[Boston Trav.

FEMALE SUFFRAGE.—A funny article on this subject in the Boston Transcript, has the following "views":—

"Imagine a whig husband and a democratic wife, a free-soil uncle and hunker aunt, a liberty party cousin, a colonization nephew, a slaveholding niece, and three blooming daughters, who have gone over, bodice and bustle, to the unterrified democracy, and for the first time in their lives, will vote in pink muslin frocks at the next election—imagine this group gathered round the same table, tea and muffins; Grace by Mr Garrison, and Abby lookiug in at the window. How long would a well built house probably stand, divided thus against itself?

"The influence of women will be clearly exhibited in joint committees of both sexes on the subject of the Union. By the influence of our Nothern women, some of the most violent and cantankerous of the southern chivalry may be tamed, and taught to travel as pleasantly as a pig in a string Miss Frizzle said, the other day, that the Hon Mr.———, was a very great man, and nobody denied it; but she "shouldn't be the leastest mite afraid on him upon committee onthe state of the Union."

"Mrs. Rollock said she should like, for once in her life, to be in a committee of the whole."

JERSEY CITY TAXES.—The taxes for 1849 were $15,000. Population, 6,384.

What kind of a face should an auctioneer have? A face that is FOR-BIDDING.

There are two ways of gaining a reputation; to be praised by honest men, or abused by rogues.

Why did Job sleep cold o' nights? Because he had miserable comforters.

"I'll let you off easy this time," as the horse said when he threw his rider into the mud.

☞ A Coon, weighing sixteen pounds, was recently captured near Scrabbletown Bucks co. Pa.—[Phila. Sun

A "Coon," weighing one hundred and seventy five pounds, was recently caugh in Washington City by a number of southern gentlemen, who were on the look out for marketable commodities of the kind. CONDITION POWDERS.

The most Extraordinary medicine in the World for Horses.

It is cheaper, and warranted to possess more active, safe and beneficial properties, than any other for the cure of distemper, coughs, slobbering, preventing founders, fevers, hide bound, swelled legs, humors of the skin, mange, surfeit, obstructed urine, loss of appetite, indigestion, general debility, rough coat, and all impurities of the system, and blood, and want of condition.

The ease and safety with which they are given, renders them an invaluable and convenient medicine and one that should be kept on hand by every Farmer and horse owner. For racing or trotting horses, they are worth the purse, as they strengthen the wind, give an elasticity and fleetness to the motion, and invigorate the whole frame. They have received the acknowledgments of thousands of the best and most celebrated farriers and horsemen, as a safe and superior medicine, and are universally approved and recommended by every one that uses them. For Milch Cows they are indispensible, as they remove all obstructions in the milk veins or passages, and cause an abundauce of fine rich milk. ☞ Prepared and sold wholesale and retail, by W. H. COFFINS AT REDUCED PRICES.

THE subscriber would call the attention of the public to his complete assortment of Coffins, where all the different sizes are finished and ready for use at a moments warning; they are made of Mahogony, Black Walnut and Cherry, and finished in every style, so that all can be suited, also a superior style of stained ones, which he offers remarkably low; he has hitherto defered giving his prices, but as he has understood that there is some misrepresentation in regard to his prices, he deems this sufficient excuse to the public for to say that for a large size Black Walnut Coffin including hearse in attendance he has $6, Mahogany $14, Cherry $6, and small ones accordingly, tight case made in coffin style $1,75. By leaving the order with him, the sexton of either of the churches will be seen if required, and all necessary arrangements made without any extra expense.

J. W. S. MARTIN, Principal.

HE has given up the idea of Cuba being annexed this fall, consequently he has made up his mind to stay a little longer at his old stand adjoining Webstor & Marsh's store, where he offers a new and splendid assortment of Cabinet Furniture, unequalled in this or any of the neighboring towns for stability or neatness of finish, patterns being all new, and we advise all who wish to be fitted out with such articles as he offers, to make their purchases of him instead of going out of the place, do not forget the minerel and you will get a bargain as sure as the whale swallowed Jonah. Arnica LINIMENT

A CERTAIN CURE FOR

RHEUMATISM!

SORE THROAT, BURNS, SCALDS, PAINS IN THE LIMBS, CHEST, SIDE, AND BACK, SPRAINS, BRUISES, CRAMPS, CHILBLAINS, ETC., ETC., ETC.

Price, Twenty-Five Cents.

This newly-invented oleaginous preparation of ARNICA has been, before offering it to the public, satisfactorily tested by several of our most respectable physicians, who were also made acquainted with the ingredients of which it is composed, and the peculiar process of compounding them. So confident is the inventor of its efficacy, that he has authorized every agent—in case it does not prove itself as represented—to take back any part of the bottle and return the full price of it.

The ARNICA LINIMENT will be found more penetrating, and to relieve the most acute pain in less time, than any other external remedy; at the same time it will not irritate the skin or cause it to smart, even if badly broken, as is not unfrequently the case with Burns and Scalds, but will remove the fire and cause the injured part to heal so rapidly as seldom to leave any scar.

Most, if not all, other liniments contain some irritating ingredient, such as pepper, spirits of hartshorn, oil of vitriol, muriatic acid, (spirits of salt,) combined with oil or alcohol, which cause the skin to smart very much, and the second application to be greatly dreaded, particularly by children; and the opinion is generally entertained that the more a liniment causes the flesh to burn and smart, the more good it will do. But this we are convinced is a very great mistake, and results in doing more injury than good: as, for instance, with SPRAINS, BRUISES, BURNS, SCALDS, CHILBLAINS, or any inflammation on or near the surface of the skin. All such exciting embrocations must naturally tend to increase the disease and prolong the cure.

The ARNICA LINIMENT requires neither true nor fictitious testimonials to recommend it, after one trial.

GREAT AMERICAN REMEDY.

Vegetable Dyspepsia Bitters.

TO THE PUBLIC,

DR HUTCHINGS would call the attention of all afflicted with dyspepsia, and the various disorders arising from a diseased stomach, to his remedy therefor. His DYSPEPSIA BITTERS will be found, on trial, to contain every property requisite to restore the disordered stomach to a healthy action: to reproduce the lost appetite of the patient, and do away with the periodical nervous headache and general debility consequent on this afflicting disease. Thousands have tested its efficacy, and thousands more are now under treatment; and not one solitary case of failure has yet been reported to him. This is consolatory, and urges him on in his efforts to relieve poor suffering humanity. He could fill a volume with certificates of those who have been permanently cured; but he conceives the testimony of a few well-known citizens will answer every purpose. The reader will find, on looking over the following testimonials, they are not "got up" for the occasion; but bona fide letters from gentlemen who can be seen at any time at their places of business.

The following Certificate is from M. B. Brady, the Celebrated Daguerreotypist:

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness, I was advised to take Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me. I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia. M. B. BRADY,
No. 205 Broadway, N. Y.

From Luther B. Wyman, Esq., late President of the New York Masical Society, now of Brooklyn.

The undersigned was afflicted with the Dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half during a greater portion of which time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself, until he was recommended to try Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, he very soon derived benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well.

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of Hutchings' Bitters for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine.

L. B. WYMAN, 38 Burling Slip.

New York, Sept. 3. 1849.

Dear Sir—My wife having been a great sufferer from dyspepsia, low spirits, palpitation of the heart, and having been cured as I believe by your Bitters, I most cheerfully attest their efficacy: her case was a bad one. In the space of four months she lost her strength and thirty-five pounds of flesh; was compelled to abandon her household affairs; there seemed but little probability of a cure until she began to take your bitters; in one week she was greatly relieved, and in three weeks she was perfectly well, and has since gained thirty-pounds. You are at liberty to use this if it will at all further your laudable purpose of circulating this valuable remedy.

With respect, NATHAN SAYRE, No 61 Fourth-st

The Christian and his Echo.

True faith produced love to God and man,
Say, Echo, is not that the Gospel plan?
The Gospel plan.

Must I my faith and love to Jesus show
By doing good to all, both friend and foe?
Both friend and foe.

But, if a brother hates and treats me ill,
Must I return him good and love him still?
Love him still.

If he my failings watches to reveal,
Must I his faults as carefully conceal?
As carefully conceal.

But if my name and character he blast,
And cruel malice, too, a long time last:
And if I sorrow and affliction know
He love to add unto my cup of woe;
In this uncommon, this peculiar case,
Sweet Echo, say, must I still love and bless?
Still love and bless.

Whatever usage ill I may receive,
Must I be patient still, and still forgive?
Be patient still and still forgive.

Why, Echo, how is this? Thou'rt sure a dove:
Thy voice shall teach me nothing else but love.
Nothing else but love.

Amen! With all my heart, then be it so;
'Tis all delightful, just, and good, I know:
And now to practice I'll directly go.
Directly go.

Things being so, whoever me reject,
My gracious God me surely will protect.
Surely will protect.

Henceforth I'll roll on him my every care,
And then both friend & foe embrace in prayer.
Embrace in prayer.

Echo, enough! Thy counsels to mine ear
Are sweeter than the flowers the dew-drop tear:
Thy wise, instructive lessons please me well;
I'll go and practice them. Farewell, farewell.
Practice them. Farewell, farewell.

[Journal of Commerce.

☞ Governor Fish, of New York, has signed the Homestead Exemtion act, and it is now a law. We copy the following on the subject from the N. Y. Tribune.

We trust that among the fruits of this Exemption will be greater circumspection and discrimination in granting credits. Credit is one of the best things man has devised, and about the worst absued. Thousands live on credit who have no right to any such thing. None but an honest man ough to be able to pass his word instead of coin—a rogue's word is not worth its face, no matter how rich he may be. No one should have facility to run in debt for the means of ostentatious display, of sensual gratification or of hazardous adventure. 'Earn before you spend' should be the general rule, and credit should be extended mainly to those who use it to fit themselves with the means and implements of useful, productive labor. If it were henceforth impossible for the great mass of our farmers and mechanics to run up store bills, it would prove a general blessing.

We trust that among the fruits of this Exemption will also be a more universal desire, a more self-denying endeavor, to own and enjoy Homes. Adequate homes are as yet so cheap in this country when compared with their cost in Europe that the general apathy and carelessness of our people with regard to the possession of freeholds is deplorable. Almost any young man who knows how to work at twenty-one might at twenty-six own a cottage and lot if a city mechanic, or a tolerable dwelling and forty to one hundred and sixty acres of fair land if a farmer, if he would really and steadily try. It is not the thing to marry and take your bride to some other man's house—it is not fairly taking her HOME. If our young men would earnestly, consistently TRY to have a home of their own for such occasions, there need no great proportion of them come short of it. But to effect anything they must try thoroughly—put aside frolics and balls, save rarely—eschew idleness, pitch the 'sparkling glass' sheer overboard and send the tobacco or cigar box spinning after it.—And will not the assurance that if they hereafter acquire homes, no reverse of fortune, no unlucky endorsement, can turn them out of the premises so made their own, impel thousands to new exertions to secure Homes? We believe it—almost know it. Free Homes for ever!

☞ From returns lately made to the Chief of Poliece, in New York City, it appears that over eighteen thousand people are crowded together in underground basements—the number of such basements occupied by them being 3,742—of which about one-half have but one room, and the number of occupants averaging something over five to a basement. Nearly one-third of these are classified as dirty in person, and as occupying basements of the same description.

☞ A young man feeling restless in church, leaned forward and addressed an old gentleman thus—

'Pray, sir, can you tell me a rule without an exception?'

'Yes, sir,' he replied, 'a gentleman always behaves well in church.'

THE ANGLO SAXON RACE.—Mr. Elihu Burritt says, in the Christian Citizen, that the Anglo Saxon race numbers sixty millions of human beings.—He estimates, if no great physical revolution supervenes to check its propagation, that in less than one hundred and fifty years it will number eight hundred millions of souls—all speaking the same language, centred to the same literature and religion, and exhibiting all "inherent and inalienable characteristics."

Gratitude of a Chinese Merchant.

An English merchant by the name of C——, resided in Canton and Macao, where a sudden reverse of fortune reduced him from a state of affluence to the grertest necessity. A Chinese merchant, named Chinqua, to whom he had formerly rendered service, gratefully offered him an immediate loan of ten thousand dollars, which he accepted, and gave his bond for the amouut. This the Chinese immediately threw into the fire, saying, "When you, my friend, first came to China, I was a poor man—you took me by the hand; and assisting my honest endeavors, made me rich. Our destiny is now reversed—I see you poor, while I am blessed with affluence.'

The bystanders had snatched the bond from the flames. The gentleman, sensibly affected by such generosity, pressed his friend to take the security, which he did, and then effectually destroyed it. The disciple of Confucius beholding the increased distress it occasioned, said he would accept of his watch, or any little valuable, as a memorial of their friendship. The gentleman immediately presented his watch; and Chinqua, in return, gave him an old iron seal, saying, 'Take this seal—it is one I have long used, and possesses no intrinsic value; but as you are going to India, to look after your outstanding concerns, should fortune further persecute you, draw upon me for any sum of money you may need, sign it with your own hand, and seal it with this signet, and I will pay the money.'—[Hunt's Merchants' Magazine.

TRUTH.—Truth courts investigation but error shrinks from scrutiny. Truth fears no evils from the most rigid examination, but error always fears the consequence. Truth is immutable, and will stand criticism. Truth, like its author, is eternal, and will exist admits the wreck of matter and the crash of worlds, while error will be swept away with the refuge of lies. The more you examine truth, like gold the brighter it shines. Truth is never tarnished by inspection, but discovers the more splendor. Any system which shrinks from scrutiny discovered corruption in its premises, and is unworthy the attention of an intelligent mind. A certain writer has said with the utmost propriety:

'He that wili not reason is a bigot; ho that cannot reason is afool; and he that dares not reason is a slave."

WASHING MADE EASY.—Those who engage in the pursuit of washing under difficulties may find the following worth a trial. It is the system about which mysterious advertisements have of late appeared so frequently.

Dissolve 1-4 lb. of lime in boiling water, straining twice through a flannel bag; dissolve separately 1-2 lb. of brown soap and 1-2 lb. of soda—boil the three together. Put six gallons of water into the boiler, and when boiling add the mixture The linens, which must have been steeped in cold water for twelve hours, are wrung out, any stains rubbed with soap, and put into the boiler, where they must boil for thirty-five minutes. They are then drawn, (the liquor being preserved, as it can be used three times,) placed in a tub and clear boiling water poured over it. Rub them out, rinse them out in cold water and they are ready for drying.

NOT BAD.—The SANDUSKY CITY (Ohio) MIRROR is responsible for the following:

A hard case of a subscriber, to whom the publishers of the MIRROR had sent the weekly paper on credit, was at last dropped from the list—all ordinary measures of collection having failed. Our agent was encountered the other day by the delinquent's wife, who wrathfully insisted that "she knew what was newspaper law—that she did. Mr. Mills was BOUND to send the paper UNTIL ALL ARREARAGES WERE PAID!"

Perversion of Religion.

How much injury has been done to the cause of true religion by the austere and gloomy associations which have been connected with bigots and enthusiasts! How often do we see children brought up to discover nothing but what is harsh and repulsive in a faith which is essentially the source of a divine and constant cheerfulness! Is it not natural that, under such circumstances, that they should imbibe a distaste for what, rightly understood, would be their joy and their refuge? Instead of teaching us to regard our Creator as that benignant and gracious being which natural and revealed religion assures us that He is, how many set up the phantom of their own diseased or frightened fancy, and would have us bow down to it, as to the only true God! Oh, human frailty and human inconsistency! that, professing to hate idolatry, art subject, unconsciously, to more degrading idolatry than that which prostrates itself before images of wood and stone! Let no man, however, argue against rellgion from its abuses; for truly has it been said, that "religion and priests have the same connection with each oth- as justice and attorneys."—[Literary American.

SEEK AND FIND—Dr. B. was walking down Broad street last Tuesday, when he saw two boys on the sidewalk, apparently searching for something. One of the boys remarked just as he reached them,

"Well five dollars is worth hunting after."

So the doctor stopped and, searched awhile. Finally getting tired he said to the boys,

"Have you lost a five dollar bill?"

"No, sir," said they, "but we didn't know but what we could find one."

The doctor sloped.

☞ There is at present quite an excitement in the Baptist churches, growing out of an attempt to publish a new version of the Bible, in which the word IMMERSE is to be substituted for BAPTISE. The Oliver Street Congregation, New York, have called a mass meeting to protest against the proposed change. Many of the most eminent men of that denomination are opposed to the alteration, for after all it would be of no avail—the meaning of all disputed passages requiring to be settled, not by reference to translations, but the original Greek and Hebrew.

"You have broken the Sabbath, Johnny," said a good man to his son. "Yes," said the little sinner, "and mother's long comb, right in three pieces."

From The Literary American

The Saw and the Axe.

Early one spring morning, when the sun had scarcely melted the hoary frost from the brown face of the wrinkled earth, an old axe happened to fall in with a saw. There was "a cutting air,, abroad, that threatened the newly shaved chin with CHAPS!

"Ah! my old blade!" said the Axe, "how goes it with you? I came purposely to see how you do."

"I really feel much obliged to you," said the Saw, "but am sorry to say that my TEETH are very bad. My master has sent for the doctor, who 'twixt you and me and the post, is no better than 'an old file!' I was in the workshop last night, where—"

"Where, no doubt you—SAW a great deal," facetiously interrupted the Axe.

The Saw showed his teeth, in a sort of grin betwixt melancholly and mirth, and resumed—

"Why, I may say so with some truth; and I consider it no more than a duty I owe Mr Carpenter, to do as much as I can, in spite of my teeth, for he is really liberal—in point of BOARD."

"And do you never grow rusty?" asked the Axe.

"Not with OVER work," replied the Saw; "and, indeed, I have always found that constant employment best preserves our polish, which after all, is only artificial."

"You are quite a philosopher."

"Not exactly so; for I sometimes do grow exceedingly HOT, and loose my TEMPER."

"And what says your master?"

"Why, he generously desists awhile, and I soon grow cool again, and then I cut away like a razor through a piece of mottled soap!"

"You are a happy fellow," said the Axe. "How differently am I situated! My master is a 'chopping boy' with a thick block, which is tantamount to saying he is a fat fool; He is very sharp with me sometimes, and when he finds I am inclined to be blunt, he grinds me most cruelly."

"Alas!" cried the Saw; it's the way of the world, my friend; for I have invariably remarked, that the rich always grind the poor for the sake of the 'CHIPS.'

"Bravo!" exclaimed the Axe.

"You see I have not lived in the world all this time without getting a notch or two," said the Saw.

"Nor I either," replied the Axe; "although in obtaining the said notches, I have not only lost my courage, but a portion of my metal, too."

"Well, I never saw," exclaimed his friend, "how you talk! I am sure your teeth do not give you any troub'e, at any rate."

"I ax your pardon, old boy," remonstrated the Axe; "for although I do not complain of my teeth exactly, my CHOPS give me a pretty considerable deal of trouble, I can tell you."

The Saw grinned an approval of the Axe's wit.]

"Peace!" exclaimed the Axe. "Here comes Mr. Carpenter; so "don't show your teeth till you can bite." I believe that is the maxim of a relation of yours."

"Not a relation," said the other; "although they are the words of a WISE OLD SAW?"

A CHILDS IDEA OF A MOUSTACHE.—Our friend N——, one of the best fellows, having taken a long tour over the State, had suffered his unusually fine looking, closely shaven face to be disfigured with a moustache. On his arrival in town he called on a lady and was shown into the parlor. A young imp, the pride of the family, slyly opened the door and peeped in; but on seeing the visitor ran frightened to his mother, crying 'Ma, ma, what's that man got his mouth way up in his hair for?' N——heard the enquiry and made a short call.—[Clev. Herald.

JOKE.—An Irishman went a fishing, and among other things he hauled in, was a large sized turtle. To enjoy the surprise of the servant girl he placed it in her bed room. The next morning, the first that bounced into the breakfast room was Biddy, with the exclamation of—

'Be Jabers, I've got the devil!'

'What devil?' inquired the head of the house, feigning surprise.

'The bull bed-bug that has been ateing the children for the last month.'

I say, my little son, where does the right hand road go?' 'Don't know, sir; 'taint gone nowhere since we lived here.'

☞ "I shall be at home next Saturday night," a young lady remarked to her wavering beau as she let him out of the door. "So shall I," was the reply.

☞ The bill to prevent the sale of Sunday Newspapers was lost in the New York Legislature, on the 9th instant.

☞ A certain irish attorney threatened to prosecute a Dublin printer for inserting the death of a living person. The menace concluded with the remark, that 'no printer should publish a death unless informed of the fact by the party deceased.'

☞ A lady in Chester was asked to join a Division of the Daughters of Temperance. She replied, 'It is unnecessary, as it is my intention to join one of the Sons soon.'

☞ The election of Speaker cost the United Stats about $80,000. The Louisville Democrat says;—That Corn ought to be high when a CORN bears such a price.

☞ An Irishman and a negro were fighting a few days since in Philadelphia, while grasping each other, the Irishman exclaimed:

"You black vagabond, holler enuff! I'll fight till I die."

"So will I!" sung out the negro. "I always does."

Governments are instituted among men to PROTECT their LIBERTY and promote their happiness; whenever it fails to accomplish these ends, it is the duty of the people to alter or abolish it.

This being acknowledged by all as man's inalienable right, wherefore not ALTER or ABOLISH that part which gives man a property in his fellow man—and especially as this was made the pretext for our seperation from and independence of Great Britain—being our inalienable right. Did our forefathers, do we MEAN what was here avowed, or was it the mere hypocritical pretext to rid ourselves of the authority of the British king? If the former, let us conscientiously carry out the sacred principle until all under the government enjoy it. If the falter, then indeed are man's inalienable rights a humbug, and MIGHT alone makes right. The reader, although admitting these principles in the abstract, and although he may be ready to maintain them with his life when called in question so far as HE is concerned, yet may think discretion the better part of valor when another man's rights are jeopardized, forgetting that it is alone upon guaranteeing the equal rights of his fellow man that he can justly and righteously enjoy his own. These rights are the only true basis of republican principles. He who deprives another of his equal right to liberty and the pursuit of happiness is a tyrant; (the great expounder of the Constitution not excepted) and the more contemptible when living under a republican than under a despotic government, as under a republic he adds the despicable character of a hypocrite to that of a despot. He who submits to be thus deprived of his equal rights, we need not add is a slave.

The diffusion of knowledge among men by a free and enlightened public press, has taught them that these rights are based upon the eternal principles of truth and justice, and that if they are the right of any, they are equally the right of all; and hence the excitement which this almost universal knowledge has produced. Liberty or despotism, therefore, must now conquer; which shall it be? Shall we go on hypocritically professing all mens rights equal and inalienable while we practically deny these rights, or shall this be a practical as well as a theoretical republican government? This question is now about to be decided, either Slavery is now to be extended beyond its present bounds and over terrritory now free or it is to be circumscribed within its present limits, and liberty go on progressing until it overspreads the wide earth and all enjoy its inestimable blessings; peace, plenty, and happiness.

This result alone depends on the firm stand which is now made in favor of liberty by those who enjoy and appreciate its blessings. Every man then who has a spark of republcanism in his bosom should give it vent in one universal shout for liberty. This should especipally be the duty of the press; let none shrink from so nobly a cause. With a majority in Congress who are in favor of liberty, and by whose pledges given or implied, they were elected to their seats by the suffrages of those who are in favor of freedom, and whose interest as well as duty coincides with that majority, shall Slavery or Liberty triumph? We shall see.

☞ The Order of the Sons of Temperance organized a society in this place on Tuesday evening.

☞ The attention of the puplic generally, and of the young ladies and their beaux particularly, is requested to the advertisment of Mr Nichols, in another column. The Daguerreotype likenesses taken by Mr. M. are in the best style of the art. As he has become a citizen of our town' and being in feeble health, we trust he will meet with a liberal share of the public patronage.

☞ The attention of the merchants of this and contiguous towns is directed to the card in another column, of Mr. Thomas H. Brown, Importer and Jobber of Hosiery &c. &c., which for Cash can be purchased as low as at any other establishment.—Call and see.

THE SCALPEL.—Is a journal of health, its object the extermination of quackery, consequently the inculcation of correct knowledge in the science of Medicine. As its name implies, it has ever borne a keen edge. we have read No 1 to 7 inclusive and must say that for ability, fearlessness, originality and quaint humor it is unequaled by any work of the day which we have read—indeed, this is but the echo of the press from Maine to California. We would commend it to all persons who would be instructed or amused on the subject.

DEATH FROM INTEMPERANCE.—The Coroner's Jury in the case of Mr. Wilson, whose sudden death at Washington on the night of his marriage, have rendered the following verdict:

"That the deceased was a man of intemperate habits, and had been, for two weeks previous to his death, constantly under the influence of ardent spirits, and on the night preceding the morning of his death he manifested strong symptons of delirium tremens, and while in that state, about 10 o'clock at night, he was married and retired to bed about 11 oclock; that, after he got in bed, he exchanged a few words with his wife and then fell asleep, and was found dead in his bed on Thursday morning about daylight; and the Jury believe, from the evidence, that the deceased came to his death by congestion of the brain and stomach, produced by the habitual use of intoxicating drinks.'

Correspondence of the Tribune.

Washington, April 12.

Mr. Webster's course yesterday, in seperating from nearly all the Nothern Senators as well as his own colleague, and supporting the Compromise Committee to connect the admission of California with a half dozen other propositions, has given great dissatisfaction to his New-England friends who are here, and generally created deep regret. Whether the assurances of Loco-Foco support in all the Free States will be realized, time will alone disclose to him who has been deluded by such promises. I begin to fear, that California will be connected with a worse combination, than any yet proposed—THE NEXT PRESIDENCY—before her Senators and Representatives will be permitted to take their seats in Congress. Mr. Benton yesterday took a bold and fearless stand in support of the right of California, and for it, he is entitled to the gratitude of all those who are in favor of this State's coming into the Union at the earliest possible moment.

New York Justice and New York Sympathy.

From the Tribune.

Since the trial of Prof. Webster was closed a portion of the New-York press has turned with undisguised criticisms on Massachusetts law and her administration of it in her Courts of Justice. They arraign Chief Justice Shaw, the State's Attorney, the Defendant's Counsel, and the Jury, reading them long lessons of advice relative to law, justice, duty, &c. A member of the "New-York Bar" has reviewed the whole case, showing how nicely he could have cleared the accused. Now, all this is very generous, veny kind, inasmuch as it is entirely GRATUITOUS, and as Massachusetts is an ignorant out of-the-way little State she ought to be directed how to administer her own law. To show how superior is Gotham's mode of managing capital trials, as an example to Massachusetts and other unenlightened regions, we subjoin a sketch from the proceedings of yesterday in the New-York Court of Oyer and Terminer in the trial of Charles Crowe for the murder of Wm. White in January last. "The Jury was empannelled, the Government witnesses examined, and one witness for the defense called, when a Juryman informed the Court that one of their number COULD NOT SPEAK A WORD OF ENGLISH OR UNDERSTAND ANYTHING THAT HAD BEEN TESTIFIED TO. The prisoner's counsel declined making any proposition to the Court and Judge Edmonds ordered the proceedings to stand adjourned until to-morrow." The quotation is from a morning paper. The Courts of Justice which manage cases of capital offense so very loosely as to empanel a Jury and proceed half through a trial without knowing whether the Jurymen are deaf and dumb, or what is equivalent, without the power of understanding a word of the trial, should be overhauled by the wise and sympathetic of New-York, and their own Courts reformed before they "cast the first stone at Massachusetts." Who will "take the beam out of his own eye?"

New Postal Enterprise.

COMMUNICATION WITH CALIFORNIA IN TWELVE DAYS!!—We learn by private and reliable information from Washington, that a proposition will be laid, in a few days, before the Senate, emanating from a company of the highest respectability, for running a line of Post Coaches from Independence, Mo., to California, in 24 days, to be expressed in 12 days. The Company only ask of Congress a strip of land one hundred feet in width for the whole distance, with the privilege of purchasing from Government the use of this route for fifteen years, and agree to make the franchise and grants of land contingent upon their having the road in operation within six months, and undertake to place THREE THOUSAND MEN upon the line at once.—[Det. Adv., 6.

☞ Mr. T. J. Campbell, Clerk of the House of Representatives, died at 1 o'clock on Saturday morning last.

☞ The Hon. Henry Clay was born on the 12th day of April 1777, consquently he was 73 years old on the 12th instant.

☞ The recent calamity that has occurred to the family of Professor Webster, has incited their old friends in Boston, to raise for them a handsome donation, as a testimonial of continual friendship.—The widow of the late Dr. Parkman heads the list with $500, which has already reached above $20,000.

☞ Deaths in New York last week 274. Of apoplexy 11: bronchitis 4: consumption 33: dropsy in the head 19: dysentery 10; erysipelas 5: fevers 29: inflam. lungs 22: do bowels 5. Deaths in Phila. 148

ESSEX COUNTY JAIL.—There are at present twenty-five persons (23 men and 2 women (blacks) confined in this Jail, 4 of whose sentences have expired, and are waiting to make some arrangement for the satisfaction of their fines and costs, to be discharged; the remainder are filling out terms of sentence, or have been sent here since the adjournment of the Grand Jury, all for minor offences except one, who is committed on a charge of attempted rape.

MURDER IN WEST JERSEY.—We learn by the Camden Democrat, that an oyster trader between that City and Egg Harbor, was murdered on his return home on Thursday night last. While driving along the road a few miles below the Blue Anchor Tavern, in Camden county, (the night being very dark,) the horses were arrested and himself taken from the wagon, and in the scuffle to get his money, his throat was cut from ear to ear. The body was then thrown in the wagon, and the horses driven into a thicket, where they were discovered, tied to a sapling, the next day.

THE CAPITAL TRIAL IN PROVIDENCE.—In the case of Wm. Hanley before the Supreme Court in Providence, for the murder of his wife, the Jury retired at 4 1-2 o'cleck Wednesday afternoon, and remained together until 11 o'clock at night, when they came in, unable to agree upon a verdict. They stood 8 for conviction to 4 for acquital.

NO MERCY.—The committee of the Goverment Councils of Massachusetts have reported unanimously against the commutation of the sentance of death in the case of Pierson. Webster's case will probably be treated in the same way.

WASHINGTON, Monday, April 8, 1850.

Astronomers expect a return of the great Comet of 1364 and 1556, about this time. Mr. Jenkins of the College at Georgetown, while at sea between Baltimore and Rio, saw a Comet with a curled tail, quite bright, and nearly a degree in length, as visible to the naked eye. Lt. Maury, of the Observatory here places every reliance on the accuracy of Mr. J.

The exports from Philadelphia to foreign ports for the quarter ending April 1, 1850, were $1, 317, 700, of which $1, 195, 019 was in American vessels.

Elections.

PRINCETON.—Indepen't ticket—composed about equally of both parties—elected; only 203 votes polled.

PATERSON.—Parts of several Independent tickets elected.

NEW BRUNSWICK.—Whig ticket elected. Voted to raise $2000 for roads, $1500 for the Poor, and $1500 for schools.

LAWRENCE.—One Whig and one Democrat chosen Freeholders. Church matters were mixed up in the election.

PLAINFIELD.—Whig ticket elected. For Free Schools, $1000.

NOTTINGHAM.—Independent ticket elected. $1800 voted for Public Schools.

ELIZABETHTOWN.—People's ticket chosen. $3000 voted for the Poor, $2000 for Highways, $2000 for Schools.

WEST WINDSOR.—Crater (Democrat) elected Justice over his Whig father-in-law, Jerolem.

RAHWAY.—Gone Democratic.

TRENTON.—The TRUE AMERICAN gives the number of choson Freeholders elected in that county as 10 Whigs to 8 Democrats Trenton, Ewing, Lawrence, Princeton, West Windsor and East Windsor each elected one Whig and one Democratic; Hopewell and Hamilton each electing 2 Whigs, and Nottingham 2 Democrats.

HOPEWELL.—One of the Juscices elected in this town is John Smith. We knew he would be found. For Roads $1400.

BELVIDERE.—Democrat town Officers elected, except the Collector, Mr. Jay. G. W. Clason, Editor of the Warren Journal elected Mayor.

RARITAN.—About half and half.

JERSEY CITY.—Robert Gilchrist was elected Mayor without opposition. Peter D. Vroom has 36 majority over his opponent Grinnell for Alderman. The probabilities are that the Water right ticket is all elected.

RHODE ISLAND.—The result of the late Election is—For Governor, Anthony, (Whig) 3,629; Harris, (Abol.) 761; Scattering, 133. Legislature: Senate Whigs 20; Democrats 12. House Whigs 44; Democrats 25. Whig majority on joint ballot 27.

☞ Franklin H. Elmore accepts the appointment of the Governor of South Carolina to fill the vacancy occasioned by Mr. Calhoun's death.

HANGING—PREVENTIVE OF CRIME.—John Moore put on trial on Wednesday, in New York, for the murder of Daniel Regan, wished to plead guilty, as HE WISHES TO BE HANGED. The Court, on application, have suspended the case till the question of sanity is tested.

The citizens of Albermare Co. Va. met on 1st inst. to consider whether they would appoint Delegates to the Disunion Convention at Nashville. Mr, Van Buren's Ex-Ambassador, Hon. Andrew Stevenson, led the debate in favor of the Convention; Col T. J. Randolph, The opposition. The speaker took 2 1-2 hours, for each side of the argument, and the vote went against the Convention, and for no appointment of Delegates, 282 to 180.

☞ The Journeymen House-Carpenters of Elizabethtown, have resolved, that from and after April 10th. their wages shall be $1. 37 1-2 cents per day.

RIOTERS FOUND GUILTY.—The Jury, at Pittsburg in the puddler and boiler case, found Patrick Mc Dermott, James Bratt, Ann McDermott Eliza Morgan, Margaret Graham, and Catherine Reeves, guilty. Each of the men were sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment, and costs of prosecution. Each of the women to pay a fine of $50, and undergo thirty days' imprisonment in the common jail.

☞ The City of St. Louis has voted to subscribe five hundred thousand dollars to the stock of the Pacific Railroad Company. The vote stood 4, 117 against 305.

PENNSYLVANIA.—The House of Representatives yesterday, by a vote of 54 to 27, pased the bill to prohibit the banks from issuing notes of a less denomination than $5. This bill prohibits all further circulation of relief notes.

DUTCH ENGLISH.—The following amusing account of the examination of a Dutchman in Pennsylvania, we clip from the Pennsylvanian:

Jacob Feltzer, middle aged gentleman Teutonic derivation—his apparel well incrusted with dry mud, and his hat looking like a collapsed steamboat cylinder with the top blown off—was brought up on complaint of a dry-goods man for stealing a piece of corduory valued at $11.

MAYOR—Do you FUSTY English, Feltzer?

PRISONER—Yaw, I talks him foost rate.

M.—Do you know what "steal" means?

P.—Yaw, him is iron what is made hard.

M.—That is one kind of steal, but not what I mean. Do yo understand this—how came you to steal that corduroy?

P.—Because mine preeches was nicks goot; I have nothing fit to go to church.

M.—Does it take thirty yards of stuff to make you a pair of breeches?

P.—Yaw, de schnieder must have some for cabbage, and toder what's left might do for mein frau—ven I get married. Dat will make her a pretty gote.

M—I see you are a man of foresight; but don't you know that this way of geeting breeches and petticoats is against the law?

P.—I nicks cares a tam apout ter law; I was'nt borned upon der Yankee law. I'se a Tutchman.

M.—Have you got any friends that will bail you?

P.—Plenty of friends, and more tan I suppose you will want; dey come and schwear anything. Dey schwear where I was and git me clear.

M.—We don't want them to swear, we want them to give security for your appearance at Court. You confess you stole the corduroy, and there is no occasion for anybody to swear it.

P.—Ah, ah! You find not I tell any lie. Tuchman never do anything vat he "shamed" to tell. Yaw, I did so steal der stuff; but I know where I stole him, and was going off to steal der money for to pay.

CHERRY PECTORAL:

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, CROUP, ASTHMA, WHOOPING-COUGH AND CONSUMPTION.

This truly valuable Remedy for all diseases of the Lungs and Throat, has become the chief reliance of the afflicted as it is the most certain cure known for the above complaints. While it is a powerful remedial agent in the most desperate and almost hopeless cases of Consumption, it is also, in diminished doses, one of the mildest and most agreeable family medicines for common coughs and colds. Read below the opinion of men who are known to the world, and the world respect their opioions.

FROM PROFESSOR HITCHCOCK.

"James C. Ayer—Sir: I have used your 'Cherry Pectoral,' in my own case of deep-seated Bronchitis, and am satisfied from its chemical constitution that it is an admirable compound for the relief of laryngial and bronchial difficulties. If my opinion as to its superior character can be of any service you are at liberty to use it as you think proper.

EDWARD HITCHCOCK. LLD.,
President of Amherst College.

From the "London Lancet."

"Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is one of the most valuable preparations that has fallen under our notice. After a careful examination, we do not hesitate to say we have a large appreciation of its merits and the fullest confidence in its usefulness for coughs and lung complaints."

Dr. Brewster, of Windham Co., Con., sends us the following testimony.—

Dr. J. Ayer—Dear Sir:—I enclose you a certificate from Mrs. Catherine K. Cady, a highly respectable lady of this village, wife of Mr Seth Cady, Deputy Sheriff, Windham Co., Connecticut. The cure in her case was very prompt, and has attracted general attention. W. A. BREWSTER, M. D.

WEST KILLINGLY, Ct., Sept. 28, 1848.

This may certify that I was afflicted with a very severe cough in the winter of '47-8, which threatened to terminate in consumption. I had tried many medicines in vain, and was cured by the use of "AYERS CHERRY PECTORAL,"

CATHERINE K. CADY.

DIRECT EVIDENCE.

Dr.. J. C. Ayer, Lowell—Dear Sir:—Feeling unde, obligations to you for the restoration of my health, I send you a report of my case, which you are at liberty to publish for the benefit of others. Last autumn I took a bad cold, accompanied by a severe cough, and made use of many medicines without obtaining relief. I was obliged to give up business, frequently raised blood, and could get no sleep at night. A friend gave me a botle of your CHERRY PECTORAL the use of which I immediately commonced according to directions. I have just purchased the fifth bottle, and am nearly recovered. I now sleep well, my cough has ceased, and all by the use of your valuable medicine.

E. S. STONE, A. M.
Principal Mt. Hope Seminary.

From Dr. Bryant, Druggist and Postmaster, Chicopee Falls, Mass:—

Dr. J. C. Ayer—Dear Sir:—Enclosed please find remittance for all the CHERRY PECTORAL last sent me. I can unhesitatingly say, that no medicine we sell gives such satisfaction as your's does; nor have I ever seen a med cine which cured so many cases of Cough and Lung Complaints. Our Physicians are using it extensively in their practice, and with the happiest effects. Truly yours,

D. M. BRYANT.

CONDITION POWDERS.

The most Extraordinary medicine in the World for Horses.

It is cheaper, and warranted to possess more active, safe and beneficial properties, than any other for the cure of distemper, coughs, slobbering, preventing founders, fevers, hide bound, swelled legs, humors of the skin, mange, surfeit, obstructed urine, loss of appetite, indigestion, general debility, rough coat, and all impurities of the system, and blood, and want of condition.

The ease and safety with which they are given, renders them an invaluable and convenient medicine and one that should be kept on hand by every Farmer and horse owner. For racing or trotting horses, they are worth the purse, as they strengthen the wind, give an elasticity and fleetness to the motion, and invigorate the whole frame. They have received the acknowledgments of thousands of the best and most celebrated farriers and horsemen, as a safe and superior medicine, and are universally approved and recommended by every one that uses them. For Milch Cows they are indispensible, as they remove all obstructions in the milk veins or passages, and cause an abundance of fine rich milk. ☞ Prepared and sold wholesale and retail, by W. H. COFFINS AT REDUCED PRICES.

THE subscriber would call the attention of the public to his complete assortment of Coffins, where all the different sizes are finished and ready for use at a moments warning; they are made of Mahogony, Black Walnut and Cherry, and finished in every style, so that all can be suited, also a superior style of stained ones, which he offers remarkably low; he has hitherto defered giving his prices, but as he has understood that there is some misrepresentation in regard to his prices, he deems this sufficient excuse to the public for to say that for a large size Black Walnut Coffin including hearse in attendance he has $6, Mahogany $14, Cherry $6, and small ones accordingly, tight case made in coffin style $1,75. By leaving the order with him, the sexton of either of the churches will be seen if required, and all necessary arrangements made without any extra expense.

Arnica LINIMENT

A CERTAIN CURE FOR

RHEUMATISM!

SORE THROAT, BURNS, SCALDS, PAINS IN THE LIMBS, CHEST, SIDE, AND BACK, SPRAINS, BRUISES, CRAMPS, CHILBLAINS, ETC., ETC., ETC.

Price, Twenty-Five Cents.

This newly-invented oleaginous preparation of ARNICA has been, before offering it to the public, satisfactorily tested by several of our most respectable physicians, who were also made acquainted with the ingredients of which it is composed, and the peculiar process of compounding them. So confident is the inventor of its efficacy, that he has authorized every agent—in case it does not prove itself as represented—to take back any part of the bottle and return the full price of it.

The ARNICA LINIMENT will be found more penetrating, and to relieve the most acute pain in less time, than any other external remedy; at the same time it will not irritate the skin or cause it to smart, even if badly broken, as is not unfrequently the case with Burns and Scalds, but will remove the fire and cause the injured part to heal so rapidly as seldom to leave any scar.

Most, if not all, other liniments contain some irritating ingredient, such as pepper, spirits of hartshorn, oil of vitriol, muriatic acid, (spirits of salt,) combined with oil or alcohol, which cause the skin to smart very much, and the second application to be greatly dreaded, particularly by children; and the opinion is generally entertained that the more a liniment causes the flesh to burn and smart, the more good it will do. But this we are convinced is a very great mistake, and results in doing more injury than good: as, for instance, with SPRAINS, BRUISES, BURNS, SCALDS, CHILBLAINS, or any inflammation on or near the surface of the skin. All such exciting embrocations must naturally tend to increase the disease and prolong the cure.

The ARNICA LINIMENT requires neither true nor fictitious testimonials to recommend it, after one trial.

Prepared only by J. R. BURDSALL.

GREAT AMERICAN REMEDY.

Vegetable Dyspepsia Bitters.

TO THE PUBLIC,

DR HUTCHINGS would call the attention of all afflicted with dyspepsia, and the various disorders arising from a diseased stomach, to his remedy therefor. His DYSPEPSIA BITTERS will be found, on trial, to contain every property requisite to restore the disordered stomach to a healthy action; to reproduce the lost appetite of the patient, and do away with the periodical nervous headache and general debility consequent on this afflicting disease. Thousands have tested its efficacy, and thousands more are now under treatment; and not one solitary case of failure has yet been reported to him. This is consolatory, and urges him on in his efforts to relieve poor suffering humanity. He could fill a volume with certificates of those who have been permanently cured; but he conceives the testimony of a few well-known citizens will answer every purpose. The reader will find, on looking over the following testimonials, they are not "got up" for the occasion; but bona fide letters from gentlemen who can be seen at any time at their places of business.

The following Certificate is from M. B. Brady, the Celebrated Daguerreotypist:

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness, I was advised to take Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me. I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia. M. B. BRADY,
No. 205 Broadway, N. Y.

The undersigned was afflicted with the Dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half during a greater portion of which time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself, until he was recommended to try Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, he very soon derived benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well.

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of Hutchings' Bitters for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine.

L. B. WYMAN, 38 Burling Slip.

New York, Sept. 3. 1849.

Dear Sir—My wife having been a great sufferer from dyspepsia, low spirits, palpitation of the heart, and having been cured as I believe by your Bitters, I most cheerfully attest their efficacy: her case was a bad one. In the space of four months she lost her strength and thirty-five pounds of flesh; was compelled to abandon her household affairs; there seemed but little probability of a cure until she began to take your bitters; in one week she was greatly relieved, and in three weeks she was perfectly well, and has since gained thirty pounds. You are at liberty to use this if it will at all further your laudable purpose of circulating this valuable remedy.

With respect, NATHAN SAYRE, No 61 Fourth-st

FROM PETERSON'S MAGAZINE.

The Note of Introduction.

BY J. T. TROWBRIDGE.

"Did I ever tell you about a letter of introduction I had when I first came to Boston?" asked a friend the other day.

"I think not," I replied.

"Well, then, I will," said he, taking his cigar between his fingers, and throwing himself back in his chair with a smile of quiet humor. "I know you write ficticious stories sometimes, which ain't half so good as some I could tell you that are true. To begin, my adventure with a letter of introduction may serve as the foundation of something as good as you have written."

',Very well," said I. "Go on."

"You know Fred H——?"

"Oh, yes, perfectly well."

"That fellow was the only man I knew in Boston, when I first came here," pursued my friend. "In fact, I was a perfect stranger, and was not acquainted with a single lady in the city. You will readily imagine, that, loving ladies as I do, I was the most miserable wretch alive without them. I mentioned the circumstance to Fred, and he very kindly offered to introduce me to some of his female acquaintances. One evening he came to me, and said—

"'Charley, I've promised a lady up at the South End to visit her to-night, and to take you along; but things have happened so that I can't go myself, and I hate to have her disappointed. Suppose you call on her without me?' I'll give you a note of introduction.'

"'What sort of a lady is she?' I asked.

"'A Widow lady——'

"'Ah! very good! How old?'

"'Somewhere between forty and fifty.,

"'Hem! Fred I guess you'd better go yourself—I'm not particular.'

"'But she's got a daughter,' said Fred—'just sixteen, and amazingly pretty.'

"'Has she though?' I cried 'Why didn't you tell me that before? Give me a note, and I'll call on the widow at once.

"Fred hastily wrote a billet of introduction, and put it into my hands, telling me I would meet with a warm reception, he being on the most intimate terms with the lady and her daughter, who were very lively and sociable.

"'How shall I get there?' I asked.

"'Jump into an omnibus,' he replied, 'and tell the driver you want him to take you to Pleasant street, and you'll be there in short notice.'

"I followed Fred's directions, geting into the first omnibus I saw; and was soon rattling along the street. I thought it was a long ride, but I enjoyed it, notwithstanding my impatience to see Mrs. Wood and her bewitching daughter. I wedged myself into one corner of the omnibus, and closing my eyes, began to indulge in a pleasant reverie concerning the fair being I was about to visit.

"I was aroused by the voice of the driver, who put his face down to the pigeon-hole, and sung out—Pleasant street!'

"I looked at my note of introduction, and being at a loss to make out the number of Mrs. Wood's residence, though it might be of service to ask the driver if he knew where she lived. I was happy to learn that he could set me down immediately at her door.

"I rang, and an eldery lady appeared.

"'Is Mrs. Wood in?' I asked, touching my hat politely.

"'That is my name,' said she.

"Bowing again, I presented Fred's letter; upon which she invited me to walk in.

"'Mr. B——,' said she, after glancing at the note, 'I am happy to make your acquantance. Be so good as to take this easy chair.'

"At that moment there entered an old maid, (I can tell old maids at first sight) who looked at me as if I was a savage or a wild animal. I didn't like her appearance from the moment her simpering quizzing countenance showed itself at the door. You can imagine then how completely I was USED UP, when the widow said to me—

"'Mr. B——, permit me to make you acquainted with my daughter.'

"I was shocked, vexed, confused: shocked at finding the sweet maiden of sixteen summers I had imagined to be an old maid of thirty! vexed at the hoax of which I deemed myself the victim, and confused from a complication of embarassing thoughts. I don't think I ever bowed or nodded to Miss Wood until I had looked at her and her mother, alternately, half a dozen times.

"'Your daughter——' I stammered, at length—'hem! Miss Wood, I am pleased to make your acquaintance! Hem!—I believe, Mrs. Wood, you have ANOTHER daughter——'

"'You are mistaken then,' replied the old lady, 'I have two sons, but this is my only daugter.'

"I bit my lips with vexation, and felt fully competent, just at that moment, to devour Fred bodily. However, I thought I might as well be reconciled to the thing, and get out of the scrape as quickly as possible, as to think only of avenging myself on him.

"Having recovered my presence of mind, I began to make myself quite familiar with Miss Wood, and to crack some harmless jokes, when I was interrupted by her mother, who had been occupied for some time in reading and re-reading Fred's letter

"'There must be some mistake here,' she said. 'I don't know Mr. H——.'

"'You don't know Fred H——!' I exclaimed. 'Why, he told me he was intimately acquainted with you and your amiable daughter!'

"'I never heard of him—and I'm sure I never saw him,' persisted the widow. 'When I first glanced at the note, I thought it was from a fried of mine, but now I see my mistake. I take this as a gross insult, sir!'

"'What, ma'am?' I asked.

"'What!' she repeated, indignantly. 'You know, sir, that this is a vile imposition! Read that note if you haven't.'

"I snatched the letter from her hands, and glanced over it hurriedly. It was written in Fred's flippant, witty style, and it contained many allusions to certain jokes he pretended to have cracked with Mrs. Wood. The note was well enough, provided it had been addressed to a familiar acquaintance, bnt to a stranger, as Mrs. Wood declared herself to be, I owned it was extremely insolent. However, I could scarcely believe but that the widow knew Fred. being unwilling to think he would play off such a trick on me intentionally.

"'I can't suppose there is any mistake,' said I—'you mnst know H——. You see, that note is directed to you in Pleasant street. This is Pleasant street, ain't it?'

"'Yes.'

"'And your name is Wood?'

"'Yes.'

"'And this is Boston?'

"'Boston! no!' she exclaimed. 'This is Cambridge.'

"'No!'

"'Yes it is!'

"'But ain't there a Pleasant street in Boston?'

"'Certainly.'

"I laughed outright.

"'This explains it,' said I. 'Not being acquainted in the city, I took the wrong omnibus, and was brought here through my ignorance! I beg your pardon for the intrusion; and as that note don't belong to you. I'll take it, if you please!'

"You may imagine that I was not long in taking leave of my chance acquaintances, and in getting back to Boston. I soon succeeded in finding the real Mrs. Wood, and had a hearty laugh at the adventure with her and her lovely daughter.

"That's all said B——, in conclusion. "You have the incident just as it took place, and if you can't make something of it in your line, I pity you. But my cigar is out. Have the goodness to pass me the matches?"

☞ He who yields himself to vice must inevitably suffer. If the human law does not convict and punish him, moral law, which will have obedience, will follow him to his doom. Every crime is committod for a purpose, with some idea of future personal pleasure; and just as surely as God governs the universe, so surely does a crime, although concealed, destroy happiness of the future. No matter how deeply laid have been the plans of the criminal, or how desperately executed, detection pursues him like a bloodhound, and tracks him to his fate.

☞ One of the greatest advantages of a newspaper in a family of children is a constant stimulus, which the facts and statements it contains, gives to the acquisition of historical, scientific, and geographical knowledge. Who, then, that is a father, will be so penurious, not to say unnatural, as to refuse the tender objects of his affections and responsibility, such an important aid to their advancement?

☞ There is only one thing worse than ignorance, and that is conceit. Of all intractible fools, an overwise man is the worst. You may cause idiots to philosophise—you may coax donkeys to forego thistles—but don't ever think of driving common sense into the head of a conceited person.

TO YOUNG MEN.—Don't rely upon friends. Don't rely upon the good name of your ancestors. Thousands have spent the prime of life in vain hopes of aid from those whom they call friends—and thousands have starved because they had a rich father.—Rely only upon the good name which is made by your own exertions, and know that the best friend you can have is an unconquerable determination, united with decision of charater.

WORKING MEN SHOULD STUDY POLITICS.—I respectfully counsel those whom I address (the workingmen of America,) I counsel you to labor for a clear undestanding of the subjects which agitate the community—to make them your study instead of wasting your leisure in vague, passionate talk about them. The time thrown away by the mass of the people on the rumors of the day, might, if better spent, give them a good acquainiance with the constitution, laws, history, and interests of their country, and thus establish them on those great principles by which particular measures are to be determined. In proportion as the people thus improve themselves, they will cease to be the tools of designing politicians. Their intelligence, not their passions and jealousies, will be addressed by those who seek their votes. They will exercise not a nominal but a real influence in the government and destines of the country, and at the same time will forward their own growth in truth and virtue.

Dr. Channing.

Where merit appears, do justice to it without scruple.

A Wedding Excursion.

The evening the ceremony was performed which made Tim and Rachel a unit, and the company had "liquored" all round, Tim, having previously "talked it up" with Rachel, boldly announced the desperate resolution of starting the next morning on a tour of observation.

"He had always bin tu hum," he said, "and nuthin," and now he was going strait to G——, and afore he come back he would see a steamboat, if there wars any such a thing anyhow."

The village of G—— was about fifty miles distant, lying on the Ohio river, and a journey there from Tim's residence, in those days, was deemed a great undertaking. Some of them thought Tim had taken leave of his senses, or certainly he was not in earnest, but he assured them he was and then next morning, tackled up "old gray," and putting in a supply of pork and beans for the journey, Tim and the now Mrs. Huggins started on their bridal tour. The hopeful pair, without accident, arrived at G—— Just as they were entering the town, it so happened that the steamboat Pennsylvania was rounding in to make a landing, Tim caught sight of her smoke pipes, and, in an ecstacy of wonder and delight, cried out:

"There she comes now, by hokey! Look at her, Rach! Je-ru-sa-LEM! Jest as Squire Stokely said—smokes like a burning foller. She's coming into shore, tu! Jemima, what a creek! furder across than from our house to Shadlow's mill! ain't it Rach? See, they are tying up the varmint with a halter. Wonder if it's skeery, and pulls. Here's a post, let's tie gray and go down tu the critter."

"Thunder! what's that? How it snorts! You better keep away from it, Tim; it mought swaller you down like winkin."

"I ain't afeared," said Tim; "folks are coming off on't now. She's good natured, I reckon, only spirited."

By this time "gray" was made fast, and Tim and Rachel were moving cautiously in the direction of the boat.

"No balking, Rachel, I'm going on to her."

The plank was out, and Tim, followed closely by Rachel, boldly walked up and soon stood alongside the engine.

"See how she sweats—they must have put her through, said Tim. "I say, old hoss," said Tim, addressing the engineer, "move her jints a little, I wants to see how she travels."

"She'll move directly, said the man of steam, "better keep out of her way."

Tim and Rachel now wended their way to the main deck, and so completely were they absorbed with what they saw, tnat they did not observe the preparations making for her departure. At the last warning tap of the bell, Tim thought there must be a meeting somewhere, but had no idea it was anything which concerned him. At length, as Tim afterwards expressed, "she began to breathe hard, and the water began to smash," and Tim, for the first time, observed that they were in the midst of the river.

"Hellow here, old hoss!" screamed Tim; "I say capt'n, what are you about? where are you going tu?"

They were now under full headway, and Tim saw the town, and old gray disappearing like magic.

"Thunder! why don't you hold her in?" roared Tim; she's runing away. What'll I do Oh, Lord, cuss the critter—can't she be broit to?"

A wag, who comprehended poor Tim's predicament observed:

"You are in for it now, my friend; we don't stop again till we get to Orleans."

"I told you to keep away from the blasted varmint, Tim Huggins," screamed Rachel, "now what will become of us?"

Tim was in despair. At this moment the steamer's whistle uttered one of its sharpest notes, and Tim's hair stood on end.

"She's loose, sqaalin' and kickin'!" shrieked Tim. "Oh, Lord, Rachel, we are lost;" and in the absence of the knowledge of a prayer, he tried to repeat a part of the blessing he had heard Deacon Sniveily ask at table.

By this time the captain had heard of poor Tim's misfortune, and kindly ordered the boat to land, and Tim and Rachel once more stood on TERRA FIRMA.—Footing it back with all despatch, they found "old grey" still fast to the post, and not many miutes elapsed before his head was turned homeward, with Tim, and Rachel, who were perfectly satisfied with what they had seon of the world in general, and their experience in steamboating in particular.—[Great West.

PLAINFIELD GAZETTE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Thursday; April 25, 1850.

☞ Mr Albert D. Drake is our authorised agent to receive subscriptions and advertisments.

☞ Every description of job printing promptly executed at this office, cheap for cash.

☞ Died of a fit, in Plainfield N. J. on Tuesday morning Appil 23d. a stranger, apparently about 60 years of age. He came into the place on Monday, the day before his death, he seemed not inclined to talk, but said he was a hatter and worked last in Orange N. J. His name and place of residence could not be ascertained from any paper on his person, the only means of identification were a few papers found on his person marked with a lead pencil, and seemed to be the names of the towns in a line from the Western part of Pennsylvania to New-Jersey, with the distances also marked down, tending to the conclusion that he came from that direction. He was of dark complexion, dark hair and whiskers extending from the ear to the throat, a roman nose; he was dressed in dark Pantaloons, blue mixed satinet vest, with metal buttons, a bottle-green dress coat, much worn; he was 5 feet 6 inches high.

☞ Other papers please copy.

Great Juvenile Concert.

200 Children taught by Prof. Kemmerer will unite in giving a Concert on Tuesday Evening April 30th in the M. E. Church. The pupils will sing 33 different pieces such as Rounds, Duetts, Anthems, &c. also pieces in German, & French. Concert to commence at 7 1-2 o'clock. Admittance 12 1-2 cents.

This will undoubtedly be a rich treat. Those who wish to secure a seat should go early.

☞ We trust our readers will look carefully over our advertising columns; we have many new advertisements which will richly repay an attentive perusal.

☞ Those of our readers who take our paper for the amount of reading matter it contains, will bear with us a short time and we will endeavor to accommodate them. The prosperous state of business which our columns indicate must be our best excuse for its contracted space at the present time, which if continued, will force us to enlarge the size of our paper—Competition is the life of trade.

THE PRESIDENTS—THEIR MEMOIRS AND ADMINISTRATIONS.—This most excellent work should be a familiar book in every family, and should especially be in the hands of every young man in the country. It gives a memoir of the lives of our Presidents together with a history of the political events of their administrations, also the transactions of Congress at each session, &c. &c., being a complete synopsis of the history of our country, collated from the most authentic sources, from the commencement of the government to the present time, containing more valuable information, indispensible to every person who exercises the rights of an American citizen, than can be had in any other form for perhaps ten times the money. (Published by Edward Walker, 114 Fulton-st. N. Y.)

☞ Merchants and others wishing to purchaes Lamps, Chandeliers, Girandoles, Candelebras, &c. &c., would find it to their advantage, before purchasing elsewhere, to examine the extensive assortment of the manufacturer, Mr. James G. Moffet, 156 Fulton-st. N. Y.—Three doors east of Broadway. Mr. M., with all confidence believes himself able to compete with any other manufacturer, in quality or price. See advertisment.

THE MAGAZINES.—GRAHAM is out for May in all the beauty of "a May morning," and the contents are more than usually excellent. The progressive character of its popular editor marks every page, and even the engravings appear more winning than usual. It is an excellent number, and we may expect still greater excellence as soon as the arangements now progressing are completed. The July No., (the first of the new volume,) we are informed will contain a likeness of Jenny Lind, the world renowned vocalist, engraved by an artist of great ability, SARTAIN is also an excellent issue; the embellishments are rich, and the reading matter ranks high in literature. Indeed, we consider this magazine the "Art Union for the million," furnishing as it does such a quantity of the choice work of American artist at a very low rate;-reader won't you subscribe? The June No. will contain, besides other embellishments, a beautiful portrait of the "Swedish Nightingale," accompanied by a biographical notice by Frederika Bremer. One dollar, remitted to the publishers, free of postage, will procure five copies of the June No.

☞ Our acknowledgements are due to Messrs. Dayton, Miller, Benton and Hale, for various Public Documents during the present session of Congress.

THE NEW JERSEY MONUMENT STONE.—The inscription for the New Jersey contribution stone to the National Washington Monument, is thus described by the Newark Advertiser:—

It embraces the Arms of the State encircled with laurel, occupying the centre of an oblong square, under an arch, the whole being enclosed by a wide band, which forms with the arch four compartments. In the upper space or angles shields appear, embedded in military trophies, bearing the names and dates respectively of the two principal battles fought by Washington in this State, viz: "TRENTON, Dec. 26, 1775." MONMOUTH, June 28, 1778." In the lower spaces appear in like inscriptions of the battles of Springfield and Princeton. A panel on the top of the stone contains the figures "1775"—the date of the admission of the state into the Union. The name NEW JERSEY appears in conspicuous letters on the arch over the coat of arms, accompanied with these distinguishing phrases, "ONE OF THE OLD THIRTEEN—THE BATTLE GROUND OF THE REVOLUTION: over which floats the flag of the Union.'

A WATER-PROOF WIFE.—A Clergyman, who, reading to his congregation a chapter in Genesis, found the last sentance to be—'And the Lord gave to Adam a wife.' Turning over two leaves together, he found written, and read in an audible voice—'and she was pitched without and within!' He had unhappily got into the middle of a description of Noah's Ark.

The North Defeated!

In the great struggle of Freedom with Slavery, the North has again bit the dust, and Slavery's triumphs over Freedom are increased by one. In the Senate, on Thursday last, it was decided to refer the California bill, with other questions, to a committee of 13; which means simply this, that no new free state shall be permitted to enter the Union till Freemen from the North consent to strengthen and polish the chains by which man holds his fellow man in bondage, under the flag of freedom!

What an insult it is to California! Clothed in gold and glittering in gems, yet with the brighter jewel and more precious metal of Freedom, she comes and asks admission into the Union. She is refused that admission, on her own merits, but made a mere condition to a compact by which an Institution which she just rejected, shall be re-invigorated and perpetuated!

All of Mr. Benton's propositions, intended to separate the admission of California from other questions, were voted down one after another by majorities of 3 or 4. In almost every instance Cass, Bright, Dickenson, Sturgeon and Whitcomb—all Northern Loco Focos—voting to keep out one free State till Slavery shall forge chains to bind the black population of another in perpetual bondage. The motion made by Mr. Hamlin, of Maine, to keep the admission of California from going to Foote's Committee, was voted down by 25 to 20, and then seeing that all farther opposition was hopeless, the direct question came up, to refer California and other matters to a committe of 13. The following is the vote by which the North caved in to slavery. Look at it, people of all parties at the North, and see that not one Whig of the North wavered while the deed was consumated by the direct votes of the idols of 'Democrasy." It was carried 30 to 22, as follows:

Yeas—Atchison, Badger, Bell, Bortand, BRIGHT, Butler, CASS, Clay, Clemens, Davis (Miss.), DICKINSON, DODGE, (Iowa), DOWNS, Foote, Hunter, JONES, King, Mangum, Mason, Morton, Peerce, Rusk, Sebastian, Soule, Spruence, STURGEON, Turney, Underwood, WHITCOMB, Yulee.

Nays—Baldwin, Benton, Bradbury, Chase, Clarke, Corwin, Davis (Mass.), Dayton, Dodge (Wis.), Douglass, Felch, Greene, Hale, Hamlin, Miller, Norris, Phelps, Seward, Shields, Smith, Walker, Webster.

☞ Nothern Doughfaces, voting for it, in SMALL CAPS.

The North, with even southren senators to stand up for freedom, has succumbed, or rather it has been betrayed by Gen. Cass and the five he carried with him, from the standard of Freedom over to the Pirate flag of slavery. The North, with Benton and other senators, (who, had the question come up singly on the admission of California, would have voted with them, giving 34 or 35 out of sixty for freedom,) has cowed down before the the bullying and bluster of Slavery.

With pistols in their pockets and daggers on their tongues, the champions of slavery have demanded the betrayal of Freedom by its cowardly representatives. If slavery shall blacken the territory of New-Mexico or Utah, now free; if the lash of the whip be ever heard on the quivering flesh of a slave there; the names of those six Nothern renegades, with Gen. Cass at their head, will go down concurrently with the existence of slavery for the execration of the Lovers of freedom justice and truth while there are words to excite the Treason or curse the Traitors.

The New Compromise Committee ---Settlement of the Slavery Question.

The great men of the Senate have laid their heads together and chosen a Select Committee of their number to report a plan of settling the Territorial and Slavery Questions, so as to repress agitation and restore harmony to the National Councils. Now harmony is an excellent thing, when it dont cost too much, and we should be very glad to see the Slavery and Territorial Questions settled. Not that we regard agitation and excitement with such abhorrence as many profess to, for they have important uses.—We agree with Mr. Jefferson that the tempestuous sea of Liberty' (if Liberty's sea MUST be tempestuous) If perferable to the calm of Drspotism.' We like to haxe the country aroused and excited, and stimulated to inquiry and reflection. Hundreds of thousands have been impelled by the gigantic waves of political turmoil which have successively broken over the country to read, inquire, observe, and take a freeman's just interest in pubic affairs, who but for agitation would have gone down to their graves ignorant, careless, and unpatriotic.

We should heartily rejoice, then, that the great Senators had come together resolved to settle the Slavery Questsion, and would exult in their sanguine hopes of success, if we could only feel certain that the would settle it RIGHT. This seems to us an indispensable condition. For, if you but consider it, nothing short of this can truly be deemed a settlement at all. Fix a thing ever so skillfully wrong and it won't STAY fixed; in a little while it will want cobbling and patching over again. Stop ever so cleverly the stone which has rolled half way down a precipice, and you have but arrested its movement for a season; by-and-by a tree falls, a root breaks, or a furious storm starts the subjacent earth, and your rock goes thundering and crashing to the bottom,—'Blessed are the peacemakers,' if you can but be sure that they don't cry 'Peace, peace, when there is no peace.'

—Sixty-six years ago—before the Federal Constitution was formed—the attention of Congress was drawn to the importance of settling the question of Slavery in the Territories of the Union. THOMAS JEFFERSON drafted the first Proviso on the subject, and it was a good one. It read substantially thus:

"No slavery nor invuluntary servitude, (except 'for crime whereof the enslaved shall have been duly convicted) shall EVER exist in the territory 'North-west of the Ohio."

This, you see, went right to the root of the matter. It did not pass at once, the assent of every State being then required to pass an act; but it was renewed in 1787, and ADOPTED by a decided vote. And this short Proviso SETTLED the Slavery Question, with reference to all the vast and fertile region lying between the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, and now forming five great and rapidly growing States. A feeble effort was once made to procure a temporary suspension of this Proviso so far as a portion of the Territory was concerned, but the Country and Congress said No, and the settlement remained undisturbed—and so remains yet. Where is the man who regrets the manner in which the Cougress of 1787 settled the Slavery Question?

We cannot suppress the coeviction that our great men deceive themselves with respect to the strength of the Anti-Slavery feeling among the People—that compromising and settling the main question around a table at Washington and settling it in the Country will turn out to be two very different things However, we will wait and watch resolved to make the best of whatever shall transpire.—[Tribune.

LATER FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE AMERICA.

Since the sailing of the previous steamer Parliament has done little more than voie the supplies and transact other business of a local and uninteresting character.

In additon to the abolition of the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, it is stated that Government have it in contemplation to abolish the Irish Courts of Law, and transfer the whole machinery for governing Ireland to London.

The English coast was visited by a severe hurricane on the 30th of March, causing much destruction of property, and a frightful loss of life. Among other vessels lost was the John R. Skiddy, which was driven ashore on the coast of Wexford, where she was totally wrecked. Capt. Shipley, passengers and crew saved.

The stermer Adelaide, from Dublin to the Mersey * * * * London, was lost near the mouth of the Thames, and every soul, numbering 200, on board, were drowned. The coast is everywhere strewn with portions of vessels that have fallen a prey to the elements.

Advices to the last of Nov have been received from Hobartstown, Van Dieman's land announcing the arrival there of Smith O'Brien and his associates in the Irish Rebellion of 1849. The felons were granted tickets of leave on condition of their engaging that their liberty should not be used as a means to effect their escape. All except O'Brien accepted the boon. He has been sent under surveilance to Maria Island.

The Repeal agitation has been partially revived in Ireland under the auspices of John O'Connell, but there is a lack of irs former spirit.

At Paris, although there is increased excitement and greater bitterness between conflicting parties, the only marked events of the fortnight have been —First, the revolt of one of the Regiments, which the Government has not succeded in quelling. Second, a popular demonstration in a small way against Louis Napoleon, as he passd through the streets.

It is said that the President of the Republic is so deeply in debt that nothing but the possession of the Imperial crown can exticate him, and that he is at present engaged in negotiations with Russia for the purpose of possessing himself of that, to him, now necessary protection.

A recent number of the Roman Observer says, that the return of the Pope to Rome has been defininitely fixed for the 6th inst.

An imperious note has been addressed by the Russian Government to that of Prussia, on the subject of the Schleswig-Halstein dispute.

The note concludes by distinctly intimating the determination of the Emperor to emply decisive measures, if necessary, in support of the Danish side of the controversy.

It is said that negotiations have been opened by the Central Power of Germany with the United States for the purchase af American vessels of war completely equipped for service.

A serious rupture has occurred between the Governments of Prussia and Wurtemburg, in consequence of the tone assumed by the King of the latter country, in opening the Chambers.

The Paris Correspondent of the London Standard of a late date says, that the Government is said to have received dispatches from Germany, which lead to the belief that a collision between Austria and Prussia is almost unavoidable. The language used by both powers is partaking more and more of a hostile character.

Recent advices from Constantinople state that preparations were being made to conduct Kossuth and other Hungarian refugees to Kutotahia, in Asia Minor, where they are to be confined, it is said, five years.

☞ Johnstan, who murdered Van Winkle and wife, in Passaic Co., is to be Judicially murdered on Tuesday next, April 30th.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.—Two men named Boorns, were tried and convicted at the September term, 1819, of the supreme court of Vermont, at Bennington for the murder of Russel Colvin, on the 10th of May 1812. Colvin was the brother-in-law of the two Boorns. He was known as a man of weak mind, and was considered burdensome to the family of the prisoners, who were obliged to support him.—On the day of his disappearance, being in a distant field, where the prisoners were at work, a violent quarrel broke out between them, and one of the prisoners struck him a violent blow on the back of the head with a club, which felled him to the ground. Some suspicions arose that he was murdered, which was increased by finding his hat in the same field a few months afterwards. The suspicions in process of time subsided; but in 1819, one of the neighbors having repeatedly dreamed of the murder, with great minuteness of circumstances, both in regard to his death and the concealment of his remains, the prisoners were vehumently accused, and generally believed guilty of the murder. A strict search being made, the pocket knife of Colvin and a button of his clothes were found in an old open cellar in the same field, and in a hollow stump not many yards from it, were discovered two nails aud a number of bones, believed to be those of a man.—Upon this evidence, together with the deliberate confession of the fact of the murder and concealment of the body in those places, they were convicted and sentenced to die. Application was immediately made to the legislature for a commutation of the sentence of death, to that of perpetual imprisonment, which, as to one of them only, was granted. The confession being now withdrawn and contradicted, and a reward offered for the discovery of the missing man, he was found in New-Jersey, and returned home, just in time to prevent the execution. Ho had fled for fear that they would kill him. The bones found were those of some animal. They had been advised by some misjudging friends, that, as they would certainly be convicted, upon the cumstances proved, their only chance for life, was by commutation of punishment, and that this depended on their making a penitential confession, and thereupon obtaining a recommendation to mercy.

MORE BEGGARS.—We learn from the 'Eco d' Italia that the Sardinian brig Cerge, Capt. Fitto, a few days since brought to our shores 57 Norzonasla beggars, called Catenoni. The 'Eco d' Italia continues strongly its war against these ruffians, and those who encourage this infamous professional begary. The new comers have already gone round the city with false papers. Let the people look out!

CLERICAL JOKE.—At a meeting of the church, the pastor gave out the hymn commencing with 'I love to steal awhile away,' which the chorister commenced singing; but owing to some difficulty in recollecting the tune, could not proceed farther than 'I love to steal,' which he did three or four times in succession, when the clergyman, in order to relieve him from the dilimma, waggishly remarked that it was 'very much to be regretted,' and added, 'let us pray.' TO FARMERS AND DAIRY MEN.

Call and examine ANTHONY & EMERSON'S Patent Double Acting

ROTARY CHURN, at ELIAS C. BEAM'S KITCHEN FURNISHING and Stove Store, 302 Broad.st. Newark, N. J.

The Subscriber has purchased from the Inventor through Letters Patent all his right and interest to the Townships of Newark, Elizabethtown, Orange, Belleville, Westfield, Rahway, Union, Clinton, Plainfield, &c for the manufacturing and vending of this invaluable Patent Double Acting Rotary Churn.

In consequence of the high estimation in which this Churn is held by the large number who have them in use, proprietors have the fullest confidence in its capabilities, and do not hesitate to pronounce it

The Best Churn ever offered to the Public

The Farmers and Dairy-men are part cularly invited to call and examine this machine, and judge of its utility. It combines the following qualities:

1st. It produces butter in less time than any other Churn, making and gathering it from sweet milk in from five to ten minutes, and from cream in less time

2d. It Produces more butter from the same amount of Milk or Cream, than the ordinary method, as it does its work in a more thorough and scientific manner.

3d. It is the simplest, and most convenient Churn invented, involving the True Philosophical Principle of Butter Making

4th. New Milk after being churned is sweet and suitable for family use.

5th. Instead of feeding the Calf with milk direct from the Cow, Churned sweet milk will answer every purpose. By this process the Butter is all profit.

This Machine is offered upon the following Terms:

If the Churn does not (by following the directions) prove as recommendeded, it may be returned and the money refunded. I shall endeavor to keep on hand a full supply of Four different sizes, $3,00. $4,00 $5,00 and $6,00 capable of Churning at one time, 2, 3 1-2, 5 1-2 and 10 Gallons of Milk or Cream: Also will make at short notice any other size required.

All orders addressed to the sumbscriber will be promptly attended to, at Wholesale or Retail, at No 312 Broad Street, Newark, New Jersey, by

CHERRY PECTORAL:

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, CROUP, ASTHMA, WHOOPING-COUGH AND CONSUMPTION.

This truly valuable Remedy for all diseases of the Lungs and Throat, has become the chief reliance of the afflicted as it is the most certain cure known for the above complaints. While it is a powerful remedial agent in the most desperate and almost hopeless cases of Consumption, it is also, in diminished doses, one of the mildest and most agreeable family medicines for common coughs and colds. Read below the opinion of men who are known to the world, and the world respect their opinions.

FROM PROFESSOR HITCHCOCK.

"James C. Ayer—Sir: I have used your 'Cherry Pectoral,' in my own case of deep-seated Bronchitis, and am satisfied from its chemical constitution that it is an admirable compound for the relief of laryngial and bronchial difficulties. If my opinion as to its superior character can be of any service you are at liberty to use it as you think proper.

EDWARD HITCHCOCK. LL.D.,
President of Amherst College.

From the "London Lancet."

"Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is one of the most valuable preparations that has fallen under our notice. After a careful examination, we do not hesitate to say we have a large appreciation of its merits and the fullest confidence in its usefulness for coughs and lung complaints."

Dr. Brewster, of Windham Co., Con., sends us the following testimony.—

Dr. J. Ayer—Dear Sir:—I enclose you a certificate from Mrs. Catherine K. Cady, a highly respectable lady of this village, wife of Mr Seth Cady, Deputy Sheriff, Windham Co., Connecticut. The cure in her case was very prompt, and has attracted general attention. W. A. BREWSTER, M. D.

WEST KILLINGLY, Ct., Sept. 28, 1848.

This may certify that I was afflicted with a very severe cough in the winter of '47-8, which threatened to terminate in consumption. I had tried many medicines in vain, and was cured by the use of "AYERS CHERRY PECTORAL." CATHERINE K. CADY.

DIRECT EVIDENCE.

Dr. J. C. Ayer, Lowell—Dear Sir:—Feeling unde, obligations to you for the restoration of my health, I send you a report of my case, which you are at liberty to publish for the benefit of others. Last autumn I took a bad cold, accompanied by a severe cough, and made use of many medicines without obtaining relief. I was obliged to give up business, frequently raised blood, and could get no sleep at night. A friend gave me a botle of your CHERRY PECTORAL the use of which I immediately commonced according to directions. I have just purchased the fifth bottle, and am nearly recovered. I now sleep well, my cough has ceased, and all by the use of your valuable medicine.

E. S. STONE, A. M.
Principal Mt. Hope Seminary.

From Dr. Bryant, Druggist and Postmaster, Chicopee Falls, Mass:—

Dr. J. C. Ayer—Dear Sir:—Enclosed please find remittance for all the CHERRY PECTORAL last sent me. I can unhesitatingly say, that no medicine we sell gives such satisfaction as your's does; nor have I ever seen a medicine which cured so many cases of Cough and Lung Complaints. Our Physicians are using it extensively in their practice, and with the happiest effects. Truly yours,

D. M. BRYANT.

EQUARIAN
CONDITION POWDERS.
The most Extraordinary medicine in the World for Horses.

It is cheaper, and warranted to possess more active, safe and beneficial properties, than any other for the cure of distemper, coughs, slobbering, preventing founders, fevers, hide bound, swelled legs, humors of the skin, mange, surfeit, obstructed urine, loss of appetite, indigestion, general debility, rough coat, and all impurities of the system, and blood, and want of condition.

The ease and safety with which they are given, renders them an invaluable and convenient medicine and one that should be kept on hand by every Farmer and horse owner. For racing or trotting horses, they are worth the purse, as they strengthen the wind, give an elasticity and fleetness to the motion, and invigorate the whole frame. They have received the acknowledgments of thousands of the best and most celebrated farriers and horsemen, as a safe and superior medicine, and are universally approved and recommended by every one that uses them. For Milch Cows they are indispensible, as they remove all obstructions in the milk veins or passages, and cause an abundauce of fine rich milk. ☞ Prepared and sold wholesale and retail, by W. H. UNDERTAKING.
COFFINS AT REDUCED PRICES.

THE subscriber would call the attention of the public to his complete assortment of Coffins, where all the different sizes are finished and ready for use at a moments warning; they are made of Mahogony, Black Walnut and Cherry, and finished in every style, so that all can be suited, also a superior style of stained ones, which he offers remarkably low; he has hitherto defered giving his prices, but as he has understood that there is some misrepresentation in regard to his prices, he deems this sufficient excuse to the public for to say that for a large size Black Walnut Coffin including hearse in attendance he has $6, Mahogany $14, Cherry $6, and small ones accordingly, tight case made in coffin style $1,75. By leaving the order with him, the sexton of either of the churches will be seen if required, and all necessary arrangements made without any extra expense.

J. W. S. MARTIN, Principal.

HE has given up the idea of Cuba being annexed this fall, consequently he has made up his mind to stay a little longer at his old stand adjoining Webstor & Marsh's store, where he offers a new and splendid assortment of Cabinet Furniture, unequalled in this or any of the neighboring towns for stability or neatness of finish, patterns being all new, and we advise all who wish to be fitted out with such articles as he offers, to make their purchases of him instead of going out of the place, do not forget the minerel and you will get a bargain as sure as the whale swallowed Jonah. Arnica LINIMENT
A CERTAIN CURE FOR RHEUMATISM!
SORE THROAT, BURNS, SCALDS,
PAINS IN THE LIMBS, CHEST, SIDE, AND BACK, SPRAINS, BRUISES, CRAMPS, CHILBLAINS, ETC., ETC., ETC.

Price, Twenty-Five Cents.

This newly-invented oleaginous preparation of ARNICA has been, before offering it to the public, satisfactorily tested by several of our most respectable physicians, who were also made acquainted with the ingredients of which it is composed, and the peculiar process of compounding them. So confident is the inventor of its efficacy, that he has authorized every agent—in case it does not prove itself as represented—to take back any part of the bottle and return the full price of it.

The ARNICA LINIMENT will be found more penetrating, and to relieve the most acute pain in less time, than any other external remedy; at the same time it will not irritate the skin or cause it to smart, even if badly broken, as is not unfrequently the case with Burns and Scalds, but will remove the fire and cause the injured part to heal so rapidly as seldom to leave any scar.

Most, if not all, other liniments contain some irritating ingredient, such as pepper, spirits of hartshorn, oil of vitriol, muriatic acid, (spirits of salt,) combined with oil or alcohol, which cause the skin to smart very much, and the second application to be greatly dreaded, particularly by children; and the opinion is generally entertained that the more a liniment causes the flesh to burn and smart, the more good it will do. But this we are convinced is a very great mistake, and results in doing more injury than good: as, for instance, with SPRAINS, BRUISES, BURNS, SCALDS, CHILBLAINS, or any inflammation on or near the surface of the skin. All such exciting embrocations must naturally tend to increase the disease and prolong the cure.

The ARNICA LINIMENT requires neither true nor fictitious testimonials to recommend it, after one trial.

GREAT AMERICAN REMEDY.

Vegetable Dyspepsia Bitters.

TO THE PUBLIC,

DR HUTCHINGS would call the attention of all afflicted with dyspepsia, and the various disorders arising from a diseased stomach, to his remedy therefor. His DYSPEPSIA BITTERS will be found, on trial, to contain every property requisite to restore the disordered stomach to a healthy action; to reproduce the lost appetite of the patient, and do away with the periodical nervous headache and general debility consequent on this afflicting disease. Thousands have tested its efficacy, and thousands more are now under treatment; and not one solitary case of failure has yet been reported to him. This is consolatory, and urges him on in his efforts to relieve poor suffering humanity. He could fill a volume with certificates of those who have been permanently cured; but he conceives the testimony of a few well-known citizens will answer every purpose. The reader will find, on looking over the following testimonials, they are not "got up" for the occasion; but bona fide letters from gentlemen who can be seen at any time at their places of business.

The following Certificate is from M. B. Brady, the Celebrated Daguerreotypist:

Having been afflicted very severely with Dyspepsia, together with extreme weakness, I was advised to take Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, and have every reason to believe it has perfectly cured me. I have since felt no symptoms of a return of the disease and believe from the effect it had on me that it will cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia. M. B. BRADY,
No. 205 Broadway, N. Y.

From Luther B. Wyman, Esq., late President of the New York Musical Society, now of Brooklyn.

The undersigned was afflicted with the Dyspepsia of the worst form for one year and a half during a greater portion of which time he made use of no remedies, but suffered the disease to take care of itself, until he was recommended to try Hutchings' Dyspepsia Bitters, he very soon derived benefit from the use of a few bottles of this medicine, and now considers himself perfectly well.

The undersigned has every confidence in the efficacy of Hutchings' Bitters for the cure of this troublesome and dangerous complaint, and he has no hesitation in recommending it as a most valuable medicine.
L. B. WYMAN, 33 Burling Slip.

New York, Sept. 3. 1849.

Dear Sir—My wife having been a great sufferer from dyspepsia, low spirits, palpitation of the heart, and having been cured as I believe by your Bitters, I most cheerfully attest their efficacy: her case was a bad one. In the space of four months she lost her strength and thirty-five pounds of flesh; was compelled to abandon her household affairs; there seemed but little probability of a cure until she began to take your bitters; in one week she was greatly relieved, and in three weeks she was perfectly well, and has since gained thirty pounds. You are at liberty to use this if it will at all further your laudable purpose of circulating this valuable remedy.

With respect, NATHAN SAYRE, No 61 Fourth-st

The Berkshire Pig:

AN ELECTIONEERING ANECDOTE.

"The fact is, gentleman," said one of a party who were enjoying themselves in a private room over a glass of wine, and talking politics, there are mighty few who know how the State of Lousiana was carried by the Whigs during the last presidential campaign,"

"How was it?" asked the party.

"Well, I'll tell you,' said the speaker, who had a sly twinkling of humor in his eye. "During the campaign of '48, when the prominent advocates of democracy and whiggery were canvassing the State, one of the distinguishing men of each party met by appointment at a small village, where the people were nearly equally divided in politics. The Democrat spoke after the Whig, and it was the general opinion that the Democrat had carried the day.

"After he had concluded his speech the people were about to disperse, when a tall, raw-boned, ugly looking customer got up on the stand and said,

"'Gentlemen, afore you disperse I want to say a word or two in reply to that last gentleman that talked.'

"At first the crowd commenced hissing and hooting, to put him down, but he wasn't one of the kind to stay put.

"'Fellow citizens,' shouted the stranger, in a stentorian voice, 'I will introduce myself to you as a Kentuckian. [Shouts of hurrah for Kentucky.] They say Rome was once saved by the cacklin' of geese but I dont think the hissin' of any of you here will save Louisiana, or elect old Zack?'

"This speech was received with rounds of applause and shouts of laughter. He had won the crowd over on his side. They perceived at once that he was a character, and they became anxious to hear him.

"'Fellow citizens,' continued the Kentuckian, 'I want a chance, if you will give it to me, to put the gentleman, that last talked to you about Gen. Cass, through a course of sprouts.' [Laughter, and cries of go on.]

"Here the stranger put both hands in his coat pockets, and drew out of one the Cleveland Plaindealer, and out of the other the Nashville Union, and with a sort of serio-comico expression of countenance, said:

"'Fellow citizens,' you musn't be down on me because my talk is like sawed plank in the rough. It is too late now for me to commence planin' my language, though I once had a pretty smart sprinklin' of larnin', but I have always thought when I was young I collapsed a flue, and a right smart chance of it leaked out.

"He then read from the Plaindealer the most strenuous assurances to the Democracy of the North that Gen, Cass was a Wilmot proviso man, and from the Union assurances just as positive that Gen Cass was a pro-slavery man.

"'Now, I am not good at speaking,' continued the Kentuckian, 'but the Michigan's man's position puts me in mind of a little circumstance which happened in my neighborhood in Kentucky, some time ago, which I must tell you. You all remember what a perfect mania prevailed some years ago on the subject of Durham calves, Berkshire pigs, South Down sheep. &c. Well, I had a neighbor by the name of Martin, who was an uncommon clever physician and an importer of fine stock. One day the Doctor stopped to get his horse shod at neighbor Bird's, the blacksmith, who lived about two miles from the Doctor's house. The Doctor commenced talking about his beautiful Berkshire pigs, and told the blacksmith, in a fit of liberty, that he would give him a pig out of the next litter that "Su" had.

"'In the course of two months or such a matter, the Doctor called at the shop and told neighbor Bird that "Su" had a fine litter, and to send and get his pig. So Bird posts his man off with his wifes large willow basket to get the pig. Between Bird's and Martin's, Sam Smith, who was a great quiz, kept a little grocery, and seeing Bob coming post haste on his master's horse, old Tom, with the basket on his he sang out, "Halloo, Bob, where are you going in such a hurry this morning?" "I is gwine to Massa Doctor Martin's to get Massa Tom's Bucpkshur pig, what Massa Doctor promise Massa Tom de las' time he shod he hos,' said the negro as he reined in his animal. "Well, Bob, you must stop as you come back and let me see the pig." "Dat I will Massa Sam; dat I will," and away he went, at the top of "old Tom's" speed. In less than an hour Bob returned with a genuine swine, and alighting at the grocery, he lifted the corver of the basket, and to the astonished gaze of the grocery man, who imagined a Berkshire to be something more than a mere hog exhibited a very beautiful specimen of a jet black pig. An idea struck Sam Smith to play a joke on Bob, and knowing his propensity to imbibe, told him to go in the grocery and get a dram. While Bob was gone, Sam Smith ran round the back of the house and got a little black pup nigh about the same heft, and took the pig out of the basket and put the pup in. When Bob came out and mounted his nag, Sam Smith handed him the basket, and off he went. On arriving at home the blacksmith asked him if he had got the pig. "Yes, massa, and a werry fine pig he be too;" said Bob, lifting up the cover; "black as a coal," when to the utter astonishment of Bob and Bird, there lay a little black curly puppy. "Is that a Berkshire pig?" asked the blacksmith in amazement; "Why it is a pup, not a pig!" "Bless de Lord," said Bob, "he be pig when I put him in de basket, but he change to pup!" "Take him back, sir," said Bird, highly indignant, "and tell Dr. Martin that I don't want to be fooled with his puppies, and if he don't want do give me a Berkshire pig, to say so."

"'Bob started back and naturally enough stopped at the grocery, to relate his mishap to Sam Smith, who heard him out with a countenance expressive of wonder, at the same time doing his best to control his increased desire to burst into fits. "Well, get down Bob," said the grocer, "and take another dram." Bob din't require a second invite, and while he was getting his "bald face," the grocer took the pup from the basket, and put back the pig. "Massa Sam," said Bob, coming out to mount his horse, "I am mighty obfusticated 'bout dis pig. Fust I think him pig, I know he is pig fust, but den I know he is pup too. Arn't you sartin, Massa Sam, he was pig fust?" asked Bob, as he mounted his crittur. "I'll swear to it," replied Smith, and away Bob rode to the doctor's.

"'On arriving at the house, Bob delivered his message, but the doctor seeming somewhat incredulous as to the truth of the story, Bob with a flourish of insulted veracity, opened the lid of the basket when lo, there was the identical pig that he had started with. Bob stood transfixed, and with eyes protruding, and mouth open, remarked, "for God, 'taint no use, Massa, he be pup or pig, jus' as he pleases."'

"The crowd became convulsed with laughter, and gave the Kentuckian three cheers. The fellow was hired to tell the same story in the Democratic parishes, which he did with such powerful effect that the Whigs carried the State."—[Picaune.

Judicial Proceedings in California.

A correspondent of the NEW-ORLEANS DELTA thus describes the remarkably free and easy way in which justice is administered in California:

Sometime in December last, whilst Judge——— was giving his decision upon the admissibility of some evidence, one of the lawyers rose and said: ,Your decision is perfectly ridiculous. You just decided the question the other way."

Judge: I fine you ten dollars, for impertinence.

Counsel: Here is the ten dollars—(at the same time throwing over the gold piece of that donomination, which lodgeged in his honor's bosom, and caused him to unbutton before he could get his fine,)

Some other question soon after arose, and whilst the Judge was giving his decision with becoming gravity, the following scene occurred:

Juror: "Sheriff—(not wishing to interrupt the Judge)—go up to the City Hotel, and bring me down a brandy cock-tail, aud one of the best cigars.

Judge: "Sir hadnt you better wait until I am through?"

Juror: "Certainly, I'll wait; but I'm most confouundedly thirsty."

The juror then turned around to Col. Weller, who was associate counsel for the defence, when the following dialogue ensued:

Juror: "Colonel, dont you know me? I'm from Warren county, Ohio, and was introduced to you two years ago, by Tom Corwin, at the Pearl street Hotel, Cincinnati. I used to associate with gentlemen when home, but HERE they put me on their infernal juries."

Col. W: "Well, we will soon be through with the case, and you will be relieved."

Juror: you used to be countend SOME in the way of a bear-fight, in Ohio; and I hope you will give the lawyers, on the other side, particular h—l—they deserve it."

Col. W: "Oh, no! we get along very peacably. I've just come into the case, and have not yet been able to determine under what LAW we are trying it."

Juror—"Why, the law of COMMON SENSE—the only law worth a d—n anywhere."

In arguing the case before the Jury, one of the counsel for the defense, after speaking of the manner in which California had been acquired, &c. alluded to the vast number of Spanish law-books produced on the other side, and exclaimed—"his eye in fine frenzy rolling"—"Here, sir, upon the virgin soil of California, with the meridian sun of the nineteenth century shining upon us, are we to be governed by authorities printed at Madrid two hundred years ago and recently dug up by some legal antiquarian from the ruins of the spanish Inquisition? Will you, gentleman of the Jury, rococognize this as law?"

Juror—"No sir-ee—not by a d—d sight." It is scarcely neeessary to say that the counsel soon closed, and the defendant gained his suit.

☞ People with the best of spectacles, and as free from opthalmy as the eyes of argus himself, are occasionally deceived in appearances, mistaking "rank" strangers for their most inmate friends. Appearances are deceptive, no question of that. Gov. Briggs, passing down Washington street 'tother day, was hailed by a shop-keeper.

"Hallo! how d'ye do? I say, did you like that ham?"

"Ham," says the polite and even-tempered Governor.

"Ham—? yes, ham—your folks ordered a ham and a quart of our best brandy,"

"Brandy?" says the astonished fountain-head of Massachusetts legislation and temperance.

"Brandy, yes; a ham, a quart of brandy, two nutmegs and a broom; they ordered it, and I sent it up to your house!" said the preserving grocer man.

My house? Why, sir, I don't live in town!"

"Don't live in town?" says the grocer.

"No," says the governor, I ONLY BOARD HERE!"

"Ain't this Mister Brown?" says the grocer, looking wistfully in the governor's face and seizing him by the button.

"My name is Briggs, sir!" replied the head of the State.

"Not Governor Briggs?" grasped the grocer.

"The same at your service, sir," responded that individual.

"Well," echoes the grocer, diving into his store, "I must be a fool, anyhow!"—[Boston Daily Mail.

QUICK IN HER APPLICATION.—"It amazes me that ministers don't write better sermons; I am sick of the dull, prosy affairs," said a lady, in the presence of a parson.

"But it is no easy matter, my good woman, to write good sermons," suggested the minister.

"Yes," rejoined the lady, "but you are so long about it; I could write one in half the time, if I only had the text."

"Oh, if that is all you want," said the parson, „I will furnish that. Take this from Solomon: 'It is better to dwell in a corner of a house-top, than with a brawling woman in a wide house.'"

"Do you mean ME, sir?" inquired the lady, quickly.

"Oh, my good woman," was the grave response; "you will never make a good serwonizer—you are too quick in your APPLICATION."

☞ Why is the letter B like a hot fire? Because it makes oil boil.

The Late Dr. Geo. Parkman.

Dr. George Parkman, of Boston, of whose murder Prof Webster was convicted, was one of our wealthiest citizens. His property is estimated at about half a million. He was in the habit of carrying large sums of money about his person. A gentleman, who once went to him for $1000, tells me that Dr. P. answered him by thrusting out his fore-finger and remarking, "There is just the sum." On examination, the gentleman found that the Doctor had a thousand dollar bill wound round his finger. The Doctor was a large owner of real estate, and had numerous poor tenants, from whom he made his collections himself. He was punctillious in his business habits, but bestowed much charity in an unostentatious way. A politician once stopped him in the street, and asked him to subscribe to a fund for firing a salute in honor of some party victory. "Just step with me around the corner," said the Doctor. Taking him up a dirty alley, through a dark doorway, and up three flights of rickety stairs, the Doctor tapped at a door which was opened by a wretched, pale-faced child. A poor woman, apparently in the last stage of consumption, was sitting propped up in bed, and feebly attempting to sew upon a shirt. There was no fire in the stove, although it was a cold March day. "Now," said the Doctor, turning to the politician, "here is ten dollars; you may either fire it away in powder or give to this poor woman. I won't attempt to bias you." The Doctor darted out of the room and down stairs, leaving the non-plussed politician standing by the bed-side of the invalid. He did not hesitate long as to his disposition of the money. He deposited it in the hands of the sufferer, and departed a wiser man.

Perils of Falsehood.

"When once a concealment or deceit has been practised in matters where all should be fair and open as the day, confidence can never be restored any more than you can restore the white bloom to the grape or plum that you have one pressed in your hand. How true is this, and what a neglected truth by a great portion of mankind. Falsehood is not only one of the most humiliating vices, but sooner or later it is most certain to lead to the most serious crimes. With partners in trade, with partners in life—with friends, with lovers, how important is confidence! How essential that all guile and hypocrisy should be guarded against in the intercourse between such parties! How much misery would be avoided in the history of many lives, had truth and sincerity been their guiding and controlling motives, instead of prevarication and deceit? 'Any vice,' said a parent in our hearing a few days since, 'any vice, at least among the frailties of a milder character, but falsehood. Far better that my child should commit an error or do a wrong and confess it, than escape the penalty, however severe, by falsehood and hypocrisy. Let me know the worst and a remedy may possibly be applied. But keep me in the dark—let me be misled and deceived, and it is impossible to tell at what unprepared hour a crashing blow—an overwhelming exposure—may come.'"—[Ledger.

A WIDOW WORTH HAVING.—Mrs. Marinda Hindes. who has been a subscriber for 20 years to a Greenfield paper without giving the proprietor any trouble about pay, shows herself in the following extract, a most notable dairy woman:—"I have 5 cows, and have sold the past season, 1300 lbs of butter, besides milk, cream and buter for family use. Our family will average eight. I raised seven calves last Spring, and some two of them I got of my neighbors. I have fatted 768 lbs of pork, mostly on sour milk. Now let us leave one of the cows for family use, and set the credit to the other four, say 1300 divided by 4, makes 325 lbs to each cow, the butter averaging 16 1-2 cents, 325 lbs at 16 1-2 cents makes $53,62 to each cow. The seven calves were worth 30, say 25 to four cows; and five hundred of the pork at $6 20; and the 22 dollars for the calves, makes 55, divided by four, leaves 13,75 to each cow; this added to $53,62 will make $67,36 to each cow.

My cows are about middle size, and of the native breed. They have a good pasture in summer and good hay in winter, and that is all, except in winter, I sometimes give old Brindle a few small apples and potatoes, pearings and the like, to make her hold out her milk until some of the others come in. When I see anything in the butter line in your paper that beats the above, I will try again."

Great Invention for Shooting and Capturing Whales.

Capt. Robert Brown, of New London Conn., has invented a mest important improvement for shooting and capturing whales. It is well known that there are some whales found on the coasts of the Pacific that cannot he approached with a harpoon in a boat, and at best the harpooning and lancing of whales is a very dangerous and difficult business, and sometimes on account of the sea, an impossible thing. The idea of firing the harpoon out of gun prepared for that purpose, has been often advanced, and patents have been secured for the purpose. But the construction of the harpoon and the way in which it was attached to the line to be fired off, rendered all former attempts void, for want of accuracy. Capt. Brown has obviated all former difficulties, and his harpoon, with the line attached, can be fired as accurately as a musket ball. The invention is not a theoretical deduction, but has been tried by the hardy and determined Captain, and with great success. He has also made a valuable improvement on the lance, whereby it can be fired out of the same gun which is used for the harpoon, and be directed like the bolt of a Genoa Bow, to strike the monster of the deep in the vital parts. These inventions of Capt. Brown may be termed, "Whaling made successful and easy by a Yankee Captain."

Measures have been taken to secure a patent.

OLD MRS. PARTINGTON.—That venerable old soul, who is always on the look out, thinks that if she was a gal as she 'us-to-was,' she'd see a young man oxtracised before she'd marry him, unless he'd detain from the error of his ways and quit 'swilling liquor.' The old lady is more than half right.

Rochester and Stratford Spiritual (!)--Humbugs.

It is most astonishing with what bold effrontery these humbugs are attempted to be thrust upon the public as a veritable reality, through the instrumentality of certain newspapers, of which the New York Tribune appears to take the lead. That a leading public journal with the ability that the Tribune is acknowledged to possess, should pamper to the ignorance and superstition of a portion of its readers, while upon the other hand it attempts to disabuse them of the effects of this superstition, which similar causes have produced, would appear to us as though superstition and knowledge were jumbled together in the brain of its editor in inextricable confusion.

Is it not a matter of astonishment to all, that at this enlightened era, when such a vast amount of general and scientific knowledge is so generally diffused, in this age of steam presses and magnetic telegraphs, that any, much less than an editor of a leading public journal can be found who would attempt to palm upon mankind these ridiculous stories of communication with departed spirits? That this attempt should be aided by the aforesaid steam presses, by parading with all the pomp and solemnity of a military funeral, the idiosyncrasies of the distempered brain of a few fanatics, in the columns of a leading journal, the fountain from which half a million of souls are said to imbibe their intellectual nourishment, with comments thereon of doubtful signification, which may be interpreted for or against their supposed reality, would appear to us of a most degrading and despicable character, and an insult to the intelligence of the age.

That some old ladies of some rural district in the back woods of the far-off West, whose education at best was but of the most elementary description which such wild regions afforded, should put faith in such "old wives fables," could not be so much wondered at. But that the leading journal of a great commercial city, the centre of learning, of the arts and sciences, where but a partial examination by the conductors of the aforesaid journal, of those mighty results of the ingenuity of the human mind--the steam engine and printing Press--not an iota of which was ever made but by the intervention of the bone and muscle of the human hand, and the agency of matter upon matter—should forever disspate all belief from the mind of spiritual agencies being sufficient to perform the acts which it is said they have performed. That men placed in their position, with such facilities for knowledge to disabuse their minds, should believe in, or not condemn such agencies, is to us as it doubtless is to their readers generally, a matter of most profound astonishment.

We have not space to pursue this subject, of which there is no necessity, but to condemn these agencies whereby they alone are circulated and sustained. We will merely remark, that IF—of which "sorts" we presume the Tribune in its attemps to establish the humbug has long since run out of—these spiritual manifestations have as asserted, and of which the editor of the Tribune does not doubt the evidence, or at last the intelligence and honesty of the party giving it, therefore infers its truth—been able to do the many things which it is asserted they have done, such as shaking the house, moving a table which the strength of man was unable to prevent, throwing pokers, brushes and other material substances, they would also be able to move the steam engine and to set the press in motion upon which the cogitations of the enlightened editor of the aforesaid journal are printed, and likewise to prepare the matter which is contained in its columns with as much reality and a perfect counterpart of the mind of the editor as though it were the veritable Horace Greeley himself; and this can be done to without fire too generate steam, without type to set the matter, without paper to print it upon, all of which can be done at Rochester, at Stratford and at New York simultaneously, with the same facility, if what is asserted be true, as it is now done at New York.

As we hold that the public press should enlighten and free not humbug and enslave mankind, we therefore call upon the editor of the Tribune particularly, as that paper has given more notoriety to these pretended communications than any other paper which we have seen, and therefore has been the main instrument of their existence, to desist, as until such time as the aforesaid pretended spiritual agencies shall have given us as suggested, a fac similie of the New York Tribune published simultaneously at Rochester, Stratford, and New York, or we, as doubtless the public, would be satisfied of its reality if produced at New York alone, without the natural agencies of editor, compositors, pressmen, engineers, fire, steam, &c., throwing in the use of engine, press, type, paper &c, would be sufficient to convince the public that the aid of material agents were not required to produce the effects that are so boldly set forth as having occurred at the above named places, in the manner and form as set forth in the aforesaid journal. If this is demured to we shall hold that the editor prefers to humbug rather than to enlighten mankind.

In connection with this subject we would further remark, that every man, however limited may have been his school education, has that KNOWLEDGE in his own mind, placed there by his contact with the material world around and about him by his own experience, of which it is truly said is the best teacher, which if honestly adhered to will utterly defy all the sophistry of philosophers, kings or priests who ever have or ever may attemt to estabtish their visionary speculations as authority to degrade and enslave him. It has ever been and ever will be but through a departure from the dictates of reason and common sense and a belief in pretended "spiritual communications," dreams and visions, and such "old wives fables," which have been imposed upon him by his fellow man, by those of whow he is equally the peer, but who have through these instrumentalities become the tyranical masters of those whom they should regard as brothers, the self appointed, self anointed vicegerents of God: the lords, priests and kings of the earth. He who would impose on mankind the belief of such agencies must be either a fool or a knave, knowing as every man must by his experience that all things in this world so far as the movement of matter is concerned, is caused by a material agent, and that without such agency neither a chair, a table, a house, a poker, a brush, or any other material substance can be moved any more than a steam engine will act without steam, or types make sentences without a compositor. To argue such a point when the actions of those who profess to believe in them in the daily affairs of life gives the lie to such belief is a superogation. Every man KNOWS from the efforts which he every where sees, produced around him that the laws ofnature a are immutable and eternal. He KNOWS that it is law of nature that fire will burn, water seek its level, that a body heavier than air unless supported therein will fall to the earth; these and ten thousand other things he KNOWS as his existence even for a single day depends on this knowlege, and therefore however strong may be the testimony, and however intelligent and honest the source from which it emanates that may be produced to controvert this knowledge, an adherence to the dictates of reason and common sense will prove its fallacy. With these few hints for the consideration of the public generally, and friend Greeley in particular we dismiss the subject.

From the Trentonian.

Our Declaration to the people of New Jersey.

WHEN in the course of political events, it becomes necessary and proper for a newspaper to pull down the flag of neutrality and run up in its stead the banner of a party, a decent respect for the opinions of its subscribers requires a bold and explicit statement of the causes leading to such a result.

We hold these truths to be self-evident:—that the party now wielding the power and patronage of the National Government have violatod every principle and pledge under which they asked and obtained the confidence of the people. In proof of which let facts be submitted to a patriotic and intelligent people.

General Taylor voluntarily, emphatically declared, and placed that declaration publicly and unequivocally upon record, that in no case, and under no circumstances, wonld he, in the event of his election to the Presidency, allow party fealty to influence appointments to office.

It needs no argument to prove the prompt and unblushing violation of a soldier's word and a soldier's honor in the application of partizan tests by the administration of General Taylor.

General Taylor declared before his election, and reiterated that declaration in his first address to the generous nation that had confided its destinies to his keeping, that honesty and capacity should be the rule of his appointments, and that where these existed no removals thould be made.

General Taylor has since permitted removals to be made, and given as the only ground of such removals, the political preference of the removed.

General Taylor before his election declared that no office holder should be permitted to interfere in the elections of the people, and that such interference should be sufficient cause for instant removal.

General Taylor keeps a regular corps of political pedlars, and partizan pimps and letter-writers quartered upon the treasury of the people, who spend their time and their talents in fulsome flattery of himself and cabinet, and in denouncing and blackening the characters of the leading men of the democratic party.

He has abdicated the government of the nation into the hands of an irresponsible cabal, alike destitute of talent and patriotism, who spend their time in hunting up and allowing old and rejected claims against the government, and in dividing such allowances among themselves.

An administration thus marked by all that is false in principle and infamous in action, deserted by the upright of its own party, and sustained alone by the servility of the paid mercenaries who flatter that they may steal, is totally unworthy of the confidence it has betrayed, and should be made to feel the united indignation of the people whom it misrepresents and misgoverns.

Such being our candid estimate of the party in power, we shall here doff our neutrality, and pledge ourselves from this time forth to use every available weapon recognized in political warfare, for the destruction of the corrupt rulers who now bask in the sunshine of a success conceived in fraud and consummated in shame and disgrace.

In coming to this determination we have consulted with no member of the democratic party whatever, and have sought to make no terms for the countenance or support of that party. We have taken up arms in opposition to Taylor-Cabinet-Whiggery because we believe it has forfeited all claims to the respect and confidence of the nation. Many will choose to misrepresent our motives—some from malice, some from ignorance, and others from the opportunity it will afford to gratiy a natural appetite for slander. We can bear unmoved the opposition of all such, conscious in the rectitude of our intentions, and indifferent to either the enmity or friendship of the creatures we despise.

☞ The performances of the Children at the Concert on Tuesday evening reflect much credit on Professor Kemerer as a Teacher. The concert will be repeated on Friday evening May 10th at the Second Baptist Church, Those who attended on Tuesday evening will of course inform their friends who may not have enjoyed the pleasure then, that it will be necessary to go early to secure a seat.

☞ Those wanting to procure sheet music or musical instruments of any description, will find a superior assortment of either at the musical depot of S. P. Hinds 102 Market-st Newark N. J. See advertisement.

☞ At a banquet given to the employers of a large establishment in New-York city, tho owner of the establishment, in the course of a brief history of his rise and progress as a manufacturer, alluded to his indebtedness to the press as the great medium by which he had made the public acquainted with his business and drawn them to him as customers. He said he regarded the press, in this age of competition, as the great fulcrum upon which the tradesman rested his advertisement, and by that means overturned his adversaries.

Terrible Accidents--Loss of Life.

A portion of the walls of the old Chemical Bank building in Broadway, adjoining the American Museum, fell on Monday morning about 10 o'clock, burying beneath the ruins the following men:

John Trainer, James Hughes, James Hughes, Jr., Charles O'Connor, James Buchanan, John Goulding, Martin Kehern, and John M. Trimble.

All of these persons were, considerably bruised, but not dangerously hurt.

Before the men above named had been extricated, news came that the walls of No. 35 Water street—the United States Bonded Warehouse, adjoining one of the warehouses burnt on Wednesday night—had also fallen in. The report proved but too true.

The employer of the men states that there were eleven at work; but it is generally believed that at the time of the disaster, but nine of these were among the ruins, which were killed.

☞ Our advertising columns furnish a good directory for the stranger to consult who wants to buy goods of the most respectable merchants in the various departments of trade.

The Workingmen of New-Jersey.

It will be remembered by the readers of the Trentonian, prior to the last electiou, and during the sitting of the Legislature of this State, a warm interest was felt by the workingmen in the engrafting of certain principles on the laws of the State—dear to every freeman,—changing the odious distinctions between the poor and the rich, and placing the poor man on an equality, in the enjoyment of civil privileges, with his more fortunate neighbor. The sentiment of the workingmen is as general and deeply felt at this moment as it was at the time referred to, and we think will continue to be so until the measures they ask shall receive an approval. The legislature of New Jersey found no time to consider the reasonable demands of the workingmen. The favored classes of wealth and influence had too many vast projects requiring legislative aid, to allow a few days of candid investigation into the stirring appeals for redress from the insulted and down-trodden of the State. The "property qualification." although a plain and palpable absurdity, held up by the progress of intelligence as a relic of tyranny and selfishness, which no man, who valued his political reputation, dare defend before the tribunals of the people, found advocates and strong adherents in the legislature of last winter The history of the Exemption Bill and the Ten Hour Bill, is a history of fresh insult, in every line, to the workingmen of the State. All the measures so respectfully solicited were treated with contempt by the legislature of New Jersey, the members of which, before the election, were ready and prompt to promise all that we asked! But

"Freedom's battle once begun,
Bequeathed from bleeding sire to son,
Tho' baffled oft is ever won."

The great question raised by the workingmen of New Jersey must be met. They are not for a day, but for all time. Equality in the enjoyment of civil privileges is no new demand on the part of the people. It is as old as the Revolution, and is very much the same principle as that which opposed "Taxation without representation." Exemption from the fangs of the cruel and heartless, and protection in the quiet enjoyment of domestic comforts, is a right which no honest man ought ever to forfeit, and from which no contingency should ever drive him. Let the workingmen prepare for the struggle at the next elections; let them merge all party considerations into an energeric, bold and efficient effort for the Right.

A New Mouth for the Mississippi.

The peoplo of Louisiana are thinking seriously of opening a mouth for the Mississippi into Lake Pontchartrain, back of New Orleans. It is believed that it would relieve the river and its floods, and prevent any such terrible overflows as that of last year. In a commercial point of view the project is also commended. It would open a direct communication with the Gulf and Atlantic States, and render the troublesome, tedious and expensive navigation of the Mississippi useless.

Georgia Burr Versus French Burr Stones.

The Schooner Hartford arrived at this port a few days since from Savannah with a lot of 5 1-2 feet Georgia burr mill stones, to be used in the mills of Hackshall, Bro. & Co., at Richmond City, Va. It may somewhat astonish importers of the French burr to learn the fact, that the South will not only in future quarry their own mill stones, but it will not be a year henco before they will be furnished for all new flouring mills that may be erected in this or the Western States. The Georgia stone, we have been informed by a manufacturer of this city, fully equals the best french; and he says, although he is engaged in the importation of the French burr, that the Georgia stone will inevitably take the place of the French in this country—"[Sci. CRAPE SHAWS, CRAPE SHAWLS,

In all colors and kinds. In these beautiful goods we can exhibit more than can be seen in any ten retail stores in New York, all of which will be offered from $2 to $10 on each Shawl less than they can be purchased for elsewhere.

We have also a beautiful assortment of all the light and suitable descriptions of which will be sold at such prices that will make them serve as cards to the store. We import our own goods; by so doing, we find ourselves greatly advantaged, as we avoid the high prices usually paid by the retailers to the jobbers. Our expenses are based upon the Graham Principles. We have no Broadway expenses to pay, and with a long business experience, together with superior advantages, both in this and the foreign markets, we positively assert that we can give all purchasers a decided better bargain in any kind of rich or plain goods, than they can expect from any other establishment, we mean goods of the same qualities.

We do not approve of Damaged Goods in any form as they are no profit to the buyer or seller, but a great annoyance to both. We are offering perfect goods, cheaper than damaged goods can be bought, for a proof of which, we kindly solicit all purchasers to call and convince themselves. Do not be forced or induced to buy until you have called to see our magnificent assortment.

N. B.—You cannot mistake the store; the goods in each window speak volumes.

TO FARMERS AND DAIRY MEN.

Call and examine ANTHONY & EMERSON'S Patent Double Acting

ROTARY CHURN,

at ELIAS C. BEAM'S KITCHEN FURNISHING and Stove Store, 302 Broad.st. Newark, N. J.

The Subscriber has purchased from the Inventor through Letters Patent all his right and interest to the Townships of Newark, Elizabethtown, Orange, Belleville, Westfield, Rahway, Union, Clinton, Plainfield, &c for the manufacturing and vending of this invaluable Patent Double Acting Rotary Churn.

In consequence of the high estimation in which this Churn is held by the large number who have them in use, proprietors have the fullest confidence in its capabilities, and do not hesitate to pronounce it

The Best Churn ever offered to the Public.

The Farmers and Dairy-men are particularly invited to call and examine this machine, and judge of its utility. It combines the following qualities:

1st. It produces butter in less time than any other Churn, making and gathering it from sweet milk in from five to ten minutes, and from cream in less time

2d. It Produces more butter from the same amount of Milk or Cream, than the ordinary method, as it does its work in a more thorough and scientific manner.

3d. It is the simplest, and most convenient Churn invented, involving the True Philosophical Principle of Butter Making.

4th. New Milk after being churned is sweet and suitable for family use.

5th. Instead of feeding the Calf with milk direct from the Cow, Churned sweet milk will answer every purpose. By this process the Butter is all profit.

This Machine is offered upon the following Terms: If the Churn does not (by following the directions) prove as recommendeded, it may be returned and the money refunded. I shall endeavor to keep on hand a full supply of Four different sizes, $3,00. $4,00. $5,00 and $6,00. capable of Churning at one time, 2, 3 1-2, 5 1-2 and 10 Gallons of Milk or Cream: Also will make at short notice any other size required.

All orders addressed to the sumbscriber will be promptly attended to, at Wholesale or Retail, at No 312 Broad Street, Newark, New Jersey, by

CHERRY PECTORAL:

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, CROUP, ASTHMA, WHOOPING-COUGH AND CONSUMPTION.

This truly valuable Remedy for all diseases of the Lungs and Throat, has become the chief reliance of the afflicted as it is the most certain cure known for the above complaints. While it is a powerful remedial agent in the most desperate and almost hopeless cases of Consumption, it is also, in diminished doses, one of the mildest and most agreeable family medicines for common coughs and colds. Read below the opinion of men who are known to the world, and the world respect their opioions.

FROM PROFESSOR HITCHCOCK.

"James C. Ayer—Sir: I have used your 'Cherry Pectoral,' in my own case of deep-seated Bronchitis, and am satisfied from its chemical constitution that it is an admirable compound for the relief of laryngial and bronchial difficulties. If my opinion as to its superior character can be of any service you are at liberty to use it as you think proper.

EDWARD HITCHCOCK. LLD.,
President of Amherst College.

From the "London Lancet."

"Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is one of the most valuable preparations that has fallen under our notice. After a careful examination, we do not hesitate to say we have a large appreciation of its merits and the fullest confidence in its usefulness for coughs and lung complaints."

Dr. Brewster, of Windham Co., Con., sends us the following testimony.—

Dr. J. Ayer—Dear Sir:—I enclose you a certificate from Mrs. Catherine K. Cady, a highly respectable lady of this village, wife of Mr Seth Cady, Deputy Sheriff, Windham Co., Connecticut. The cure in her case was very prompt, and has attracted general attention. W. A. BREWSTER, M. D.

WEST KILLINGLY, Ct., Sept. 28, 1848.

This may certify that I was afflicted with a very severe cough in the winter of '47-8, which threatened to terminate in consumption. I had tried many medicines in vain, and was cured by the use of "AYERS CHERRY PECTORAL." CATHERINE K. CADY.

DIRECT EVIDENCE.

Dr.. J. C. Ayer, Lowell—Dear Sir:—Feeling unde, obligations to you for the restoration of my health, I send you a report of my case, which you are at liberty to publish for the benefit of others. Last autumn I took a bad cold, accompanied by a severe cough, and made use of many medicines without obtaining relief. I was obliged to give up business, frequently raised blood, and could get no sleep at night. A friend gave me a botle of your CHERRY PECTORAL the use of which I immediately commonced according to directions. I have just purchased the fifth bottle, and am nearly recovered. I now sleep well, my cough has ceased, and all by the use of your valuable medicine.

E. S. STONE, A. M.
Principal Mt. Hope Seminary.

From Dr. Bryant, Druggist and Postmaster, Chicopee Falls, Mass:—

Dr. J. C. Ayer—Dear Sir:—Enclosed please find remittance for all the CHERRY PECTORAL last sent me. I can unhesitatingly say, that no medicine we sell gives such satisfaction as your's does; nor have I ever seen a medicine which cured so many cases of Cough and Lung Complaints. Our Physicians are using it extensively in their practice, and with the happiest effects. Truly yours,

D. M. BRYANT.

PREPARED BY J. C. AYER, CHEMIST. LOWELL MASS.
